Ford found it tough but, pleased with his performance, he looks confidently ahead

By HELEN THOMAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford said Saturday he will act with "skill and success" to make sure decontrol of oil prices and grain sales to the Soviet Union have a minimum impact on prices Americans pay for food and gas.

Ford said he will veto a Democratic bill to extend domestic oil-price controls six months after their scheduled expiration Aug. 31, but insisted his action will not result in a new inflationary surge.

He conceded a veto would mean some minimal higher prices, minimal, but they are not going to force a broad overall increase in the rate of inflation. Ford said the same applies to his overall energy program, "if we ever get Congress to pass it."

Ford made the remarks in an interview with United Press International, Associated Press and Reuters. The session was held in the White House Oval Office on his first anniversary as President.

He took issue with a Library of Congress study that said lifting oil-price ceilings would cost consumers an extra $40 billion in 1976. Noting that he has administrative and legislative options to "mitigate" the impact, he told the reporters:

"You watch. We will handle it with skill and success."

Discussing his first year in office, Ford said the Watergate scandal that forced the resignation of Richard M. Nixon and catapulted Ford into office "just stuns me when I look back and see the things that took place."

The President, displaying some touchiness, again declined to render any judgments on Watergate.

"I think ... as I look in retrospect, obviously I know what happened," he said. "I don't understand why the people who were involved let it happen. That is the thing that really bothers me."

As for the Watergate break-in, he said, "I just don't understand that. That has been a real perplexity to me. It was so unnecessary, so nonessential..."

Ford also was asked about his strong defense of Nixon while the scandal was unraveling. In reply, he said: "Well, I was put on a very difficult spot, but I don't think I should go beyond that."

He said he thought his pardon of Nixon less than a month after taking office "was right then and I am more convinced I was right as we look back on it." He said it "at least took off my desk the nagging things that would have gone on and on and on."

Wearing a gray plaid suit, light blue shirt and a dark blue tie, Ford sat in an upholstered coral wing-back chair by the Oval Office fireplace. Monitoring the 37-minute interview were Press Secretary Ron Nessen and counselor Robert Hartmann.

Told he was regarded as a "middle-of-the-road conservative," Ford said "I like that label."

He denied his campaign committee is weighted to favor the GOP's conservative wing and said: "May I assure you we are not going to give up the middle ground. I don't believe that all of my campaign people are in the right part of the spectrum."

"The Republican candidate is — I should say I, as a Republican candidate, am in the middle and we are going to stay in the middle," he said.

"(The) Republican Party is a broad-spectrum party and the more conservative group makes up part of that spectrum. But they are not the majority."

On foreign policy, Ford said he believes "the middle and those to the left" will support his action in

For poison fume leak

Astronauts share blame

WASHINGTON (AP) — Apollo astronaut Vance Brand took the blame, but Commander Thomas Stafford said all three crewmen must share responsibility for the mishap that let poison gas fumes into their spaceship as they returned to earth July 24.

"I'll take the responsibility," Brand told a news conference Saturday. "The switches should have been turned on and they weren't."

But Stafford said he and Donald K. Slayton also should have known the switches were not flipped at the proper time. He said very bad noise and radio communications in the cabin may have contributed to the error.

Stafford, Brand and Slayton met newsmen for the first time since the flight during which they linked up in space for two days with a Soviet Soyuz carrying two cosmonauts.

After the news conference, President Ford presented distinguished service medals from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to the astronauts and to Dr. Glynn Lunney, U.S.

director of the Apollo-Soyuz project. At the White House luncheon, the spacemen gave Ford a presidential flag they had carried into space.

Ford called the flight a "great triumph of science and technology... an encouraging reminder in an atmosphere of mutual trust and respect that men from different countries, with different systems, can work together for a common goal with courage, intelligence and success."

Japanese premier visits Long Beach

Security tight at ceremonies

By MOLLY BURRELL
Staff Writer

Japanese Prime Minister Takeo Miki visited Long Beach Saturday for a quiet lunch and an honorary award amid the tightest security this town may have ever seen.

The diminutive top man of the tiny island country came to become an honorary port pilot at the Long Beach Harbor Department. In a ceremony there at 2:10 p.m. Mayor Thomas Clark presented him a ship's clock and Harbor Commission president H.E. Ridings warmly greeted him in a salute to "the close and profitable ties between the Port of Long Beach and Japan."

THE short ceremony was in marked contrast to the police-state type security check prelude and the overflow complement of uniformed and plain clothes officers and secret service which surrounded the area.

Security personnel outnumbered the audience about three to one and were spaced from the top of the seven-story harbor building to the perimeters of the parking lot.

Clearly silhouetted against the overcast sky were four helmeted sharpshooters armed with rifles equipped with scopes.

Long Beach police stood side by side with secret service men, and an estimated 50 Los Angeles police and sheriff's deputies were deployed in cars and on foot around the fenced-off area in front of the building.

They even brought in the Los Angeles police department's bomb-sniffing German shepherd, "King," who made the rounds of the hedges and the attache cases inside the fenced area.

News media workers were searched, their cameras inspected, and all were confined behind a fence 50 feet from the ceremony platform.

Reasons for the unusual precautions were not explained, but unofficial sources pointed to a recent attack on the prime minister in Japan and to the estimated 75 demonstrators who lined up on his arrival at L.A. International Airport Friday protesting Japan's whale-fishing policy.

If he was conscious of the security, the 5'4" Miki gave no indication of it. He moved slowly, accompanied by his wife, through the welcoming group around his black limousine and stood relaxed and impassive by the microphone as his translator spoke his thanks

Brush fire halted; evacuees go home

IDYLLWILD (UPI)—Fire fighters halted the advance of a 4,500-acre brush fire burning in the mountains southwest of Palm Springs Saturday, sparing a small town that was evacuated when it was threatened by the flames.

Residents of Anza returned to their homes in the evening, and fire officials expected to gain 100 per cent containment over the flames by dawn today.

The fire broke out Friday morning about a mile south of Lake Hemet near the mountain resort of Idyllwild. It burned out of control through pine trees and thick brush up to 15 feet high on the south slopes of Mt. San Jacinto. A force of 1,000 firemen finally stopped the advance of the flames Saturday with the help of a cloud cover that

Irish violence flares up anew

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Violence erupted Saturday throughout Northern Ireland during Roman Catholic demonstrations against the British policy of imprisoning suspected Irish Republican Army terrorists without trial.

Police reported a 17-year-old Catholic youth killed and scores of civilians and soldiers injured during the demonstrations, which were called on the fourth anniversary of the introduction of internment in Northern Ireland as an anti-terrorist policy.

At least 49 persons were arrested in more than 30 incidents of bombing, shooting, stone-throwing and looting that accompanied rallies in Belfast, Newry, Londonderry, Lurgan and Dungannon.

Police estimated a total of 2,000 persons attended the demonstrations — the first in Northern Ireland in several months.

In Newry, Thomas Crozier of Lurgan was charged with the ambush slaying of Fran O'Toole, lead singer of the Miami Show Band, an Irish musical group. Two other members of the group also were killed in the July 31 ambush and the Ulster Volunteer Force, a militant Protestant organization, has claimed responsibility.

DETROIT — Federal agents Saturday seized the blood-stained car belonging to the son of a reputed Mafia figure. The foster son of missing labor leader James R. Hoffa reportedly borrowed the car the day Hoffa disappeared.

Meanwhile, current Teamsters Union President Frank E. Fitzsimmons said he doesn't know where Hoffa is.

Charles "Chuckie" O'Brien, Hoffa's foster son, told the Detroit Free Press the blood stains found inside the car came from a 40-pound salmon he was delivering to the wife of Teamsters International Vice President Robert Holmes.

The car belonged to Joe Giacalone, son of Anthony "Tony Jack" Giacalone, a reputed Mafia kingpin whom Hoffa was scheduled to meet for lunch July 30, the day he disappeared.

Although the FBI would neither confirm nor deny the report, it was believed FBI agents were analyzing the stains at a state police crime lab.

Young Giacalone's neighbors at a fashionable apartment complex in suburban St. Clair Shores reported four or five FBI agents took the car from the parking lot early Saturday morning. Investigators had asked Giacalone to give up the car voluntarily, but when he flatly refused, agents obtained a federal warrant to impound it.

In a related development, it was reported Saturday that the fallen labor czar met with "Tony Jack" and his son at Hoffa's Lake Orion home July 26 to arrange the luncheon meeting Hoffa was headed for when he disappeared four days later.

The North American Newspaper Alliance, in a copyrighted story, quoted "sources" as saying the Giacalone told Hoffa at the meeting that former Teamster official Anthony "Tony Pro" Provenzano, a reputed figure in the New Jersey underworld, wanted "make peace" with Hoffa, who was known to be plotting a return to control of the mammoth union.

The NANA account said Hoffa

Bride-wanted ad 'sensible investment'

Combined News Services

At 29, Ron Gordon of Palo Alto began to feel a bit out of the action, a Coko drinker in the stotch-and-water world of singles.

Now was the time to get married and start a family. But for someone acutely shy, with few friends to introduce him to girls, the chances of meeting someone he would care about seemed awfully small.

So Gordon took out a newspaper ad. A big one.

"It's not an ad. It's a letter," Gordon, a high school science teacher, said Saturday. "It seemed like a good way to reach out to someone I don't know."

For $650, Gordon bought a half-page in the Palo Alto Times, circulation 44,000. He used the space to reproduce a 2,000-word, hand-printed message "to a girl who's looking for her right guy."

"I know it may sound corny, but to me it's a very personal and private thing," Gordon said a few days after the letter appeared. "Getting married and having a family is the most important thing I'll ever do, so this seemed a reasonable enough investment. Some people spend that much on a tour."

The "author" of the letter is Gordon's unborn son, writing to an unknown mother. Much of it discusses "Dad."

"Mom, you're pretty hard to find. There aren't girls to meet at his job. It's too late now to start joining a lot of clubs or taking a bunch of night classes — and anyway, he's just looking for you. Those computer things? He knows you wouldn't do something like that, because that's a creepy impersonal way to meet...

"He knows how much it means to you to have someone to share things with. Well, he'll like the kinds of things you do. Mom, he even likes the Dodgers — don't be mad at him — he has for over 20 years..."

"When we're born, Mom, you guys could make up a story about how you met — you know, at the zoo, or park, playing tennis, or through friends — and we'll believe you, honest we will."

At the bottom of the ad, Gordon printed his telephone number. He said he's received some calls, but wouldn't say how many.

Donald Reents of Rockford, Ill., who started playing chess only six years ago, has become the U.S. Junior Open chess champion.

Reents, 20, won the event late Friday by edging out Dadi Jonsson, 20, of Iceland. Both players finished the week-long tournament with seven wins each, but Reents was awarded the championship under a scoring system used to break the tie.

Gary Folker, 20, of La Habra, Calif., was awarded third place over Juan Gomez, 16, of Tijuana, also using the tie-breaking points. Each won 6½ games.

Hoboes

The Hardrock Kid, a 70-year-old drifter from Trenton, N.J., was crowned King of the Hoboes Saturday.

A crowd estimated at 15,000 crammed the small north-central Iowa community of Britt for two days to attend the carnival, art show and other activities connected with the colorful Hobo Convention.

The finale came Saturday afternoon when several hundred persons chose John Misen, also known as the Hardrock Kid, from 11 Hobo king candidates. Selected as his queen was a teen-age Iowa girl, Adventurer Jan, who in real life is Jan Denfeld, 17, of Rockwell City.

Jan comes from royal bloodlines as she stole the crown from her mother, Long Looker Mice, also of Rockwell City.

Publisher

John R. "Reg" Murphy, editor of the Atlanta Constitution who was kidnapped for $700,000 ransom in 1974, has been named publisher and editor of the San Francisco Examiner, it was announced Saturday.

Murphy, 41, who has been editor of the Constitution since 1968, takes his new post on Sept. 1, succeeding Charles Gould, who retired earlier this year to become vice president and executive director of the Hearst Foundations.

A writing editor, he authored "The Southern Strategy," which describes the maneuvering of the Nixon administration on civil rights. He has covered every major political party convention and presidential election since 1956 and has traveled to prepare interpretive reports from Europe, the Middle East, the Far East and the People's Republic of China.

9 lawmakers vow to shun pay raises

WASHINGTON (AP) — At least nine House members are planning not to keep the pay raise Congress voted itself last month.

Three of them have refused the benefits of congressional pay raises in the past. The other six are freshmen.

President Ford still must sign the bill granting the raises to House and Senate members, and the actual amount still must be calculated. But the bill puts the congressmen and senators for the first time on a cost-of-living increase basis, which will pay off in October if signed by Ford.

"If the American public has to bite the bullet, then it is only fair that members of the United States House of Representatives should also bite that same bullet," said Rep. Bob Carr, D-Mich., who says he will not keep his raise.

Rep. Charles E. Bennett, D-Fla., says he will return because he was elected at one salary and "nobody in public office, if he can prevent it, should raise their salaries themselves." Bennett rejected the last pay raise, from $35,000 to the current $42,500 in 1969, and did not accept the higher amount until re-elected to the next Congress.

The others who say they will not keep the raises are: Reps. Martha Keys, D-Kan.; Larry Pressler, R-S.D.; Robert J. Cornell, D-Wis.; Floyd J. Fithian, D-Ind.; Andrew J. McGuire, D-N.J.; Andrew Jacobs Jr., D-Ind., and Philip R. Sharp, D-Ind.

The House voted 214 to 213 for the pay raise.

The amount has been calculated by Carr to be as much as $5,858 before taxes and other deductions and by other congressmen to as little as $1,000 after taxes and deductions. The cost-of-living index will be the final arbiter.

Technically, every congressman must accept his full pay raise. The comptroller general of the United States ruled in 1925 that congressmen violate federal law by not accepting their full pay.

However, after receiving his salary they may return any portion to the Treasury.

This is the method most of the nine plan to use to reject their raises. After calculating the difference in take-home pay at the new and old rates, they say they will send personal checks for the difference to the Treasury.

Jacobs has been doing just this for years.

The U.S. Treasury is not the only governmental treasury to benefit from a refusal to keep a full congressional salary. Pressler has been giving 10 percent of his to the South Dakota treasury, saying that congressmen make too much money. He plans to use his raise to pay for programs for his constituents, as does Fithian, who says the raise will be used to pay for a series of town meetings in his district.

Of those who said they would refuse to keep the raise, only Maguire voted for the bill establishing it. He said that was because it also granted raises to top federal judges and bureaucrats, whose pay has been frozen since 1969.

Considered among world's greatest

Composer Shostakovich dies

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Russian composer Dmitri Dmitriyevich Shostakovich died Saturday night in Moscow, it was announced at a performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The announcement was made by Seiji Ozawa, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, to the audience at intermission prior to the performance of Shostakovich's Symphony No. 5.

Ozawa said guest conductor Mstislav Rostropovich received a telephone call from Moscow saying the composer died at 7 p.m. Moscow time.

his first symphony at age 19 and went on to be acclaimed as one of the world's greatest composers. His works brought him under official Kremlin displeasure more than once, but on his 60th birthday he was given the Soviet Union's highest awards.

Pravda, the official Communist Party newspaper, ranked him with Bach, Mozart, Beethoven and Tchaikovsky on that occasion. He was given the prestigious Order of Lenin and the title Hero of Socialist Labor, the first composer so honored.

Shostakovich was born in St. Petersburg (now Leningrad) on Sept. 25, 1906. His mother was a music teacher and his father an engineer. He began studying piano when 9 years old and two years later wrote his first composition.

At the age of 13, he was admitted to the Petrograd Conservatory of Music, where he studied under former pupils of the famous composer Nicholas Andreievich Rimsky-Korsakov.

His first symphony was composed in 1925, the year he was graduated from the conservatory. Shostakovich himself conducted it in Leningrad the following year. It won him international acclaim and has become part of the repertoire of the world's great orchestras.

An accomplished pianist, Shostakovich won second prize at the first International Chopin Competition in Warsaw in 1927. After giving concerts for three years, he devoted himself to his first love — composing — and turned out well over 100 works, ranging from opera to film scores.

His works included 13 symphonies (one of which, the Fourth, was withdrawn in rehearsal), two operas, three ballets, 11 quartets, six concertos, and numerous operettas, oratorios, cantatas, quintets, trios, preludes as well as scores for the theater and films.

Shostakovich's troubles with the government began in the 1930s. The Stalin regime suppressed his 1934 opera, "The Lady Macbeth of Mtsensk," on the ground it was confusing and too difficult for the working class to understand. It was revived and favorably received in 1963.

During this period of criticism, most of his music before 1937 was branded "formalist" and he was assailed for refusing to obey commands for artists to produce "realist works."

He began to toe the cultural line with his Fifth Symphony, subtitled "Creative Reply of a Soviet Artist to Just Criticism."

His stirring Seventh Symphony (The Leningrad) was first played in Leningrad during the Nazi siege in World War II and was broadcast to the world as bombs fell.

Never pardoned, but Hiss can find solace in history

By ELIZABETH WHARTON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Alger Hiss never was pardoned but he must feel vindicated. He can practice law again while Richard M. Nixon, who did most to destroy and jail him 25 years ago, has been driven from government and barred from the courts.

These two men came from different worlds and remain worlds apart — geographically and ideologically. But the brief touching of their lives not only had a profound impact on one another, but affected the course of U.S. history.

Nixon was the son of an unsuccessful Southern California shopkeeper and a mother whose attention, in his youthful years, was devoted largely to his two sickly brothers. He went to public school, Whittier College, and Duke University Law School.

Hiss was the son of a well-to-do Maryland importer who committed suicide when Hiss was an infant. He attended an Eastern preparatory school, Johns Hopkins University and Harvard Law School.

When they met in the House Committee on Un-American Activities in 1948, Hiss was 43, Nixon 35.

Nixon had served in the Navy and been elected to the House in the Republican landslide of 1946.

Hiss had held a number of government posts, mostly in the State Department where he helped plan the United Nations and where his last job had been as secretary general to the 1945 U.N. organizational meeting in San Francisco.

Whittaker Chambers, an ex-Communist-turned-informer, named Hiss among others as members of a Red cell with which he had been involved in the 1930s. What followed became the first of the "Six Crises" Nixon subsequently described in a book by that title.

Twice the committee wanted to accept Hiss' adamant denials and drop the case. Twice Nixon insisted they go ahead.

later with a guilty verdict and a maximum five-year sentence.

Hiss, continuing to protest his innocence, served three years and eight months in the Lewisburg, Penn., penitentiary.

The publicity surrounding the confrontation helped Nixon win a Senate seat in 1950. Two years later he was chosen to be Dwight D. Eisenhower's running mate.

Disbarred for the felony conviction, Hiss earned a living as a salesman for 20 years, continually — and finally successfully — petitioning the government to release some still-secret evidence on which his case was based.

After an unsuccessful try in 1960, Nixon won the presidency in 1968 and was re-elected in 1972 by a huge landslide only to be forced to resign two years later to avoid impeachment for his role in covering up Watergate.

Nixon resigned from the bar during the investigation that precedes disbarment proceedings.

Last week Hiss' right to practice law was restored by the supreme court in his home state of Massachusetts. The court did not consider whether he was guilty or innocent but said continued disbarment would be "a harsh, unforgiving position foreign to our system of reasonable, merciful justice."

Saturday marked the first anniversary of his old adversary's resignation.

Deputies said the child, Ruben Monjo Rodriguez, of 15139 Orange Ave., was injured about 3 p.m. He was rushed to Paramount General Hospital by his parents where he died at 4:20 p.m.

The boy was struck by a car being backed out of the driveway by a friend of the family, deputies said. The driver was not held.

New Billie Sol Estes probe reported

DALLAS (AP) — Ex-convict Billie Sol Estes is the target of a new probe by the Internal Revenue Service to determine if he has millions of dollars concealed in bank trusts and real estate, the Dallas Morning News reported in its Sunday's editions.

Estes made headlines in 1962 when his fertilizer and grain storage empire collapsed, leaving hundreds of creditors owed millions of dollars.

In a copyright story, the News said the IRS is also looking into the affairs of land County, it said.

Estes' parole in 1971 required he does not "engage in any self-employment or promotional type activities without specific prior approval" of the federal parole board.

The $21 million in federal tax liens resulted from income Estes made from nonexistent fertilizer tanks on West Texas farms and from government grain storage contracts.

Estes was known as an agricultural financial wizard until his empire collapsed in the wake of disclosures that its assets were mostly paper. He began serving a 15-year prison sentence in 1965 after his conviction for federal mail fraud and conspiracy to defraud.

Estes' empire ended up in federal bankruptcy court in 1962. More than 400 creditors got nothing when the case was finally closed in 1971. Creditors claimed that Estes owed them $38 million.

The nagging question left behind was where all the money went.

Garden Grove man tells of life as captive

By DICK HOWLAND Staff Writer

The government of Zaire has made little effort to control the Marxist guerrillas who held Stanford student Steven Smith captive for two months, the bearded 22-year-old said Saturday during a "welcome home" celebration at his Garden Grove home.

Smith said the Gombe Stream Research Center in Tanzania, where he was kidnapped May 19, and taken across a lake to a rebel camp in neighboring Zaire, has been closed to white foreigners and is guarded by Tanzanian troops.

The well-known anthropologist Jane Goodall, who has made the Gombe center a key to her study of chimpanzees and other wildlife, is allowed to visit about once a month, and Tanzanian workers still are collecting data.

THE Provisional Revolutionary Party (PRP), one of several guerrilla groups in Zaire trying to overthrow the government of President Mobutu Sese Seko, kidnapped Smith and three women students from the research center on the eastern shore of Lake Tanganyika May 19. Smith was released June 25.

Except for an inconclusive gun battle on Lake Tanganyika during Smith's captivity, the government of Zaire has not concerned itself with the PRP, Smith said.

Since organizing about seven years ago, the PRP has gained power in several villages in remote country, which is very mountainous and thick with vegetation, difficult for government troops to penetrate.

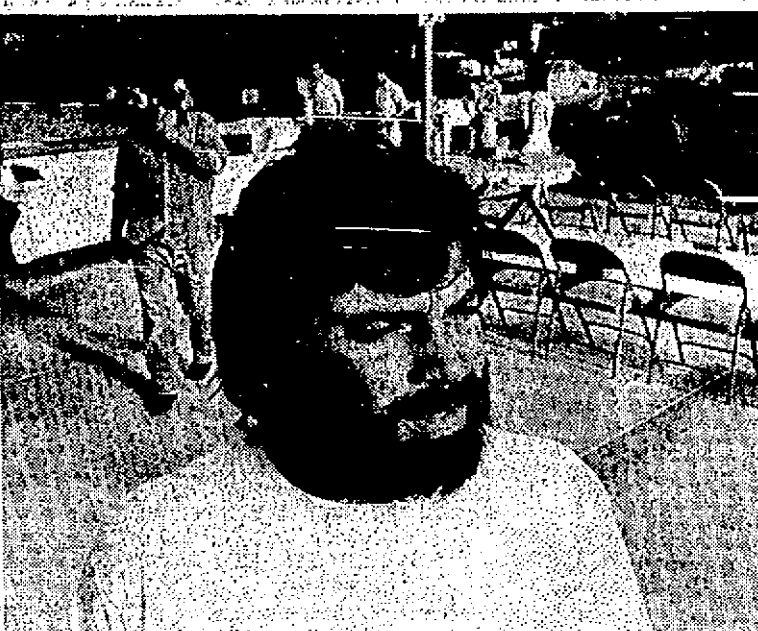

SMITH described the PRP as self-sufficient through its control of the trade of the villages under its rule, and armed with machine guns and M16 rifles.

The leaders of the group are educated and speak French, Smith, who learned French at Garden Grove High School and Swahili at Stanford, was able to communicate with his captors easily.

"They explained their goals to me; saying they wanted to educate their people and raise the standard of living for them," Smith said.

"But the peasants didn't think too politically. I tried to explain the atom bomb to one of the peasants, but I couldn't translate radiation poisoning," he related.

ransom demands for money, weapons, and the release of so-called political prisoners held in Tanzania.

The other two women—Carrie Hunter of Atherton and Emilie Bergmann of The Netherlands—were released June 28, but Smith remained a prisoner for another month until the payment of a ransom, reported to have been about $40,000.

He finally was released July 25 and, after a health checkup at the Institute of Tropical Diseases in London, he arrived at Orange County Airport Monday from San Francisco, where he had visited Stanford friends.

SMITH and the other prisoners were held in an area about the size of a tennis court in a valley which was near a village governed by the PRP. There were two huts in the valley. The captives slept in one hut and three village women cooked meals for them in the second hut.

They were guarded by two armed men 24 hours a day. Smith had two pair of trousers and two shirts, which the village women washed about once a week. The captives were brought pans of water to bathe in about once a week.

Smith said the captives tried to keep busy by playing word games and reading books provided by the PRP. They went to bed early and slept 10 hours a day.

FOR Saturday's welcoming party at the Smith residence, 11381 Jacalene Lane, neighbors obtained a permit to close down the street, which they filled with chairs, tables, and food.

Four families—the Smiths, the Vernon Barkers, the Joseph Thomases, and the Pierre Madaus—have lived on Jacalene Lane for about 20 years and were the nucleus of the celebration, which drew about 80 people.

Steve said he misses the chimps at the Gombe research camp and misses the Gombe Valley's beauty.

"But memories of civilization and home were very important to me during the time I was held, and I'm glad to be back here now," he said.

OC assessor faces ouster

Vallerga found guilty on 6 felony charges

By BOB GEIVET Staff Writer

In the wake of his conviction Friday on six felony counts in a grand jury indictment, Orange County Assessor Jack P. Vallerga may now encounter a legal controversy over removal from office, officials said Saturday.

Vallerga was found guilty late Friday night of grand theft, misappropriation of public funds and conflict of interest, all stemming from sale of an Orange County-developed computer system for appraising residential properties.

ON HEARING the verdict, a stunned Vallerga murmured "Unbelievable. I just can't believe it."

Michael Capizzi, assistant district attorney for Orange County, who prosecuted the assessor in Ventura County Superior Court, where the case was taken on a venue change, held that Vallerga's office will be vacant when he is sentenced Sept. 16 by Judge Robert L. Shaw at Ventura.

However, Attorney Richard Murphy, heading Vallerga's defense, claims that there can be no change in the assessor's official status pending determination of the appeal he intends to file.

Researcher Oretta Sears of the district attorney's office said that, in fact, the law "appears to say" that the assessor's office is vacant "upon conviction." But she said the usual procedure is that the penalty is applied upon sentencing.

Orange County supervisors will name a successor to Vallerga; either for a specific time or until the next election. It is unlikely that there would be a special election for the post.

VALLERGA thus stands to be ousted from his $36,500-a-year post, to which he was appointed in December, 1972 as the former assessor, Andrew J. Hinshaw, prepared to become a congressman.

Besides removal from office, Vallerga faces a possible sentence of up to 10 years in prison and up to $10,000 in fines.

The assessor was elected on his own last year, and thus is in his first four-year term.

He has had 30 years in the assessment field, starting with the State Board of Equalization before joining Orange County as assistant assessor when Hinshaw was appointed the county's assessor in 1965.

Both Vallerga, 53, and Hinshaw, 52, face trial together Sept. 29 on charges stemming from the alleged use of assessor's office employees to work for Hinshaw's first congressional campaign in 1972, and charging the time to the county.

HINSHAW is scheduled to stand trial Aug. 18 on a bribery indictment.

George Upton, 54, who was Vallerga's chief aide, is due for trial Monday on a three-count bribery indictment.

Upton had pleaded guilty last month of a single count of conspiring to charge the county for the assessor's office work to elect Hinshaw to Congress. Seven other present or former employees of the scandal-racked office had admitted their guilt previously; each was fined and put on probation.

Finally, Vallerga faces a five-count misconduct accusation filed by the Orange County Grand Jury, solely aimed at his removal from office upon conviction.

It is likely that this action might never be tried if Vallerga is removed from office as a result of the sentencing in Ventura.

Con men use racial fears to fake bills

The Orange County district attorney's office is looking for a con man—or men—who plays on racial tensions to bill businessmen for nonexistent advertising.

According to Deputy Dist. Atty. C. Brent Swanson of the office's consumer-protection section, the swindlers claim they publish newspapers or advertise in newspapers aimed at blacks and Chicanos.

Swanson said some merchants have paid such bills knowing they did not advertise, were not asked to advertise, and actually had nothing to advertise.

Swanson said the scheme "apparently was hatched by Caucasians."

The Los Angeles County district attorney's office also reportedly is interested in finding the "publishers" and "advertising agencies," who, Swanson said, use names similar to those of existing firms in hopes of fooling company auditors.

A-bomb protesters due in L.B.

About 25 demonstrators who left Los Angeles Saturday on a 35-mile march to commemorate the 1945 Hiroshima and Nagasaki bombing casualties, were expected to reach Long Beach Naval Shipyard today for a rally.

The demonstrators, described by police as orderly, are members of 13 peace, community and religious groups calling for "immediate nuclear disarmament, a reordering of national priorities, amendment of the Bi-bomber program and what was called a "conscientious resistance" to war taxes.

A spokesman said the march, which began at the West Los Angeles Internal Revenue Service office, was "a symbol of the point where our responsibility to end war begins—as taxpayers who finance these unmerciful weapons."

Following a pause at the Rockwell International plant at El Segundo, where the B1 bomber is being built, the marchers continued to Redondo Beach.

The marchers were to cross the Vincent Thomas Bridge today and head into the shipyard for a 1 p.m. rally near the aircraft carrier USS Coral Sea.

L.A. smog unwanted commuter

By RICHARD SALTUS
PALM SPRINGS (AP) — The wealthy may drive 100 miles from Los Angeles to get away from it all, but one urban undesirable — smog — follows them even here.
The brown haze that clouds Los Angeles during the day arrives in this desert resort town as golfers and tennis players are sitting down to a pre-dinner drink.
You can see it come rolling in through San Geronimo Pass — it's like a funnel, said a longtime resident. "When I first came here 20 years ago, we didn't know what smog was."
The resort city of some 20,000 year-round residents is a haven for the wealthy and for entertainment personalities. Frank Sinatra and Bob Hope have homes there, as does Walter Annenberg, former ambassador to Great Britain.

The federal government said last week that many rural areas have serious smog problems caused by a previously underestimated tendency of pollutants to spread out from urban areas.
Recent studies in which smog particles were "tagged" and their wind-blown course tracked by airplane have shown that Los Angeles' smog is a long-distance commuter.
"You used to be able to look across the valley and see the mountains real sharp all the time," said Fred Razzar, director of the Tennis Club and a 12-year Palm Springs resi-

It's 80° and comfortable

A high cloud cover is expected to hang over much of the Southland until about noon today, holding the mercury down to a relatively comfortable 80 degrees for the second consecutive day. Forecasters said the clouds and some early morning fog should dissipate by midday, leaving clear skies over Long Beach and somewhat easing the mid- and upper-80s of earlier in the week.
Forecasters gave no particular significance to the variable cloudiness that held over the Long Beach area Saturday until about 3 p.m., when the thermometer reached 80. The overnight low was forecast for 67 degrees.

dent. "Now, you can count on your fingers the days in the summer when you can see the peaks."
"We don't have as heavy a smog problem as a lot of places, but we have more days of it than almost any place in California," said Herbert E. Toor, leader of an antipollution group, Desert People United.
"We persuaded the oil companies to use Palm Springs as a testing area for methods of controlling gasoline vapor from filling stations," Toor said.

"And," he added, "there are a lot of people like myself who move out to the coast during the summer, to avoid the smog as well as the heat."
"I'll tell you, it's a darn good thing the worst of it is in the summer when we don't have much business anyway," said Razzar, the Tennis Club head. "If it was this bad in the winter, people would be looking for some other place to go."
A spokesman for the city's Convention and Visitors Bureau said, "As far as we've been able to get a feeling for it, people here have accepted what smog there is as a fact of life. Things just aren't the way they used to be 20 years ago and there's not much you can do about it."

Transport chief warns of job cuts

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The new head of the Department of Transportation Saturday said massive cutbacks in the state highway building program could eliminate as many as 20,000 jobs in private industry for varying lengths of time.
Sid McCausland, appointed Friday by Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., said "the severe impact of inflation" doubled construction costs and the state cannot afford more freeway construction, landscaping and related projects.

"Our money doesn't buy enough of those programs to maintain those jobs," McCausland said.
Earlier this week, the cutting back of 3,300 Department of Transportation jobs was announced.
McCausland said that the figure 20,000 was "a ballpark estimate" and that his department was working on more specific numbers.

Elimination of 20,000 jobs does not mean that number of workers will be unemployed. Some of the work is temporary and just will not be available.
McCausland, who replaced Howard Ulrich, a vised over CBS from Santa Monica Civic Auditorium.

Wealthy attorney, wife robbed in L.A. home

Associated Press
Three intruders attacked and robbed a Bel Aire attorney, his wife and mother-in-law early Saturday after forcing their way into the luxurious home, police said.
Officers said the assailants stole a quantity of jewelry and escaped in the family car.
The intruders were waiting at the home of Gary Zimmerman, 38, as he and his wife returned from a party at about 2:30 a.m.
The men brandished guns and forced the couple to let them into the house,

Arms sales reach record of $9 billion

By JOHN W. FINNEY
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Foreign military sales by the United States in the fiscal year ending June 30 reached a record $9 billion, with nearly half going to three Persian Gulf States.

Defense Department figures show sales to 72 countries, the bulk in Europe and the Persian Gulf.

The total was not expected, the Defense Department says. After a new high of $7 billion reached in fiscal 1974, largely because of substantial orders from Iran and Israel, the Pentagon had foreseen sales leveling off or even decreasing.

The situation changed with a decision last spring by Belgium, Denmark, the Netherlands and Norway to purchase the F16 fighter developed for the Air Force by General Dynamics. The cost will exceed $2 billion.

While no firm orders for the F16s have been placed, the Defense Department decided to include agreements on them in its sales total for the 1975 fiscal year.

At the same time the department, in the face of congressional criticism, that it was indiscriminately pushing sales abroad, provided a breakdown designed to show that not all of the sales involved arms and ammunition.

Of the firm orders placed, the breakdown showed 44.4 per cent for weapons and ammunition. Spare parts, largely for weapons, accounted for 23.2 per cent; 12.4 per cent was for such support equipment as cargo aircraft, barges, trucks communications equipment; and 20 per cent was for such support services as construction, supply and technical training.

The breakdown is part of a new case being advanced by Defense Department officials in support of military sales. Their contention is that while all are ostensibly for military purposes, some can have an indirect economic benefit by promoting development.

Large orders were placed by Iran, with $5 billion and Kuwait, with $368 million. Other big buyers were Saudi Arabia, $1.4 billion; Australia, $157 million; Canada, $101 million; Taiwan, $104 million; West Germany $283 million; Greece, $135 million; Israel, $868 million; and South Korea, $218 million.

All the rest were considerably lower than $100 million.

With the easing of congressional restrictions on the sale of sophisticated weapons to Latin-American countries, the United States has been returning to its role as supplier. The Defense Department listed $137 million in sales to 18 Latin-American countries.

SS benefits 40 years old

WASHINGTON (AP) — Forty years ago this week the Social Security Act became law, offering financial protection for the first time to millions of aged, jobless and impoverished Americans.

The debate over the sweeping social-welfare program, a cornerstone of President Franklin D. Roosevelt's New Deal, still rages.

In signing the act into law on Aug. 14, 1935, Roosevelt said that for the first time it promised some security against startling industrialization changes.

The nation was in the midst of the Great Depression and 11 million persons were out of work.

"Young people had come to wonder what would be their lot when they came to old age. The man with a job has wondered how long the job would last," Roosevelt said.

"We can never insure 100 per cent of the population against 100 per cent of the hazards and vicissitudes of life," Roosevelt said.

"But we have tried to frame a law which will give some measure of protection to the average citizen and to his family against the loss of a job and against poverty."

stricken old age."

The Social Security Act established the federal-state unemployment insurance system, Social Security pensions for retired workers, child welfare, maternal and child health programs and benefits for crippled children and the blind. All of the programs have been expanded over the years.

In Social Security, for example, the 255,000 beneficiaries who began drawing benefits in 1940 have swelled to 31.1 million retired workers, disabled adults, widows and minor children.

The child welfare program, which later became the Aid to Families With Dependent Children program, now provides about $8 billion in cash benefits each year to more than 11 million poor adults and children.

About 50 of the charter Social Security beneficiaries are still alive, the government said. The oldest is Charlie Smith of Lakeland, Fla., a former slave who celebrated his 134th birthday last July 4.

The Medicare program for Social Security beneficiaries was added in 1965 and now covers 23.6 million persons for hospital care and 21.2 million for physicians' care.

Number of small firms at record high in '74

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The number of small businesses operating in the United States reached an all-time high last year, but at the same time the number of small business failures during 1974 increased by 6 per cent.

According to statistics released by the Small Business Administration Saturday, the recessionary impact of the energy shortage coupled with low consumer demand forced 38 of every 10,000 small businesses to fold last year, the highest annual percentage of failures since 1968.

The construction industry was the hardest hit, with a 30 per cent increase in closings over 1973. Business service firms were second, suffering a 27 per cent increase in failures.

The SBA said the high failure rate was due in large part to the energy crunch, low consumer buying power, a limited availability of credit and the high cost of labor.

Incorporations, another significant indicator of small business growth, also dipped last year from a record high in 1973 of 329,358 to 319,149 in 1974, it said. Regionally, the highly industrialized East and sections of the Midwest showed the largest incorporation declines.

Kelley: U.S. must give up some liberties

MONTREAL (AP) — FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley Saturday said Americans must sacrifice "a small measure of our liberties to preserve the great bulk of them" because of a growing threat to national security.

"Kelley," addressing a luncheon audience at the American Bar Association's annual meeting, added that "if investigative agencies charged with national security responsibilities are so fettered as to be ineffective, then we shall surely finish last in the world arena."

A LEADING figure in last year's congressional impeachment proceedings against former President Richard M. Nixon quickly challenged Kelley, saying his concept represents "the philosophy of Watergate."

Albert E. Jenner, former minority counsel to the House Judiciary Committee's impeachment panel, said, "Obviously to Mr. Kelley the ends justify the means irrespective of what the Constitution of this country guarantees. This was the philosophy of Watergate, the cover-up and abuses of powers..."

Kelley's speech and Jenner's rejoinder came one year to the day after Nixon left the office of the presidency.

Watergate Special Prosecutor Leon M. Jaworski, who is also attending the convention, declined to comment on Kelley's talk, saying he wanted to study the text.

KELLEY SAID that because the FBI has been accused of "engaging in mail openings, promiscuity in using wiretaps, committing burglaries and a general disregard for individual rights," he fears new guidelines will interfere with the agency's national security function.

"I feel strongly that the emphasis should not be a negative one with an obsession for restraints," he said. "Instead, we should be concerned with the development of the capabilities needed to bring about success in the field of national security."

He added that not only the number of persons "engaged in activities antagonistic to our country... increased in the past few years, but their proficiency has greatly increased." He did not make clear in his speech if the threat was internal or from abroad, but he said later he was referring, in part, to increased Soviet intelligence in the United States.

KELLEY SAID the FBI has made mistakes, but "today, after 35 years of hot and cold war, development of sophisticated intelligence programs, emergence of our world leadership role and responsibilities never before contemplated, we are compelled to undergo the first serious examinations of what techniques are essential to preserve our country."

ALBERT JENNER
"Just Like Watergate"

Jenner, who did not attend the luncheon but later studied a transcript of the address, said, "I see nothing in this speech where Mr. Kelley defines what was the national security; but what I do see is that Mr. Kelley is seeking license for FBI activity."

HE ADDED, "The impeachment investigation and actions of the House Judiciary Committee clearly established that there must be intervention by the courts with respect to warrantless searches, wiretaps and invasions of homes and offices."

Jenner said Kelley wants the FBI to have the right to judge "what is in the so-called national interest and under this guise use whatever methods, regardless of the Constitution, I absolutely disagree with his statement that we must give up some rights in the interests of national security, because when you surrender even a small measure of your liberties you then accept the inevitable destruction of what remains."

In 1960 death plot Lumumba CIA target?

By JOSEPH VOLZ
Knight News Service
WASHINGTON — The Senate Intelligence Committee is investigating allegations that the CIA considered assassinating Patrice Lumumba of the Congo by giving him a deadly virus, it was learned Saturday.

CIA officials have sought to downgrade reports of agency involvement in the 1960 plan, which was never put into effect.

David Belin, executive director of the Rockefeller Commission, who wrote up a still-secret CIA assassination report, did not include the Lumumba case, according to one source, "because there wasn't any evidence of domestic activity."

However, Senate probes are taking a different view, and a source close to the committee said the "Lumumba matter definitely will be included in the report."

African agents were to have used the virus in such a way as to make the slaying look accidental.

Although there is no indication that high government officials, including the "40 Committee" which rules on CIA covert action, ever approved the plan, it became academic when Lumumba — fired as Congolese premier in 1960 — was murdered the next year, reportedly by tribesmen as he tried to escape captivity. A United Nations commission said later, however, that Lumumba was killed, probably in the presence of Katanga President Moise Tshombe.

A major battle of influence between the Communist and anti-Communist forces was being fought at the time, and U.S. analysts contended Lumumba was being heavily supported by the Soviets. The CIA played an active role in attempting to overthrow Lumumba and fought a secret war using Cuban pilots to fly bomber raids.

Richard Bissell, CIA official in charge of clandestine services worldwide, supervised several abortive plots against Cuban Premier Fidel Castro. Now a Connecticut businessman, he refused to discuss what he knows about the Lumumba affair.

A recent published report, quoting Bissell, linked former CIA Director Allen Dulles with the Castro plots. Bissell called the story unfair because he said he thought he was speaking only for background.

The Senate Intelligence Committee wraps up its hearings on assassination plots Tuesday when it calls Secretary of State Henry Kissinger in to discuss what he knows about CIA involvement in Chilean affairs and in plots to overthrow Marxist President Salvador Allende.

The allegations about

PATRICE LUMUMBA
Death probed

Lumumba will be included in an interim report, being drafted now, although the full committee has not heard any testimony on the subject.

SEC bares illegal Ashland contributions of $1.1 million

By EVANS WITT
WASHINGTON (AP) — Ashland Oil Inc. doled out more than $1.1 million in illegal campaign contributions in this country and in payments to foreign officials, including $150,000 to the president of Gabon, it was disclosed Saturday.

The campaigns of current members of the U.S. Senate and House as well as former President Richard Nixon and many Kentucky politicians received part of the $724,000 in illegal political donations admitted by the company in documents filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

THIS FILING was the first time the SEC forced a corporation to identify the recipients of such contributions and payments. Corporations are prohibited from contributing to federal campaigns.

Ashland said it paid Albert Bernard Bongo, president of Gabon, where it has oil drilling rights, $150,000 and also paid two other officials $52,000.

Officials in Libya, Nigeria and the Dominican Republic received other Ashland payments, including about $2,500 spent on the wedding of Omar Shali, a Libyan national who was an adviser to King Idris.

Among American politicians receiving illegal contributions from the company was former Rep. Michael J. Kirwan, a Democrat from Ohio, who got $80,000.

REP. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., received $50,000 that the Ashland documents indicated Mills was going to donate to other Democratic candidates.

Among present and former senators, the late Allen J. Ellender, a Louisiana Democrat, received $10,000 in 1969 and another $10,000 shortly before his death in 1972.

Other Senate candidates, all now incumbents, who received funds included Indiana Democrats Vance Hartke, $3,500, and Birch Bayh, $3,000, both in 1968; Milton Young, R-N.D., $3,500, also in 1968; Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., three contributions totaling $8,000 in 1970; and James Eastland, D-Miss., Carl Curtis, R-Neb., John Sparkman, D-Ala., and J.

Bennett Johnston, D-La., $5,000 each in 1972.

THE contributions were often given in the name of individual company officers which did not explicitly indicate the actual source of the funds.

Contributions also were made in those years to a number of losing Senate candidates as well as for several gubernatorial campaigns.

Mills issued a statement in Little Rock saying he was not aware the money came from corporate funds. Attached to the statement was a telegram he said he received Saturday from Orin E. Atkins, Ashland chairman and chief executive officer, which said: "We pointed out that the fault lies with Ashland and not with the recipient."

In Doddsville, Miss., Eastland also said he was not aware of any contribution from Ashland and added: "I have never knowingly talked (about contributions) with any representative or officer of Ashland Oil."

JOHNSTON said he, too, was not aware the money came from Ashland. He said he learned the source of the funds several months ago but has no intention of repaying the money.

Ads for lawyers seen; could mean lower fees

MONTREAL (AP) — Bans on professional advertising by lawyers inevitably must be eased and that could mean lower fees for some legal services, U.S. lawyers said Saturday.

Effects of recent court decisions and growing public opposition to the traditional bar sanctions on advertising are topics of discussion at the American Bar Association's annual meeting here.

Some lawyers say the bar should tackle the issue now and insure there are safeguards against unfair, inaccurate and undignified advertising.

"If the bar doesn't redraw its sanctions, then litigation will," said Robert J. Connerton of the National Consumer Center for Legal Services in Washington.

Any advertising that contains fee information and the specialties of lawyers will mean more competition and should mean that fees for frequently used services such as real estate closings, wills and divorce will go down, he said.

Connerton declined to estimate the decrease and other members of the bar didn't want to talk about prices.

But Connerton said in an interview that advertising combined with the increasing popularity of prepaid legal insurance plans should bring legal services within the reach of a good portion of the 75 million Americans who now feel they cannot afford them.

VW denies car 'dumping'

Associated Press

The manufacturer of the Volkswagen, traditionally the No. 1 selling imported car in the United States, Saturday denied that its cars were being "dumped" on the U.S. market at less than fair value. British Leyland also denied dumping.

The denials came after the U.S. Treasury Department announced Friday that it is launching a so-called dumping investigation into whether foreign cars are being priced unfairly and hurting domestic automakers.

The Treasury Department said the probe involves $7.5 billion a year worth of imports from eight nations — West Germany, Britain, France, Belgium, Italy, Sweden, Japan and Canada.

A spokesman for Volkswagenwerk

AG in Wolfsburg, West Germany, said Volkswagens are priced $500 above competing cars in the United States and that that should not constitute dumping. He added that the firm has not received any notification that it is dumping.

The British Leyland spokesman in London said the firm believes "that when all the facts have been assessed no finding of dumping will be justified."

The French newspaper, Le Figaro said Japanese automakers are the main target of the investigation but that European makers feared the move because it sets in motion "the terrible mechanism of closing markets, by reprisal or precaution."

The executive commission of the European Common Market expressed regret Friday at the Treasury announcement.

New round of car-price hikes seen

DETROIT (UPI) — American car-buyers may get hit with another, seemingly unending round of price increases on the 1976 models.

Besides the certainty of price hikes averaging close to $300 a car when the new models are introduced in October, a new federal brake standard and rising material costs could push prices up again during the winter. Steel price increases announced this past week, and then delayed could add $35 to the average midsize car with the brake standard adding another $40.

Sources at the Detroit auto companies, who asked not to be quoted, said the steel hikes now couldn't come at a worse time since planned auto price increases already seem too high in some people's minds. The higher prices, one said, could slow the industry's recovery from its worst slump since the Depression.

The average car now costs about $1,000 more than a comparable model at the end of the 1973 model year. Price hikes on the '75s averaged over $400 alone.

Actions by three of the nation's leading steel producers last week almost assure the automakers will take the full 6 percent increase they have been discussing for most of the summer. And price boosts above that level are a possibility later in the fall and during the winter because of higher aluminum, rubber and steel prices.

But several auto industry sources indicated they expected the steel price hikes sooner or later, meaning an additional cost to them and the car buyer.

Even before the steel price announcements, Ford and General Motors had given their dealers assurances that increases would not be above 6 percent on the '76s on deals written with fleet customers. That same increase is expected to be passed on to the average car-buyer.

Medic Alert

Can you give me the name of the company that engraves ID bracelets for epileptics? The police said I should wear one. N.B., Long Beach.

The Medic Alert Foundation International, Box SP, Turlock, Calif. 95380, puts out the Medic Alert ID tag which is imprinted with a person's medical problem. The tag, worn on the wrist or around the neck, has the internationally recognized caduceus and the words Medic Alert in red on the outer side. On the back are the wearer's medical situation, his or her file number and the phone number of Medic Alert's 24-hour emergency answering service in Turlock. Emergency personnel throughout the world can call that number collect for additional information in the event the wearer is unconscious or is otherwise unable to communicate. Lifetime membership in the foundation costs $7 and includes a stainless steel tag and a wallet identification card with details of the medical problem. The nonprofit, tax-exempt foundation was started in 1956 and has more than 575,000 members in the United States and 14 other countries. There are more than 200 reasons why people become members. The top six, in order, are diabetes, allergy to penicillin, taking anticoagulants, wearing contact lenses, neck breather and epilepsy.

Charmed

Can Action Line tell me how to obtain larger copies of the Charmers cartoons that appear in the I.P.T.? I'd like to make needlepoint cartoons of two specific cartoons and I need at least an 8 by 10-inch print of each. J.D., Long Beach.

The syndicated Charmers series is published by Hallmark Cards Inc., and a spokesman for the firm said there are no prints of the cartoons available to the public. Hallmark markets greeting cards and stationery items with the Charmers characters on them, but none of the cartoons appears in any other form. You can reproduce and enlarge a line drawing yourself by using a grid tracing system, which is explained in most needlepoint books and magazines. There also is a tracing tool called a pantograph, which can be used to enlarge drawings. This tool, which sells for about $9 and up, is available at the Saylor Artist & Engineering Supply Co., 420 E. Fourth St., and other such stores. Another method is to have a drawing duplicated on a special photocopying machine that can enlarge the size of the original. Tesla Printing Co., 547 W. Ocean Blvd., does this type of work, and it would cost you about $6 per print. Blueprint companies also can do reproduction jobs, but they probably would charge a minimum of $10 per item for an 8-by-10 print.

Second opinion

Does a doctor have the legal right to call in as many specialists as he wishes without the knowledge or consent of the patient? Is the patient then responsible for the bills? This happened to me recently, and I wonder how I am ever going to be able to pay. R.P., Long Beach.

You are responsible for the bills. There is nothing in the law to prevent a doctor from calling in colleagues on a fee basis for examinations or opinions on a patient's case, but to do so without advance approval of the patient is frowned on by the medical profession. A spokesman for the Los Angeles County Medical Association said there is nothing wrong with a physician seeking opinions from colleagues, if the patient is not being billed for these services. But he noted it is considered a breach of medical ethics not to get advance permission from the patient for any additional services he will be expected to pay for.

Pay TV

Can Action Line find out where I can get cable television and how much it would cost? J.W., Long Beach.

Cable TV is not available in your neighborhood. Long Beach Cablevision, the city's only such firm, serves primarily the Signal Hill and Belmont Shore areas. The company offers two types of services—a cable hookup to improve a TV set's reception of existing channels and pay TV movies. The standard cable system for improved reception costs $6.50 a month plus a one-time $7.50 installation fee. The special movie channel, which features 12 uncut recent films every month, costs an additional $7.75 installation charge and $8.50 extra a month. A Long Beach resident can find out if his home is in the cable TV service area by calling the company at 595-4455.

A PLANE drops a load of fire retardant on a hot spot in brush fire in the San Bernardino National Forest near Hemet. More than 1,000 fire fighters are battling the blaze, in hopes of bringing it under control sometime today.

Mountain brush fire halted

dropped the temperature and raised the humidity.

Some 150 residents of the community of Thomas Mountain were evacuated at noon Friday as the fire swept close to the village's 52 dwellings. Backfires were set to keep the flames away from the community.

The fire moved past the town early Saturday, destroying two homes on the outskirts of the community. Other residents returned to their homes at dawn.

Additional fire crews from throughout the state arrived during the night bolstering the fire-fighting force to over 1,000 by Saturday.

Blood-stained car seized by FBI

officials in Washington have been told Hoffa's mysterious disappearance was linked to an alleged attempt by organized crime to take control of the union's East Coast operations.

Hoffa's son, James P. Hoffa, 31, when asked if the Lake Orion meeting took place, refused to comment. It was the second consecutive day young Hoffa refused to meet with newsmen outside the family's placid summer cottage 40 miles from Detroit. He relayed his "no comment" through Jerry McDonald, a business agent of Teamsters Local 299 and a Hoffa family friend.

"Mr. Hoffa says there is nothing new to report," McDonald told newsmen. "There's no sense doing the same thing over and over again."

Fitzsimmons also said he did not believe the underworld was involved in the disappearance, and that there was no power struggle under way in the Teamsters, the nation's largest union. It is known Hoffa would try to defeat Fitzsimmons as president in 1976 if given the chance to seek union office by the courts.

FITZSIMMONS, a longtime confidant of Hoffa's and now his archrival, said, "I have no idea where Hoffa is." Asked if he thinks the 62-year-old former union president is dead, he said, "I don't want to comment on that. But he's been missing what, 10 or 11 days now?"

It was Fitzsimmons' first public statement on the various rumors that union or underworld figures were involved in the Hoffa mystery. He said reports of underworld involvement were a "bunch of bull-shit."

"What would the underworld have to do with any of this?" he asked a reporter during an interview on a golf course in Dallas. "I don't know where you guys get all this. Why all the publicity? Jimmy and I have been friends for 40 years. We've had our differences of philosophy, but nothing personal. No falling out."

Meanwhile, U.S. Atty. Ralph Guy Jr., said it may take a federal grand jury to get the 10-day-old investigation off dead center.

Security tightest for Japan premier's visit

for the city's honorary award:

"Long Beach is well known and well loved in Japan not only because of our mutually beneficial trade but also because of your beauty contest, which inspires our beauties to compete...I look forward to continuous development and even better trade relations with you."

That trade, Ridings said in his welcome speech, amounts to 5 million tons a year, billions of dollars and hundreds of thousands of year-round jobs for both countries.

Earlier in the day the prime minister and his entourage lunched aboard the Queen Mary where his tour was also a heavily guarded event. Later he departed for a tea at USC where he once studied political science.

His visit to the United States, his first since becoming prime minister, began a week ago in Washington. He was scheduled to return to Japan today.

signing the European security conference declaration in Helsinki despite "right-wing criticism" and an upsurge of anti-Soviet feeling in the country.

He called the agreement, which provides for more human contacts across East-West borders and recognizes existing boundaries for the foreseeable future, in the best interest of the world.

"So I don't believe that what we did in Helsinki, believing as I do that it was a positive thing, that it will have any adverse impact on the (Republican presidential) nomination," he said.

Ford fielded questions easily, but showed sensitivity when pressed as to whether the health of his wife, Betty, could change his decision to run in 1976 and on the question of jawboning oil companies to hold down prices.

Asked about reports he had told congressmen he would not seek the presidency if his wife became ill, Ford said he believed her health "was sufficiently good that she could be a good teammate" in the campaign. He added:

"I think her health today is better than it was on many occasions when I was the (House) minority leader. So we don't foresee any health problems, except that she shouldn't try to keep up with the schedule that I keep up with sometimes."

Mrs. Ford underwent breast cancer surgery last September and has suffered for more than a decade from a chronic arthritis neck ailment. During the President's 10-day European swing, she cut back scheduled social activities in Warsaw and Bucharest because of fatigue.

Looking back, Ford said the first several months of his Presidency "were the most difficult."

"We had some tough decisions to make in that period," he recalled, citing inflation, the energy crisis, the Middle East and prospective negotiations with the Soviet

FORD BEGINS VAIL VACATION

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford launched a new year in office Saturday by discussing unresolved energy and economic problems with his top advisers and by inviting Vice President and Mrs. Nelson Rockefeller to a private "first anniversary" dinner in the White House.

The only fanfare came at a noontime ceremony in the Rose Garden, where Ford presented a NASA Distinguished Service Medal to the three American astronauts who took part in last month's Apollo-Soyuz linkup in space with two Soviet cosmonauts.

Ford planned to leave today for a two-week vacation in Vail, Colo., which also will include at least 13 appearances on side trips to seven states. Some of those visits will give him a chance to test the political climate for his 1976 campaign to win election to a full term in his own right.

et Union on nuclear arms limitation.

But he said the job "has gotten progressively easier to handle, even though the problems have been tough."

As for his health, Ford said: "In all honesty, I have never felt better than I feel today for a long, long period of time. I get more daily exercise. It is better regulated. It is easier to organize. My weight is down and my muscle tone is really the best it has been in a long time. So health-wise, I haven't felt better than I feel right today."

He said he has enough time to read and think about the problems confronting the nation and feels good with only five hours sleep a night.

Opposition bears down in Portugal

By JULIE FLINT

LISBON (AP) — An avalanche of civilian and military opposition bore down Saturday on Premier Vasco Goncalves, threatening to smash his day-old government and block Portugal's Communist course.

Goncalves fought back, with the support of the two other members of the ruling military junta, by suspending nine dissident officers from the 30-man Revolutionary Council for signing and distributing a document attacking the premier for his Communist-line policies.

HOWEVER, the document still was reported circulating and finding wide approval as important moderate officers rushed to join the criticism just a day after Goncalves formed a new cabinet. Military sources said more than 400 officers had signed the document within hours of its appearance Thursday night.

A statement from the junta said: "Because of their document of Aug. 8, the directorate decided to suspend from the Revolutionary Council the nine officers who signed and distributed the document."

Before the suspension was announced, President Francisco da Costa Gomes and internal security chief Otelo Saraiva de Carvalho, Goncalves' partners in the all-powerful junta, had been reported by leaders of the Armed Forces Movement, which heads the 15-month-old revolution, to be moving toward the moderate camp.

Their latest decision seemed to indicate a closing of ranks around the premier.

AMONG THE nine suspended from the Revolutionary Council were former Foreign Minister Maj. Ernesto Melo Antunes, who was being promoted as a replacement for Goncalves; moderate leaders Capt. Vasco Lourenco and Air Force Maj. Jose Canto e Castro; former roving ambassador Vitor Alves and former Mozambique High Commissioner Vitor Crespo.

The commanders of two of the country's three military regions also were suspended from the council.

The stern disciplinary action was not expected to silence — and could even harden — military and civilian opposition to Goncalves and the course he has chosen for the country.

Portugal's two biggest parties, the Socialists and Popular Democrats, spokesmen for 64 per cent of the electorate, lined up behind the dissident officers.

THE CONSTITUENT assembly, a parliament without power under the present military monopoly, voted for the moderates against Goncalves.

The entire center military region approved the document, signed by two of Portugal's four military commanders. Men in the northern region, whose commander did not sign, were reported to have turned against him.

The navy chief of staff, Adm. Jose Pinheiro Azevedo, Goncalves' new navy minister, formally authorized circulation of the document. Further proof of the unrest in the navy came with the resignations of 37 submarine officers, including four commanders, who accused the government of planting a Communist spy in their unit.

A northern infantry unit issued a statement accusing the Soviet-line Communist party of being ready to stop its political slide by assassinating opponents.

Among the units apparently deserting Goncalves was the Amadora commando base outside Lisbon, where moderates last week won a trial of strength against the Communists seeking the ouster of their commander, Col. Jaime Neves.

A SPOKESMAN at the base said the entire 850-man regiment would decide on the document Tuesday, presumably with Neves' consent.

An anti-aircraft unit at Cascais, 20 miles west of Lisbon, cast a 70 per cent vote for the dissidents, the political weekly Expresso reported. An infantry unit in Mafra, just beyond Cascais, backed the moderates by 90 per cent.

The Roman Catholic Church added to the pressure on Goncalves with a call for an antigovernment rally today in the northern city of Braga, hub of antiradical demonstrations that have taken four lives this month.

Rush for once-banned books ends in Lisbon

LISBON (NYTS) — Politics and erotica are still the bestselling books in revolutionary Portugal, but sales are down.

Pamphlets with pictures of Lenin and others with erotic pictures of women are prominently displayed on the mosaic sidewalks of Rossio Square, where foreign tourists congregate, but the novelty is wearing off.

"The Portuguese public is becoming more discriminating and has a greater sense of responsibility," said Jose Siqueira, the manager of Atica, a so-called progressive bookstore. He recalls the early days of the revolution, which began April 25, 1974, when he said customers rushed in and ordered dozens of books by Marx and Engels, then the new status symbols here.

There are also economic reasons for the slowdown in book sales — a sharp rise in costs and a drop in spending money.

It's 'all-out' war in Angola

LUANDA, Angola (UPI) — A fierce bazooka battle erupted in central Luanda Saturday, shattering two weeks of uneasy calm in the Angolan capital and for the first time embroiling all three rival black independence movements.

This is 'all-out' war now," said a Portuguese military source.

The U.S. consulate advised 120 Americans still in the city to leave as soon as possible.

At least three black soldiers were killed and scores of others wounded in two hours of fighting that began when the Soviet-backed Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola launched a bazooka attack on one of the three city strongpoints of the opposing National Front for the Liberation of Angola.

After the battle, Portuguese troops cordoned off the area and evacuated the National Front leaders and troops from their beleaguered enclave behind the governor's palace. Among them was acting Premier Ngola Kabangu. Portuguese officials did not say where they were taking him and his followers.

Fighting between the two groups has reduced the seaside capital to a state of siege with food, fuel and water in low supply.

The exodus of whites from the West African colony continued, and officials said the target of evacuating 3,000 persons daily would soon be reached. The massive Portuguese airlift is expected to move 250,000 to 300,000 whites to Lisbon by Oct. 31. Officials estimated 100,000 had already fled.

The National Front receives backing from neighboring Zaire and has Chinese weapons.

After Saturday's battle, three blood-spattered bodies lay on the hillside in full view of newsmen. Three Portuguese armored cars cautiously circled the area, signaling a lull in the fighting, but took no action.

A National Front spokesman said that, if the attack were resumed, the front would blow up a nearby oil refinery.

For the first time, the third movement, the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola — which has remained neutral in the war thus far — joined the fray on the side of the National Front, whose main forces were routed from most of Luanda three weeks ago.

Explosions shook Luanda throughout the morning in isolated battles between the three sides, but Portuguese military sources said the Popular Movement's hold on the capital was unshaken.

The main battle took place in a shantytown behind and below the government palace. Army sources said the dead and wounded were Popular Movement troops.

The National Front forces regrouped around the city and were building up to a full-scale attack on the capital.

Reports of continued battles between the Popular Movement and the National Front came from Malange, a cotton-farming center 200 miles east of Luanda. They said bodies still littered the streets and Portuguese troops who appealed for quick time to clean up the town were fired on and have withdrawn.

Amendment protects Gandhi

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — The upper house of Parliament passed a constitutional amendment bill Saturday protecting Indira Gandhi and all her successors as prime minister from any legal action, criminal or civil.

Information Minister V.C. Shukla, meanwhile, accused a section of the nation's news media of "injecting poison into the land of the people" and said the government was contemplating restructuring the entire Indian press.

The amendment passed by the upper house — by a vote of 154 to 0 — extended to the prime minister immunity already provided to the president and the state governors under the Indian constitution and added a new feature.

An article of the constitution already bars court action against the president or state governors for acts they commit while in office.

The amended article goes a step farther. It stipulates that no legal action, criminal or civil, can be instituted against the president, the prime minister or the state governors for action they committed even before they "entered upon their office" or during the tenure.

The measure also states that the officials cannot be prosecuted even after they leave office for acts committed before or during the time they held their positions.

The bill has no effect on Mrs. Gandhi's court conviction last June 12 for election law violations during the 1971 parliamentary campaign.

That conviction was nullified in parliamentary measures passed earlier this week that bar courts from hearing petitions challenging the election of a prime minister and strike down a guilty verdict against Mrs. Gandhi.

All measures in the current session of Parliament have passed by vast majorities, because Mrs. Gandhi's ruling Congress party dominates both houses, and opposition members boycotted the session three days after it convened July 21 to ratify the state of emergency declared June 26.

Information Minister Shukla's statement on a restructuring of the Indian press was seen as heralding a government move to institutionalize the state of censorship introduced under the national emergency.

Shukla told a newspaper convention in Calcutta that some parts of the press were "injecting poison" and said "the government is determined to correct the situation as quickly as possible."

He said, however, that the government had no intention of taking over the newspapers in the country.

Anti-censor bid printed in Russ

MOSCOW (UPI) — A Soviet newspaper has created an intriguing mystery by publishing an appeal for an end to the Soviet Union's system of tight censorship.

The government rarely acknowledges the existence of censorship in the country, although most Soviet citizens are aware of it and many applaud it for screening out Western ideas.

But calls for an end to the system are unheard of in the Soviet press, which is itself heavily censored.

The unusual appeal appeared this week in the form of a letter written by a school teacher in the Ukrainian capital of Kiev to the educational newspaper Teachers' Gazette.

THE TEACHER, identified as Y. Koirakh, complained that not enough Western films are allowed to filter down to the masses, and she called the system a mistake.

Her letter was worded broadly and could be taken as an attack on the entire system of pre-screening that affects everything from radio to phonograph records.

"My opinion is there is no need to forbid anything or to have any restrictions for such things stir up an interest in forbidden things," the teacher wrote.

She proposed a system of education that would instill values into young people while they are in school so they can recognize the "bourgeois" when they see or hear it.

"According to my opinion it is necessary to educate the good taste of the young spectators to high art values and the ability to judge correctly," she said. "Only then will they themselves understand what is good and what is bad."

THE CONCEPT of independent judgment represents a radical position under the Soviet system.

Some experts on Soviet affairs speculated the letter might have been "set up" as a concocted radical view to be denounced and set straight in the next edition of the newspaper.

TRIPOLI, Libya (UPI) — High-ranking Libyan authorities have yet to make a decision on the fate of 10 Japanese Red Army guerrillas who escaped to Libya from Malaysia Friday, a source close to the government said Saturday.

Feminists have designs on world of architecture

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — On the surface, little has changed in the male-dominated profession of architecture. But the subtext has been stirring since 1971, with feminist ferment that may eventually alter the way both women and men function as professionals.

Starting Sunday and continuing until Aug. 23, the seat of the four-year-old peaceful revolution moves, temporarily, to Biddeford, Me., for the first session of the Women's School of Planning and Architecture. There, on the campus of St. Francis College, 15 miles south of Portland, about 60 women professionals and students will gather for an intensive two-week program.

The seminars planned are to offer women a chance to probe professional problems, to analyze and discuss broadening the functions of architects, to work with tools and study how they relate to design, and to seek a clearer understanding of what women can contribute to make the profession more socially responsive.

"We are not enrolling as faculty and students but as participants," Leslie Kane Welsman emphasized, stressing the unstructured character of the five-course program, which will be led by seven women.

Because it is nonhierarchical, she said, the school is the antithesis of most architects' offices where, she noted, "the star system dominates."

Joan Forrester Sprague and Marie Kennedy, who hope to spark some provocative discussions in their "professionalism Redefined" seminar, have no star system in their Open Design Office in Cambridge, Mass. They said the five professionals in their three-year-old consulting, design and administrative responsibilities.

"The rule until now has been that if you don't make it as a designer in architecture, you've failed," Joan Sprague said.

Those women insist that the pyramid structure of administration in most architects' offices is the cause of rigidity that they said is characteristic of the profession. They contend that overlapping circles of responsibility encourage initiative and creativity.

Furthermore, Mrs. Sprague observed, architects play too limited a role in the building process.

Bobbie Sue Hood agrees. The San Francisco urban designer will lead a seminar on her specialty, discussing her involvement in the restoration of a village community that overlooks the Grand Canyon in her work with Rockrise Odegaard Mountjoy Apts., an architectural concern.

Miss Hood said that women had aptitude for urban design, for planning community facilities and the plazas.

They're adopting an "affirmative action" program, in the words of one of their trade associations.

"This means we'll be doing the suing for a change," says Bill Bean, president of the 18,000-member Peace Officers Research Association of California (PORAC).

PORAC represents about 230 associations of full-time law enforcement officers, mostly in police and sheriff's departments, Bean said. But he specified that it represents only officers — not the chiefs, sheriffs or the governmental bodies which employ them.

PORAC is expected to formally adopt the "affirmative action" program at a meeting today in Sacramento.

In precise terms, Bean said in a recent interview, "affirmative action" means PORAC will be filing selected legal actions, such as defamation or malicious prosecution suits, against persons who have deliberately pursued unfounded claims or lawsuits against members.

The San Diego County Sheriff's Association already has adopted a policy of suing any individual who assaults, abuses or defames a deputy.

The president of the San Diego association, Willis H. Fusaro, says over 200 deputies were injured last year in what he called "citizen brutality."

PORAC has for several years had a defense program. Under this, members are represented by counsel against any civil, criminal or departmental action brought against them as a result of the course and scope of their employment.

But Bean said PORAC's legal fund is now considered healthy enough to permit offensive action when it would benefit all members.

"For example, if an officer gets beaten, we'll sue," he said. "Or when certain radical papers identify officers by name and call them brutal or whatever — we're going after those people."

"We think it will cause a tremendous uplift in morale," Bean said.

"It will be done in a very selective basis. We're not going out capriciously, carelessly or with reckless abandon. We're going out to win a few points," he said.

Bean said the troubles started 10 years ago with the free speech movement in Berkeley. He said 12 or 13 Alameda County deputies were indicted by the district attorney, "and we started getting random indictments across the state, usually connected with making an arrest, or for excessive use of force."

The trend grew, said Bean.

"On rare occasions, there are valid reasons to question police action. But 9 out of 10 times, the charges are found to be unfounded," he said.

A San Francisco law firm acts as PORAC's house counsel. It has 14 attorneys and 24-hour telephone service for members.

Bean said about 10 other law firms in the state are available, all having been screened by PORAC.

He said it has never taken more than 45 minutes for an attorney to be at an officer's side in an emergency.

PORAC also maintains a full-time lobbyist in Sacramento and a 15-member legislative committee, Bean said.

Nuns, ired by lettuce, back UFW

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A national meeting of 780 Roman Catholic nuns voted Saturday to boycott the University of San Francisco cafeteria after discovering they were being served "forbidden food" — lettuce picked by rivals of Cesar Chavez' United Farm Workers.

The seven-year-old National Assembly of Women Religious picked the cafeteria and criticized the host university's "insensitivity to the social justice issue inherent in the farm workers' struggle."

The nuns overwhelmingly adopted a resolution demanding signed statements from the university administration and the cafeteria management supporting "the boycott of non-UFW lettuce and grapes."

BUT, in a meeting with 25 of the nuns, Alfred P. Alessandri, USF's vice president for university relations, said, "The University of San Francisco cannot force a moral choice on our students any more than it can impose a religious or political point of view."

Sister Camille D'Arienzo explained the controversy in a statement: "No matter how plentiful or inexpensive it may be, hundreds of thousands of sisters across the United States won't touch lettuce unless it bears the black eagle seal, the insignia of the United Farm Workers."

"THERE was an abundance of iceberg lettuce at NAWR's convention center and the sisters, assuming it was harvested by the UFW, devoured it without scruple. That freedom-from-care attitude was dissipated (Friday night) when two sisters reported the university food service was serving the forbidden food."

The Chicago-based nuns group claims 3,500 members in various orders across the country. They dress as they want, and many do community work with prisoners, farm workers, prostitutes, the poor and urban minorities.

The group has endorsed the proposed Equal Rights Amendment to the Constitution and supported the ordination of 11 women as Episcopal priests.

THE NUNS have said they want an equal partnership in the running of the Catholic Church, including rights of ordination, and possibly election of a female Pope someday.

"We must see that Christianity calls for mutuality, equality and reciprocity in the church rather than that of hierarchy and subordination," Sister Margaret Farley, associate professor at Yale Divinity School, said Saturday.

The weekend conference ends today.

Diverse group backs ban on aerosol sprays

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A rock music group, a prison inmate and hundreds of grade school children have joined a mail campaign against the use of aerosol cans because of their suspected impact on the earth's protective ozone layer.

The letters to the office of Rep. Paul Rogers, D-Fla., supporting his bill to protect the ozone, included one fifth-grader's concern there would be no fresh air left in the world by the time she is 39.

"COMMANDER Cody and His Lost Planet Airmen," a rock group whose first album was called "Lost in the Ozone," has formed the Select Ozone Patrol and will send membership cards to anyone writing Rogers in support of his efforts.

Rogers sought to add to a Clean Air bill being drafted by the House Commerce Committee a provision to ban, two years after enactment, spray cans using fluorocarbons.

Rogers said scientific evidence shows that fluorocarbons in pressurized cans harm the ozone, the atmospheric layer that protects against harmful radiation from the sun.

At this stage of the committee drafting, the ban has been dropped and the bill directs the Environmental Protection Agency to draft regulations on use of such cans after a two-year study of their impact.

HEATHER BUNT, the fifth-grader from Coal Valley, Ill., recalled an article that predicted an end to fresh air on earth in 29 years if the offending cans are not eliminated.

"Well, I'll be only 39 years old," she wrote. "So what I'm saying is we should quit using spray cans so I could live longer."

Inmate Frank Price wrote from the Vienna (Ill.) Correctional Center: "I fervently support this legislation."

Lana Mazza and Dawn Bernhard, no address given, told Rogers, "We are doing a play so people understand that aerosol cans could kill them."

TODD TOLCES of Berkeley, Calif., sent Cody a postcard with a photo of a dog in frightened flight and said: "My dog used to really like me until I started using La popular deodorant. Now he hates me. This photo was taken after he found my empty aerosol can in the trash. I haven't seen him since."

An aide to Rogers said letters on the subject, many sent through Cody and others coming directly to the office, have been received from 35 states, and from Canada, Spain and New Zealand.

Tobacco subsidies said deadly

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Every $1,000 of the $60 million the government pays in subsidies to the tobacco industry each year helps, in effect, to buy one smoking-related lung cancer death, Ralph Nader health researchers said Saturday.

They told President Ford the program should be abolished and the money used instead to mount a government antismoking campaign.

A spokesman for the Tobacco Institute attacked the recommendation, saying the program actually "serves to reduce the amount of tobacco on the market" because production is limited under it. If it were abolished, he said, more tobacco would be grown, prices would fall, cigarettes would become cheaper and more people would smoke.

"It is a measure of the intelligence of those who make such recommendations that they fail to perceive this," he added.

The Health Research Group (HRG) report said there are about 74,300 lung cancer deaths in the United States each year, 85 to 90 per cent of which are linked to smoking.

"Like other agricultural commodities, the U.S. tobacco program guarantees tobacco farmers a minimum price, restricts production to maintain high prices, regulates marketing, funds research and promotes tobacco exports," the report said. "Unlike other commodities such as wheat, soybeans and dairy products, which sustain life, tobacco predictably causes disease and death."

"On the other hand, the federal government spends only $14.3 per lung cancer death annually on educating the public about the dangers of smoking. At the same time, the tobacco industry spends over $2,857 per lung cancer death on promoting the tobacco habit."

Rep. Peter Peyser, R-N.Y., who has been a leading House proponent of ending the subsidies, said both domestic payments and the $30 million in tobacco exports under the Food for Peace Program are an "outrageous inconsistency" that "must cease if we are serious about the concern for the health of our citizens."

"This is a huge waste of tax money," he said. A spokesman added that Peyser is working on legislation with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to cut the subsidies.

The HRG report said, "It is true that tobacco growers had a hard time before the initiation of federal support in 1933 (but) eliminating the program would not likely return the growers to their pre-program situation. Market prices have been well above support levels for the major cigarettes in recent years."

Some small independent farmers would suffer, it said, but a "direct social welfare program" should be initiated for them during the transition period.

Health campaign to start this week

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Public Health Service this week launches a 5-year campaign to coax Americans into a healthier life style by publicizing the dangers of smoking, drinking, overeating and bad driving.

The drive, which gives the federal government a new advocacy role in public health matters, is disclosed in a 5-year master plan for public health prepared by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

The plan will be published this week. It includes recommendations to restrict the sale of high tar and high nicotine cigarettes, limit alcohol advertising and require vehicle drivers and passengers to wear seat belts at all times.

The plan would clearly take HEW's Public Health Service beyond its traditional role of supplying information and make it an active advocate of healthy life styles.

"The broad view of prevention reflected in this theme ... calls for the active involvement of the individual in reordering his way of living to a more healthful existence, and it requires changes in how social and economic institutions use and interact with the environment," the plan says.

"The Public Health Service responsibility, therefore, is to identify and call public attention to the major causes of disease and death in the country and recommend alternative ways to prevent or control them."

Bandit robs bar, patrons

A Long Beach bar was robbed late Saturday by a shotgun-wielding bandit who ordered seven patrons to dump their money into one victim's purse.

Police said the man entered the Mecca Bar, 1229 E. Fourth St., about 10:05 p.m. and walked into the restroom. He came out almost immediately and pulled a single-barrel, sawed-off shotgun from his waistband, they said.

The robber ordered bartender Esperanza Jogela, 36, to get the money from the register, then told the patrons to empty their wallets into a woman patron's purse, officers said. He fled with $468.

The man, described as black, bearded, about 38 years old and 5-feet-8, was wearing a white floppy hat.

Stereo, clock radio stolen

Eugene Collier, 43, of 1315 W. 21st St., reported that a burglar who pried open his kitchen door took stereo equipment and a clock radio valued at $225, Long Beach police said Saturday.

50 pct. of shark attacks said fatal

LEXINGTON, Mass. (UPI) — Nearly half of all persons attacked by sharks die, according to a new study by marine biologists.

The study, "Sharks and Survival," was put together by the biologists and other scientists from the American Institute of Biological Sciences in Washington.

The scientists studied 1,100 cases of shark attacks and concluded that even very young and very old sharks can be dangerous. The old shark maintains his teeth, and the young ones are often mistaken for barracuda in their attacks.

"Sharks that do attack are most apt to strike the extremities," the report claims. "In order of incidence, sharks attack legs, thighs, arms, feet, hands and the waist. When they attack a boat, they usually attack the rudder or propeller. They have also been observed to sink their teeth into the hull and in at least one documented occasion to leap into a small boat with visible occupants."

The attacks on bathers were found to be more prevalent when the swimmers wore garments with strong contrasting shades or suits contrasting sharply with their bodies.

Ending Cuba sanctions held blow to freedom

By JIM TORTOLANO
Staff Writer

When the Organization of American States (OAS) voted last week to lift longstanding sanctions against Cuba, it was, to many Americans, another step in detente, toward recognizing political "realities."

But to refugees from the Communist government of that Caribbean isle, it came as a setback to hopes of ever freeing Cuba from the Castro regime.

To one such refugee, 20-year old Sergio Lopez of Long Beach, the ending of trade and diplomatic restrictions on Cuba came as no surprise.

"I expected it," he says somewhat glumly. "It's ironic, though, that it should occur just at the time of the Helsinki Summit."

"Just as the West is giving its blessing to Soviet occupation of Eastern Europe, it's doing the same thing for the Soviet occupation of Cuba. And that's all the Castro regime is—a Soviet puppet," he says.

Lopez, a married student at Long Beach State University, fled from Cuba with his family at age 5.

His grandfather, Jose Miro-Cardona, had been an opponent of the Batista regime, and was appointed the first prime minister of Cuba when Batista was ousted.

"The situation in Cuba then was very much like it is in Portugal now. After the overthrow of a very repressive government, there was a time when the non-Communist backers of the revolution were in the government," he adds.

But, as he thinks will happen in Portugal, "the revolution was betrayed." Frustrated by the actions of Castro, Miro-Cardona resigned. He later served as Cuban ambassador to Spain, and was offered the post to the U.S.

Instead, he asked for asylum in the Argentine embassy. Lopez' father, an art professor at the University of Havana, took his family on a "business trip" to Mexico in August 1960 that was really a flight from Cuba.

"I can still remember it," Lopez says. "My parents never told me where we were going. I guess they were afraid the children might say something in school. We left the dining room table set. All we took with us was our luggage and $200."

Both Miro-Cardona and the Lopez family finally reached Miami, and joined efforts to overthrow the Castro government, which they considered "traitors to the revolution."

Miro-Cardona became chairman of the Cuban Revolutionary Council, a coalition of anti-Castro groups that planned the ill-fated Bay of Pigs invasion in 1961.

Lopez, like many Cubans, blames President Kennedy for canceling planned American air strikes as a primary cause of the debacle.

With the Cuban missile crisis of 1962, the United States agreed not to invade Cuba in exchange for the removal of Russian missiles—weapons which Lopez thinks are still in Cuba.

Since then, Lopez thinks, "appeasement of Castro has been the policy of the United States." He further alleges that the government has encouraged the dispersal of Cubans (he estimates the number of Cuban refugees in United States to be about 800,000, with 60,000 living in the Los Angeles area) throughout the nation to break up the Cuban voting bloc in Florida. "They are trying to castrate us politically," he alleges.

All of this, combined with U.S. "appeasement" of Cuba—as in the OAS action—work against anti-Castro Cubans' efforts to drive Castro from power, Lopez believes.

"Cubans are very divided these days, very disillusioned. They feel powerless."

"We have been repeatedly betrayed by the United States government. Groups like Alpha 66, which try to go to Cuba to conduct guerrilla warfare against Castro are often caught by the U.S. Coast Guard and sent to prison," he says.

He dismisses reports of CIA plots to kill Castro with "if they really wanted to do it, it would've been done."

"At the moment I don't see a solution. Cubans are still willing to fight, but speaking realistically, there's not much that can be done," he says.

But he continues to work. He is the West Coast regional delegate to Abdala, an international Cuban anti-Castro youth group. As a member of this group, he led a controversial demonstration against a pro-Castro exposition in April at Long Beach State University that led to the premature closing of the "ExpoCuba."

Sponsored by a campus liberal-left umbrella group—the People's Coalition for Peace and Justice—"ExpoCuba," a photographic display on life in Cuba was set up in the Student Union. Lopez led a group of 40 Cubans and supporters in a demonstration against the admittedly one-sided display.

The group entered the "ExpoCuba" room, and began arguing loudly with the sponsors. Deciding that the purpose of the fair had been defeated, the PCPJ folded the display hours early. Lopez was roundly criticized for "interfering with freedom of speech."

"We weren't interfering with free speech," he says. "We were just taking advantage of our right of free speech to say what we thought of that Castro propaganda."

Despite the reversals of detente and moves such as the OAS lifting of Cuban sanctions, Lopez thinks there might be a ray of hope.

SERGIO LOPEZ

"Maybe there is some change in the attitudes of liberals and the press after (Alexander) Solzhenitsyn came here. People are beginning to look at detente skeptically," he says.

"Communists believe what Lenin once said: 'Treaties, like pie-crusts, are made to be broken'."

Doggonedest Roundup in Town

It all started at Anaheim and Cherry Avenues Saturday morning when a female German shepherd picked up a host of admirers and led them on a chase across streets and walks, sending pedestrians and drivers skittering. Half an hour later and several blocks away Animal Control Officer Mark Carey lassoed the loose lady and trucked her back to the corral at the city shelter. In the interim motorcycle officer Fred Sims pulled in to help ease the traffic tie up.

L.B. officials take steps on Westside problems

By MARY ELLIS CARLTON
Urban Affairs Editor

Long Beach City Manager John Mansell, City Councilman Don Phillips and 10 Westside businessmen took a vigorous two-hour walk Friday which turned out to be a healthy exercise in the democratic process.

All agreed their foot-powered excursion down weed-choked alleys, across traffic-clogged streets and through busy industrial plants resulted in an exchange of ideas between city and citizenry which perhaps has been long overdue.

The unique walkathon was initiated by members of the Westside Industrial Council, an association of Westside businessmen recently galvanized into action by the city's decision to redevelop their 350-acre tract into a modern industrial park.

"Most Westside businessmen agree improvement of the area is long overdue...but they have been confused, frightened and frustrated about the city's proposed design standards for the area," said Joel Friedland, WIC president.

"THEY'VE been clamoring to see a definite plan...they want some answers about setbacks, street alignments, relocation, what businesses will stay and whether present property owners will have a say in planning their industrial community."

"We feel the city does not understand our unique problems, our special mix of diverse industries and the hardships which redevelopment could bring to some businesses in the area," he said.

Mansell and Phillips agreed with WIC members that, via an on-foot tour of the area, perhaps they could walk and talk out some of their differences.

As it turned out, that's pretty much what happened.

"AT LEAST, it was a giant step in the right direction," remarked one long-time Westside businessman. "It even opened my eyes to some blighted conditions I'd never noticed before."

After the walk, Mansell, Phillips and Jim Hankla, executive vice president of the Economic Development Corporation, planning and marketing arm for the redevelopment project, sat down with the businessmen in the lounge of Friedland's Seaside Paint & Lacquer Co. for a relaxed give-and-take session.

"We have no definite game plan at this time—it's only a concept," Mansell told the group. "We can't have a definite plan until we work out the details with businesses in the area."

There were dozens of other questions to be answered.

"SAY MY building doesn't conform and I have to be relocated. What about the business and customers I will lose while new construction is going on?" one property owner asked.

"That's one prime point which came to us in our negotiations with Ernest Hahn on the downtown shopping mall," Mansell answered. "Once you lose Buffums, you lose the whole downtown. Buying habits of customers would change. It's important to keep Buffums' where they are while a new facility is being built."

"That's the same thing we want to do for each industry here—keep it in business while the new property is being developed."

"Say I'm incompatible with the business next to me or he wants to expand and I don't. Who moves?" asked another.

HANKLA said the 350-acre tract has been divided into 16 proposed action areas and that EDC will hold meetings of business owners in each of the areas to thrash out their differences.

"Before going into those meetings, every businessman in the specified grid should give Jim (Hankla) an idea of what he wants to do," Mansell added. "And when the meetings are held, everyone must be brutally honest about their specific needs."

MOST OF the businessmen agreed after the walk-talk session that the newest development in the Westside industrial area is a sense of community that never existed before.

Redevelopment, controversial as it is, has already built that.

More facilities get priority

Construction of neighborhood facilities centers in East and downtown Long Beach was one of the areas given top priority at public hearings of the city's Community Development Advisory Commission.

The commission was asked last December by the City Council to get citizen participation in developing a program for use of about $26 million in federal funds Long Beach is scheduled to get over a six-year period.

In a report to be filed Tuesday with the council, Chairman Sidney S. Guthman said his commission sponsored 17 meetings to explain the federal act and then conducted two public hearings in June.

Questionnaires were distributed at all of the meetings, Guthman said. Responses from the 17 original meetings listed the following needs, in order of priority:

—Rehabilitation of existing residences through loans and grants.

—Redevelopment of residential areas by clearance of substandard structures and new replacement construction.

—Construction of neighborhood facilities centers to provide expanded and decentralized social services.

—Expansion of park and recreation areas.

—Provision of economic development and increased employment opportunities.

The two public hearings in June concerned projects for 1976, when the city is to receive $3.39 million for housing or community development activities, Guthman said.

Guthman said the advisory commission has reviewed the city's proposed 1976 application for funds under the 1976 Housing and Community Development Act and believes the proposed activities "substantially respond" to the needs and priorities expressed by citizens at the advisory commission meetings.

had only a neckerchief when I made second-class, but I possessed a full uniform the night I became a Life Scout. I know this pleased my scoutmaster; a man who went out of his way to find jobs for me so I could earn enough to stay in scouting.

No, scouting isn't just for rich kids. It wasn't then, and it certainly isn't now. It never will be, not as long as men like Richard W. Lamb, Jr., and Lew N. Hindley are associated with scouting.

Dick Lamb is the executive of the Long Beach Area Council, Boy Scouts of America. Lew Hindley is council president, one of the 4,000 volunteers who are helping Dick Lamb make his point that there is a place in scouting for every boy, regardless of race, creed, color or social background.

The council encompasses Long Beach, Lakewood, Bellflower and Dominguez. It serves 9,121 boys (as of the end of 1974), or 31 per cent of all the boys within its boundaries who are eligible to be Boy Scouts.

Incidentally, that's the highest percentage among the 13 scout councils in Southern California.

Where do the boys come from? Every area, every type of neighborhood. They're from Naples, the Central District, Carmelitos, Park Estates, Los Altos,

People Talk

F.C. Anderson

BACK IN the days of khaki breeches, Smokey the Bear campaign hats and knee-high stockings there was a belief current in the less affluent areas of society that "scouting is for rich kids."

If wealth was a requirement for membership in the Boy Scouts of America, I wouldn't have qualified. But the Scouts couldn't have cared less about my financial position; they had a place for a boy who shined shoes, picked up coal along the railroad tracks, shoveled ashes for his breakfast and grabbed any honest job he could to survive.

Sure, there were some affluent boys in my troop, but they never made smart remarks about the uniform I acquired one piece at a time over two years. I

North Long Beach, the East Side and the West Side, wherever a boy can be reached.

In June 1974, the Board of Supervisors approved a revenue-sharing grant of $35,237 to the Long Beach council to expand the scouting program in Carmelitos, North Long Beach and the Central District, sometimes called the inner city. That grant enabled the recruitment of 455 boys, none of them affluent. The funds paid for their scout manual, registration fee, neckerchief and subscription to Boys' Life. It provided 100 camping situations for boys from those areas.

The program also enabled the council to add three paraprofessional scout leaders to the staff. The paraps are indigenous to the areas they serve, know the special needs of those areas. What they lack in college degrees or the training necessary to produce executives such as Dick Lamb, they compensate for in enthusiasm and empathy.

The paraprofessionals are the glue that holds troops and Cub packs together. They enlist the scoutmasters, den mothers and community volunteers vital to an on-going program.

There are problems. It's hard to get a father interested in scouting when his mind is occupied with the problem of finding a job so he can hold his home together. And there are still some people who think that scouting is for rich kids, so why bother?

There are street mischiefs competing for the attention of the boys themselves. There's some negative peer pressure to overcome.

But all in all, the outreach program of scouting is working in the Long Beach Area Council. Dick Lamb and Lew Hindley are optimistic. A new grant from the supervisors will bring Explorer posts into being in Carmelitos, the Central District and North Long Beach. Someday soon the Eagles will be flying in those areas of special concern, and that will be a milestone for Dick and Lew and the faith they have in what they're doing.

This story makes a point:

In 1973, Scoutmaster Robert Hoffman and his boys in Troop 11, Carmelitos, worked nights and weekends renovating a 1956 bus Hoffman had purchased with his own money. They transformed the bus into a home on wheels, toured 17 states and four Canadian provinces, visited Washington and New York and spent a week at the Boy Scout Jamboree in Virginia.

Just try to tell Troop 111 in Carmelitos that scouting is for rich kids.

America: new maturity or failure of nerve?

WASHINGTON — This capital city is preoccupied, as usual, with the politics and personalities of the coming presidential election campaign, but outside Washington, and also here, there is a muted hum of debate about the mind and values of America, its purposes, policies and intentions beyond the chatter, sham and posturing of politics.

This is more important than the Sunday supplement reports of Gerald Ford's good-old-boy triumphs in the White House, or the Monday morning gossip about Henry's struggles with the Congress, or Don Rumsfeld's fight for control of the White House staff.

On the issues about whether Rumsfeld or Robert Hartmann is controlling the door to the President's oval office, or who is leaking information in the White House against Rockefeller and Kissinger, very little depends. But on an accurate definition of the world we are going to live in after the next election, and the qualities of the President who will preside over all these intractable issues into the Eighties, much depends.

These deeper questions are being discussed in America today perhaps more widely than in any other country in the world. In no other society, certainly not in the Soviet Union or China or Japan, and not even in Europe, with the possible exception of Britain, is there such a torrent of philosophical debate about the meaning of the life of individuals, institutions, and nations as here in the United States.

Nothing is excluded now from the cut and thrust of this unruly controversy in America, except one odd and fundamental thing which we will come to later. The most fundamental questions are being examined in the privacy of American homes, and even in the press and radio and television: the relations between the individual and the state; the state and the world; the relations between men and women, between parents and children; the institution of marriage and even whether to have children; between teacher and student, employer and employee, priest, preacher, rabbi and parishioner; editor and reporter; and of course between President, Congress, governor, mayor and taxpayers — all these fundamental relationships of life are now being worried and chewed over at least by a vigorous, articulate and growing remnant of troubled and thoughtful people in the United States.

James Reston

New York Times News Service

For example, Commentary magazine has just produced a remarkable discussion of America's reaction to the defeat in Vietnam, and, being concerned about the future of Israel, asks what has happened to America, and what all this means?

"Is it an expression as some think," Commentary asks, "of an adjustment to hopeful new international realities like détente and interdependence; or are we, as Solzhenitsyn and others believe, witnessing a resurgence of 'the spirit of Munich'? Is the United States exhibiting a new maturity in its international behavior; or is the country suffering from a failure of nerve and a loss of political will?"

These questions provoked a response from some of the most watchful minds in America that illustrates the possibilities of really serious debate in this country. It was not precisely the response that Commentary, published by the American Jewish Committee, might have preferred, but it is precisely the kind of searching analysis of the future of American policy that is so badly needed.

The "odd and fundamental thing" referred to earlier is that while this fundamental debate about values, purposes, policies and the future of Western civilization goes on in this country, and is critical for the future, it is usually overwhelmed by the trivial, the transitory, and secondary gossip of politicians. Not the condition of the present world or the problems of the coming age, but whether Ford is a "nice guy" or Teddy is honestly getting out, and what would happen if we had an election on the vicious issue of "Watergate vs. Chappaquiddick?"

Even so, there is a long time between now and the nominating conventions and the 200th anniversary of the Declaration next July, and maybe the question is whether we concentrate on the meaning of the country on that anniversary — who we are, what we believe and where we are going? — rather than on the personal ambitions of Ford, Humphrey, Reagan, Rockefeller, Muskie, and these other men in their sixties.

The nation is confused and depressed now, not because it is suffering from "a lack of nerve" or yearning for a new maturity, but because the world is changing faster than we can change our minds and institutions, and so far no presidential candidate has been able to reduce all this diversity to identity and, recognizing the menace of the present, define the hopes and policies of the future.

Maybe Charles Frankel gave the best answer to Commentary's questions about our "failure of nerve." "If Americans are anxious and disoriented at the moment," he said, "it shouldn't surprise anyone. Business is bad, people are losing their jobs, everything costs more. . . ."

"Since 1960, the country has gone through assassinations, fires in the cities, and counter-cultures in the home. It has gone through the long-drawn-out process of expelling a chief of state revealed as an unconscionable liar and the superintendent of a tawdry provincial conspiracy. . . . Add to this Vietnam — its cruelty, its cost, its shame, its obtuse persistence in folly, its shadowy rationale, and its final whimpering conclusion, and bungled evacuation — and if the American people weren't in their present mood, one would have to suppose they were drugged."

But there is time in this next year to listen to this sort of thing, and analyze the problems before we consider the men who may help solve them. The Commentary inquiry is a good place to begin. It rather rigs the question on the pessimistic side that America is suffering from "a failure of nerve" but it has produced the best set of answers from the most thoughtful minds that have come this way in a very long time.

Maryland slowdown

Maryland is keeping highway speeds down in ways that strike many of its motorists as unfair. The methods seem likely to be effective, however. If they are, other states are likely to weigh their benefits and try one or more themselves.

First, Maryland patrolmen now stop cars for exceeding the speed limit by as little as three miles an hour. Formerly, drivers were usually permitted to go 65 without being stopped.

Second, patrol cars drive side by side at the legal limit in a "running roadblock."

Third — and most controversial — the patrol cars aren't all identified as such. One of the patrol vehicles is a pickup truck loaded with hay. Another is a station wagon. One is a sports car. One is a dump truck. Each week, the police publicize an "undercover car" by inviting newspaper reporters and television crews to ride along as it tags unwary speeders.

A speeding motorist who has been flagged down by a cop in a rusting pickup truck has a tendency to feel that he was a victim of entrapment. It is unlikely any court would agree. If a policeman drove dangerously close behind a car on a two-lane road and the motorist speeded up for safety's sake, he might plead entrapment. But if he zoomed past a sports car because he thought no police car was in the neighborhood, he couldn't very well claim that the police Porsche he passed lured him into violating the speed law.

The television coverage has the merit of publicizing the program, but it has the effect of penalizing a speeder with massive publicity in addition to a fine. That seems dangerously close to cruel and unusual punishment. If other states take up part of the Maryland program, we hope they don't copy that aspect of it.

Governor, senators flout law

SACRAMENTO — The State Senate last Thursday stood right up and declared, by a 23-10 vote, its affection for an old Latin maxim.

Not "Senatoris Est Civitatis Libertatem Tueri," which is posted prominently high above the presiding officer's rostrum. That means "It is the duty of the Senators to protect the liberty of the people," and is indeed an inspiration, so long as it is convenient and does not conflict with the other maxim, "Fac ut dico, non ut facio."

Bob Schmidt

View From Our State Bureau

which doesn't appear anywhere but has much more practicality.

"FAC UT DICO, non ut facio" means, roughly, "Do as I say, not as I do."

Thursday, the Senate voted to confirm Governor Brown's nomination of Tom Quinn as chairman of the State Air Resources Board. What was confirmed at the time, knowingly, by the 23 senators who voted "aye" was an illegal act by Governor Brown.

Some years ago the legislature determined that the composition of the Air Resources Board (and several other boards and commissions) must include certain specified qualities.

It is a matter of law — not gubernatorial discretion, but law — that "two members of the board are to have training and experience in automotive engineering or closely related fields, two members shall have training and experience in chemistry, meteorology, or related scientific fields, including agriculture or law, and one member shall . . . have administrative experience in the field of air pollution control with no special technical training required." The language is in Section 39020 of the Health and Safety Code.

TOM QUINN might wind up being the best thing that ever happened to California's battle against air pollution.

But the fact is that he could not legally have been placed on the board last January when he was nominated by Brown.

He has undoubtedly acquired the administrative experience required in the seven months he has served as board chairman, and so if the nomination had been made a few weeks ago it would have been proper.

But what was before the Senate was the January nomination of a person not qualified, as a matter of law, to serve. The Senate chose to ignore the law it had created, and voted confirmation.

One of the arguments advanced by supporters of Quinn's confirmation is that the governor should be free to choose his administrative team. But the legislature undoubtedly was given that argument when it added Section 39020 to the Health and Safety Code in 1971, and the argument was rejected.

THEN, OF course, a Democratic legislature was imposing restrictions on a Republican governor. Now the governor is a Democrat, and the Democratic Senate votes to ignore its own law.

It is not the only example of a deliberate ignoring of the law by the legislature.

Article 4, Section 2C of the state constitution contains residency requirements imposed on legislative members. The section is ignored, openly and frequently, even when an issue is made of it and a successful candidate's eligibility to serve is challenged.

The Health and Safety Code section and the constitutional residency provision are among those parts of the law that may not have merit. But they are the law, and for the legislature to pick and choose which laws it will obey and which it will ignore is not much of an example to set.

CHANGE THE law, or give the people the opportunity to change the constitution. "Fac ut dico, non ut facio" is not a suitable maxim for lawmakers.

Adoption problem

EDITOR:

During the past year or so, I have been going through the process of adoption with the sincere hope of adopting a girl to enrich our family and to give her a home that would be beneficial to both her and us.

My son, who is 7 years old, has always thought this would be a great idea, even after I had explained to him that he would have to make several major adjustments.

However, I now find that because of certain archaic beliefs within all the adoption agencies, a single man cannot adopt a girl. There is no law against it, it's just "policy." This "policy" states that when a girl is available a married couple is considered first, then a single woman, and lastly a single man.

I must agree with the agency that marital status should be considered when evaluating a home for placement of a child, but I feel it is weighted entirely too heavily. With the high rate of divorce in this society, and the vast amount of single parents that now exist, I simply cannot agree that married couples are automatically better parents simply because they are couples. I can see the advantages and disadvantages of both single and married parents, and there is not that large a discrepancy between them.

The strongest and most often heard statement from most people is that a girl needs a woman around, just as a boy needs a man. I suppose this fallacy has been accepted as fact for so long that our society finds it difficult to believe it could be otherwise. I also hear that a child needs to learn the relationship between one parent and the other, or between a man and a woman, if you prefer. Why is a permanent relationship with one person more important than several between the single parent and his or her sexual and/or emotional partner? Either one can teach the child how to relate to people, depending upon the emotional and psychological maturity of the parent(s). The marital status of the parent has very little to do with these factors of maturity. It is difficult to develop good relationships, either married or single, and in some instances it is even more difficult for the single parent.

The belief that a girl needs a woman is obviously sexist thinking, in my opinion. It is my hope that eventually people will come to realize that a child is a human being first, and male or female second; and the needs of either are much more similar than they are different. Love, affection, consideration, patience, tenderness and discipline are needs common to all children and the most important ones. And inherent in all these is understanding: if a parent has an open, honest relationship with the child, understanding will almost automatically exist, and the sex of either will be immaterial.

Phone book type

EDITOR:

The print in phone books was in yesterday printed in type sizes large enough to read. I use directory assistance not because I can't read but because I can't see the fine print in poorly lighted areas.

Directory assistance abuse is not the public but the telephone companies' small directory print in most cases. If you are still a doubter, ask a few people who wear glasses when they first became aware they needed them. I bet most of the answers will say "reading the telephone book."

Hidden contributions

EDITOR:

Political contributions come in various forms. Say a non-presidential candidate has three radio commentaries per day. Plus a weekly newspaper column.

Should these be considered as political contributions later, if he becomes a real candidate?

No matter who sponsors the radio programs, in my opinion, they are political contributions. In an indirect way.

This is written by a nonpolitical nitpicker.

Logomachy

EDITOR:

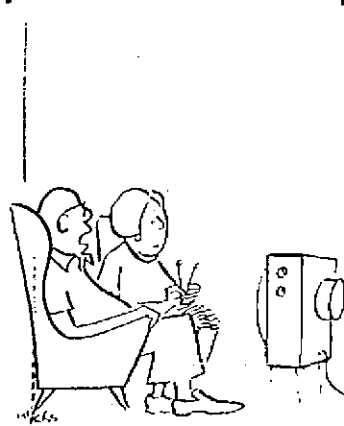

Your editorial "Cigarette addict" (July 27) was well written — except for one small criticism.

In journalism classes, lectures by members of the press corps, and our labor press association, we are told that the average reader has a limited vocabulary.

Your use of the term "encomiums" was the first time I recall seeing its use in news or editorial writing. Can you justify the use of such an uncommon word in an editorial that reaches such a vast percent of common people among your readers?

Looking for good news

NEW YORK — Belatedly, journalism is taking President Nixon's advice to dwell on what is good about America, and the result is a spate of print from American places where life is good.

Reporters and commentators, illustrating the power of positive seeking, have uncovered five or six medium-sized cities where government is not in ruin and citizen relationships are downright human.

OTHERS HAVE discovered prairie towns where hardly anyone is feeling murderous. Remnants of the antique village life have been discovered thriving and enthusiastically reported upon to orchestrate the swelling theme that yes, yes, there is still stability, peace and decency in American life.

This tendency to emphasize the unbarbarous is still slight, but there is a flood effect in journalism which often turns today's trickle into tomorrow's torrent. Already one feels the subtle compulsion to roam the rural byways — to "get out into the country," as the scolds always say, "and get back in touch with the real America."

It would be pleasant to do so. I know the places to go for the kind of news that warms the tired spirit. There is Brunswick, Maine, clean as a Dutch kitchen and stiff with 19th century dignity under those great old elms.

I WOULD dwell heavily on those elms and omit mention of the place in their shadow which has the fullest collection of pornographic literature north of 42nd Street. It is, after all, a college town.

I would go to Red Oak, Iowa, in the corn-harvest season and see those groovy, strong, white American youngsters in their band uniforms, or to Williamsburg, Va., and dwell on the tourists at quiet grips with their moving 18th century tradition.

I would drive up the Snake River and into the billowing gold wheat fields of eastern Oregon and down the Columbia River and buy cherries at roadside stands and dilate on the vast quiet that covers the bulk of the continent.

THEN I would drive down the Oregon shoreline and eat small oysters in a restaurant overlooking the Pacific and stop at Little River, Calif., and describe the deer that come down the meadow and stand outside your window peering in, and not depress anyone by mentioning the mountainsides ravaged by timber-cutting.

Things are wonderful, indeed, if you know where to look, and look

Russell Baker

New York Times News Service

without questioning, but the fact is that this wonderful America is not the America most Americans now inhabit. Most of us live in cities or their overflow. Brunswick, Red Oak, Williamsburg and Little River are more alien to most of us than Manchester, Frankfurt or Naples, and possibly less relevant.

Most of the bad news from America comes from the cities, because most of them are very bad news indeed, and because most of us live in or around them, this means that most of our news is unpleasant. The cities poison not only their own air and human relationships within them, but also the larger communities around them.

IN HIGHLY urbanized states like Massachusetts and New York, the decay of the cities spreads into the entire state, placing heavy financial drains on state budgets which plague taxpayers far from the scene, heighten sectional animosities and guarantee short lifespans for governors.

Getting the federal government to recognize that the problem of cities is the nation's problem — after all, cities are where the nation lives — is almost impossible, and for good reason.

The great bulk of the money Washington takes out of the cities is necessary to sustain the country's immense war machine. If it had to devote anything like equal sustenance to reduce the bad news from the cities, it would have to go bankrupt or confront a taxpayers' revolt.

Not surprisingly, Washington prefers to issue press releases declaring the urban problem solved and blaming local governments for not knowing how to manage money. You can't solve problems by throwing money at them — this is a current piece of Washington wisdom cited in justification of pretending that everything will come out all right in the end.

YET THE core of the urban problem is the competition between cities and suburbs for the limited tax money left over after Washington has plucked the goose. Washington itself is a classic example.

A black city with a limited tax base, it provides income for white suburbs of Maryland and Virginia, but instead of being treated as a single urban entity in which the pie is cut evenly, the higher-income suburbs say, "I'm all right, Jack," use the government payroll to improve their local communities and let the city make do.

It is a common problem. New York has it, too. The city is an obsolete tax unit, a storage area to keep the poor from becoming a drain on the suburban classes. The solution, one would suppose, would involve establishing a new definition of what the urban taxable unit should be.

THIS IS the sort of vast, controversial undertaking only federal leadership could possibly manage, as it would involve a return of federal revenues to sprawling urban units rather than the out-moded state and city governments that now receive them.

The feds show no signs of doing anything but running, however. Mostly for re-election. Meantime, we shall have to keep straining for good news.

These are do-or-die for Reagan. It takes time to rent offices, to hire staff, to arrange printing, to prepare commercials, to plan mailings, to take polls. Volunteers are vital, but volunteers have to be incessantly patched, praised, and pumped up. It all takes time.

Meanwhile, from the Ford camp, one hears the muffled trombones of a bandwagon tuning up. The President Ford Committee, at 1200 18th St., N.W., evidences plenty of hustle-bustle. Manager Bo Callaway, having extricated his ample foot from his ample mouth, is moving nimbly. In New Hampshire, Florida, and elsewhere, his campaign committees are rapidly shaping up.

Conservatives may be forgiven a prayer that Reagan take the plunge. Reagan has the skills of which presidents are made.

Win or lose, a Reagan candidacy is important. If Ford should win the Republican nomination by default, he would enter the autumn campaign next year with an untested organization. Meanwhile, the combative Democrats would have been grabbing the headlines while the Republicans were having their snooze. The prospect holds small appeal.

Up and at 'im, Reagan! Fish or cut bait! Charge the ball! Let's you and him fight! August is a dull month, and if Reagan doesn't announce, it promises to stay August for the rest of the year.

Profits put before ethics

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Recent indictment of the Bunge Corporation and 13 of its former officials and employees points up again the sorry record of federal law enforcement as it pertains to the big multinational corporate operations.

While the major responsibility is on the various political heads of the departments, it reflects also upon the career bureaucracy of the Agriculture Department and the Department of Justice when the same big corporations and the same corporation officials are in the federal indictment spotlight again in connection with the same old frauds.

BUNGE'S record over the past 25 years illustrates the lack of any firm ethical standards within a number of our largest corporations, where there is a premium on protection and promotion of those charged with crimes that profit the corporation.

Bunge, one of a half-dozen large international companies that control most U.S. grain exports, was indicted in June 1954, along with five of its officers, on charges of having imported Canadian grain that was "unfit for human consumption" and illegally selling it for food in the United States, as well as mixing it with good U.S. wheat for sale to foreign buyers with government subsidies.

Walton F. Mulloy, one of the officials indicted in July by a federal grand jury in New Orleans, was among the five officials indicted at Galveston, Tex., in 1954 in connection with the importation, illegal mixing, and illegal sales of "unfit" Canadian wheat.

THE 1954 indictment charged that the Bunge Corporation and its five officials had conspired to import huge quantities of the low grade Canadian wheat, had used it illegally in domestic and foreign sales, collected subsidies, and then falsified the records systematically to hide the unlawful scheme.

After the indictment was returned, the Justice Department permitted the corporation to pay a $5,000 fine, and dismissed the criminal charges against Mulloy and the other four officials.

Attorney General Brownell denied there was any favoritism in the dismissal of the charges against the officers of Bunge, and explained that one of the key witnesses — an employee of a Bunge subsidiary — had found some lost records that raised doubt about testimony he had given to the grand jury.

DURING THE period of time that the charges were pending against the Bunge officials in 1953 and 1954, one of the indicted Bunge vice presidents, Andre Herschler, was named by the Agriculture Department as a member of an advisory committee dealing with international grain sales.

Government officials with the responsibility for investigation and prosecution in the recent New Orleans indictments had no knowledge of the earlier indictment of Bunge officials, and no interest in finding out the details or disposition of the earlier cases.

And on July 29, 1975, one week after the indictment of Bunge and sportation and Warehouse Division, Bunge officials stated that the written communication was "to confirm and to guarantee" that none of the indicted officials "are working" for the corporation.

While the public was given the impression that Bunge had cleaned house on its errant officials, Agriculture Department officials said it was their understanding that Bunge had "suspended some of the officials with pay" pending the outcome of their criminal charges.

George Hughes, vice president and spokesman for Bunge, would neither confirm nor deny reports that Walton Mulloy and some other officials are still on the Bunge payroll.

"IT IS possible that some of them are still on the payroll but are suspended," Hughes said. "I don't know, and I'm not going to inquire. On advice of counsel, we are not making comments on the status of any of those indicted persons."

Hughes said he could only confirm that Bunge's licenses have been reinstated.

Gerald Oien, chief of the warehouse service branch of the Transportation and Warehouse Division of the Department of Agriculture, said Bunge has assured them that none of the 13 indicted officials "are working" and "that is as far as we want to go with it."

Oien said he had "heard" that some Bunge officials had been suspended with pay, but "I don't know it to be a fact."

"And I'm not going to ask them any more questions about it, because I can't see as that point makes much difference to us," Oien said.

OIEN SAID he was unfamiliar with the 1954 indictment of Bunge and Walton Mulloy, then an assistant vice president and since promoted to vice president and regional manager, of the Bunge Corporation's Kansas City, Mo., office.

Mulloy was the highest official of the Bunge Corporation indicted in New Orleans in connection with the shortweighting.

Oien declined to make public the text of the Bunge letter to the Department of Agriculture which was the basis of reinstatement of federal warehouse licenses.

"WE PROMISED Bunge we wouldn't make public information on their handling of personnel problems, and we consider it part of our examination file and exempt from the Freedom of Information Act," Oien said.

Despite its record and the charges of a 12-year conspiracy, the big grain firm is still not without its friends in high places.

Last chance for Reagan

WASHINGTON — "There is a side in the affairs of men," said Brutus, "which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune." Ronald Reagan this month is still waiting for his boat.

It is now or never for the former governor of California. If he intends seriously to compete for the Republican presidential nomination, he cannot delay beyond the end of August.

The Citizens for Reagan committee opened a suite of offices two weeks ago at 2021 L St., N.W., in Washington, with veterans Lyn Nofziger and John Sears in charge. Visiting newsmen find the headquarters in a state of suspended animation: no pictures, no buttons, no handouts, none of the hustle-bustle one expects.

James J.

Kilpatrick

The classic recipe for rabbit stew, a visitor remarks, begins with this instruction: first catch the rabbit. Does he have a rabbit? Will Reagan run?

On a probability scale of 10, Nofziger says confidently, Reagan now stands at 9.5. Well, then, asks the visitor, what's the hold-up? Nofziger studies the ceiling; Sears examines the floor.

One explanation is that, so long as he is not officially a candidate, Reagan may continue his radio commentaries. These now are heard on some 350 stations, according to Nofziger, where they reach "50 to 70 million persons" a day. "How many?" asks the skeptical guest. Well, 20 or 30 million. How many? Uh-huh. A lot of people hear Reagan on the radio.

Time slips away. Big names slip away. Big money slips away. The Young Republicans last month gave quiet notice that if nothing happens by Labor Day, they will have to reassess their position. Such pro-Reagan publications as Human Events grow restless: Reagan's record during two terms as governor demonstrates that he is not an indecisive man; but he is now leaving an indecisive image. Such images are dangerous.

More is involved than "image." A national presidential campaign is an enormously complex and costly problem in planning, personnel, and logistics. Less than seven months remain before the New Hampshire primary on March 2. Florida's primary is March 9.

City Hall keys go to mayor

Lomita's city administrator, Allen B. Stephenson, presented the keys to the community's new City Hall to Mayor James Cole Saturday as an overflow crowd of 450 at the building's dedication gave a standing ovation.

Stephenson has only nine more days as administrator before he retires. Completion of the city hall was one of his highest priorities in the seven years he has served the city.

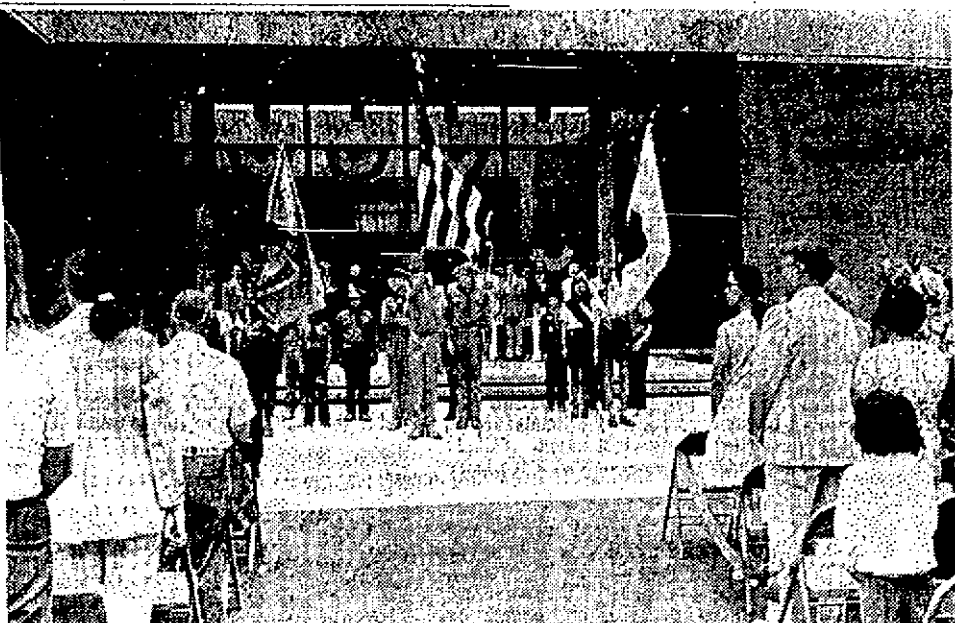

The 20,900-square-foot building, at 24300 Narbonne Ave., was designed by Maurice H. Fleishman and built by A.J. Padelford and son at a cost of $1,043,000.

In addition to the city offices and a 68-seat council chamber, it provides office space for the Lomita Chamber of Commerce and a community meeting room.

Under construction at the site are a branch county library and a county services building to house an assessor's office and building department.

THEY ARE scheduled for completion later this year, along with a sheriff's station at the southern end of Narbonne Avenue.

Others participating in the ceremony were Mike Armbrust, chairman of the city's Park and Recreation Commission; Rep. Glenn M. Anderson, State Sen. James Q. Wedworth, Assemblyman Vincent Thomas, State Sen. Robert S. Stevens, Supervisor James Hayes and Assemblyman Robert Beverly.

John Wayne uses old tires

New oil source given

Actor John Wayne has entered a business venture—how to make oil from old tires and coal—and he can't get the government interested.

With Greek shipping magnate George Livanos and inventor Bill Chambers, he's founded the Duke Engineering Co. at Irvine. It's part of what he calls DECO Industries.

He said it developed the oil salvage method, but nobody seems to care.

Wayne, whose nickname is Duke, complained that "the government has set aside $310 million for research to produce oil like we recover and it won't even check our system which can produce it."

He said that when he wrote to Washington, D.C., he got back a letter with an application form instructing him to seek a research grant.

"I can't seem to get through to them that DECO isn't asking for government research money," Wayne said. "We are just trying to tell the government that our company has a system out of the test tube stage, to produce fuel from old tires that would save the government a helluva lot of money."

Duke said DECO has set up a small pilot plant in the Irvine Industrial Complex and that it can produce high-quality oil from salvaged tires and plastics and coal.

He called it "high grade stuff," just like he praises things in the movies he makes.

According to Chambers, a 60-year-old long-time friend of the actor, the reclaiming system is pollution free.

Other than to say that their system is lot less expensive than others they didn't talk economics.

When the reclaiming is from oil tires and plastics,

"we get oil worth $21 a barrel," they said.

With coal, recovery brings oil worth $11 a barrel.

The company is handling about five tons of waste material every day, converting it to oil.

Chambers said there are enough old tires in the country now "to keep us busy for 40 years."

At least four barrels of oil come from every ton of tires. The experimental plant, at 16591 Noyes Ave., has been operating for about two years.

Records may be denied in probe of D.A. spending

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

A special committee of two Orange County supervisors, named to investigate "possible misuse of county funds," has made demands for records of the district attorney's office.

It appeared Saturday, however, that their request might be denied on grounds the records are "sealed and secret."

The supervisors are Ralph Diedrich and Laurence J. Schmitt.

said the committee may not be able to see the records.

The supervisory subpoena powers are limited to investigations of a routine nature involving county officials and employees and do not extend to criminal matters, the source said.

The supervisors undertook the investigation in a surprise move shortly after they were balked by Hicks from transferring 22 of his top investigators to the sheriff's office.

Hicks went to court and got an injunction, enjoining the supervisors from "raiding" the investigative staff of the district attorney. Rankled, the supervisors pledged to appeal the ruling.

It all seemed blatant sex to me, Tom bending over to smooch them hungrily, and I said so to some older women in our own group. They hooted at me.

"You should wake up and find out what's going on in the world!" they told me.

What's going on is simply that the males are the important sex symbols now — not the girls any more — and maybe

My B.W. likes Walter Matthau — for his humor. I couldn't drum up any votes for Johnny Carson or Ed McMahon, although I've heard privately that they do rather well.

Then we have Elton John, Sonny Bono (SONNY BONO?), Paul Anka, Ryan O'Neal, Rod Stewart, Sammy Cahn, and — as somebody said I was going pretty far afield — Julie Styne, plus Frank Sinatra and a personal friend of mine, Tony (The Luv Machine) Messina.

Sea Scape grand opening today

A grand opening today introduces Sea Scape, a new community of elegant townhomes near the beach and Huntington Harbour.

The limited, private neighborhood is a development of Gregg P. Kent Corp. and offers 71 one and two bedroom townhomes with up to 2 1/2 baths, priced from $36,450 with excellent conventional financing.

Some of the units qualify for the 5 per cent tax credit.

CUSTOM-QUALITY appointments are included throughout the spacious townhomes. There are cathedral ceilings, designer fireplaces, sunken living rooms, wet bars and shag carpeting throughout.

Convenience-planned kitchens with luminous ceilings feature deluxe built-in appliances including continuous-cleaning ovens and dishwashers. Extentors of the two story townhomes are in attractive, rustic-contemporary styling, all with private patios and balconies and enclosed garages.

The recreation-oriented development features a lavish private clubhouse, fully equipped for residents' enjoyment, a tennis court, swimming pool and jacuzzi.

Lush landscaping with a reflection pool surrounds the townhomes, providing attractive views from all the residences.

TO PRESERVE the beauty of the neighborhood, utilities are underground and professional maintenance of the grounds, recreation facilities and exteriors of the townhomes is provided through the homeowners association.

Housing leaders take action steps

With housing starts having plummeted to a 28-year low as of the end of June, leaders of the nation's housing industry have responded by adopting a series of action steps aimed both at bringing homebuyers back into the market and ensuring the continued viability of the industry.

Reporting on measures taken during the executive meeting of the National Association of Home Builders, just-concluded in Steamboat Springs, Colo., NAHB Area Vice President Eric Wittenberg of Los Angeles said the actions were among the most forceful taken by the trade organization in recent years.

Foremost among the measures passed overwhelmingly by NAHB's leaders, said Wittenberg, was President J. S. Norman's recommendation that President Ford call for an immediate Housing Economic Summit to relieve the "current intolerable situation" in housing.

"PRESIDENT NORMAN called attention during the meeting to the bleak situation of housing today and said that it was a clear signal to policy makers that they have been continually and consistently misreading basic factors in what will happen to housing," Wittenberg said.

During the meeting, said Wittenberg, figures were revealed that housing starts in June were down to a 1,078,000 annual rate, 5 per cent below May, and that the total housing starts for the first six months of this year — 512,900 units — was the lowest six-month figure in 28 years.

Wittenberg also reported that NAHB has embarked on a course of trying to create a stable flow of mortgage funds at reasonable costs to the homebuyer in order to overcome the damaging cyclical nature of the industry. Accordingly, NAHB called for a national commitment, to be demonstrated by an act of Congress, to achieve this goal.

POSITIVE NAHB recommendations in this area include strengthening the specialized financial institutions serving the housing industry via tax credits on savings accounts and tax exemptions when 80 per cent of an institution's funds are invested in residential mortgages.

• Restoring the differential between interest that commercial banks can pay savers and what savings and loans can pay back to 1/2 per cent from 1/4 per cent and up to 1 per cent if possible. This would encourage increased deposits in savings and loans.

• Compel pension funds to invest a percentage of their assets into residential mortgages in order to maintain their tax-exempt status.

• Require all federal agencies to have minimum $10,000 denominations on Federal notes to discourage withdrawals of funds from savings and loans.

In a related matter, President Norman reported that representatives of major U.S. housing, savings and loans, banking, realtors and labor met in Washington early in July to explore ways of working together in ongoing efforts to stabilize the mortgage market.

Participants agreed to set up a task force on the matter and a subsequent meeting is slated for mid-August.

At Riviera Huntington

Close out buyers can save

The close out sale at Riviera Huntington Townhomes in Huntington Beach is nearing completion, with the possibility of substantial savings being realized by close out buyers.

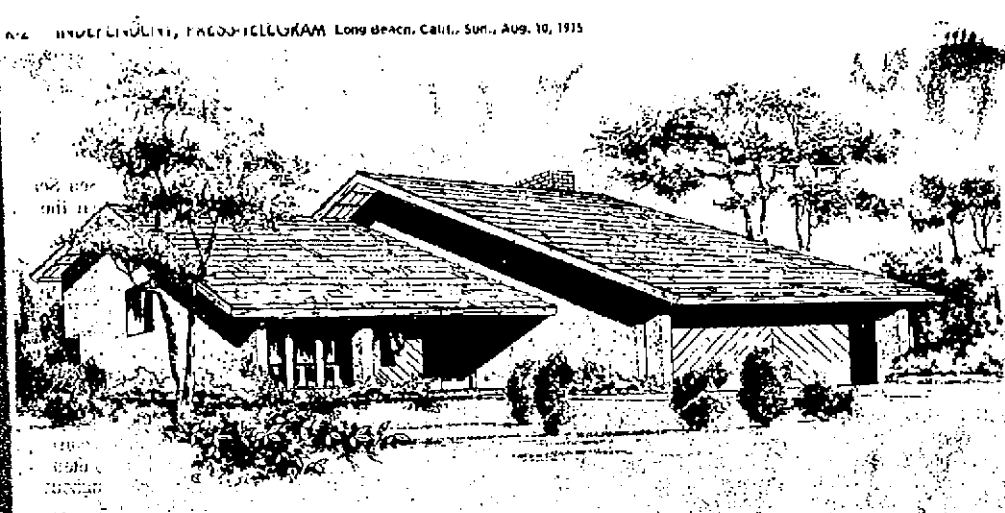

Sales Manager Virg Fo-

land explained the financial advantage of buying now. "Our next unit of homes is being planned for only three blocks away — and cost projections indicate that selling prices will be as much as $10,000 more than for comparable homes now available during the Riviera Huntington close out."

"This means," Foland added, "that prompt action will allow a new home buyer to realize a saving

Orange County Residential activity up

Acceleration of residential activity in Orange County is indicated in statistics compiled by First American Title Insurance Co., and released in its quarterly publication Recorded Facts.

Sales of units in single family detached and planned unit developments during the second quarter of this year were up almost 70 per cent over the first quarter, according to Philip W. Kunisch, the firm's market research director.

Projected development showed a much greater increase, Kunisch said, with 50 subdivisions comprising 3,135 lots recorded during the second quarter, compared with only 19 tracts having 812 lots recorded in the first three months of this year.

Sales totals for the comparative periods were 2,581 in April, May and June, as against 1,530 in January, February and March, for an increase of 68.7 per cent.

Whittier Monterey's layout impressive

Freedom from the routine maintenance of a home's upkeep is among the benefits to new homebuyers at Whittier Monterey, the newest development built by Showcase Homes. The maintenance of the landscaped grounds, recreation facilities and exteriors of townhomes in the view-oriented, hilltop community of two and three bedroom homes is managed by the homeowners association of which each buyer is a voting member upon close of escrow.

"Townhome living yields the comfort, luxury and value of single family detached home ownership combined with the convenience of apartment living, plus an important increase in personal and property security," said William J. Krueger, president of the pioneer building firm, active for more than 30 years.

At Whittier Monterey, no family lives above or below another and because of the cluster design, each family has maximum privacy. Attached double garages have direct inside access and space for individual laundry facilities is located in the garage, which is also equipped with automatic door openers.

WINDING DRIVES throughout the community preserve the residential area from traffic congestion and noise. Shade trees, lawns and shrubs border the drives, walkways and recreation centers.

Two tear-drop shaped swimming pools, two therapy pools and an owners clubhouse are located within the grounds of the terraced hillside community. The unusual multi-level townhomes have views of the San Gabriel Mountains, the dramatic skyline of downtown Los Angeles, and the striking vista which stretches to the higher grades of the Palos Verdes Peninsula. The new townhomes are within easy commuting distance of all major employment centers in the Los Angeles basin, Orange County and the Inland Empire.

Whittier Monterey is the latest in a series of highly successful townhome developments built by Showcase Homes. With full air-conditioning, wall-to-wall carpeting, complete draperies, built-in kitchen appliances and a long list of luxury features, the townhomes are priced from $47,950.

FURNISHED MODELS and a sales information center, maintained by Kurth and Associates, exclusive sales agent for the $8 million view-oriented community, are open daily.

To reach Whittier Monterey, exit the San Gabriel River Freeway at Beverly Boulevard, drive east on Beverly to Workman Mill Road and turn left on Workman Mill Road. Drive to Sierra

Weber salesman hits $1 million

A million dollars a year in total sales volume is the goal of nearly all top real estate salespeople.

Few ever realize it for it is an elusive and challenging goal.

Dale Erickson, salesman for Weber Realty, 3235 E. Anaheim Street, Long Beach, not only realized these goals, but substantially exceeded them. It took him only six months!

In the first six months of 1975, he sold in excess of $1 million.

To complement this feat, $700,000 of his listings were sold for a total sales volume of nearly $1.75 million.

Erickson came into the real estate business and went to work for Weber Realty only two years ago, making his achievement all the more amazing.

His background was in banking and real estate investments.

He said his goal for 1975 is a total sales volume of $3 million; a goal he feels he should reach sometime in December.

Cement block structure

Construction is near completion on the Queen's Surf, a 17-story cement block structure located at 1750 E. Ocean Blvd., Long Beach. One-third of the 195 beach-front condominiums ranging in price from $41,500 to $85,950 are already occupied. Facilities include swimming pool, Jacuzzi, sauna and recreation room. Security parking by card key is available. The Queen's Surf project, begun in 1972, was delayed several times due to passage of Proposition 20 (the Coastal Initiative) and workers' strikes. Angle photograph was shot from down on beach side.

Broadmoor 'Larkspur' ideal for entertaining

In the "Larkspur" plan at Deerfield's Town Homes, entertaining can be a delight because of the attention given to placement of activity areas.

The dining and living rooms are located next to each other and easily become one large area for entertaining. The same is true of the plan's family room and the roomy private patio, both just an arm's length away from a generous-sized kitchen.

LARKSPUR is one of four floorplans being built in the Deerfield Town Home series in The Irvine Company's planned community of Deerfield by Broadmoor Homes, Inc., of Tustin.

"Larkspur" is a two-story plan containing 1,540 square feet of floorspace, three bedrooms and two and one-half baths.

Prices for the "Larkspur" currently start at $42,490, with prices on other Deerfield Town Home plans beginning at $37,990.

A dramatic architectural touch to the Larkspur's design is the two-story high dining room, overlooked by a balcony on the second level, which adds visual volume and space not normally found in a town home.

THE PLAN'S fully-enclosed two-car garage is situated directly across the patio.

The master suite has its own private bath and the second full bath is centrally located to the two secondary bedrooms, both of which have views of the rear patio below.

Additional features included in the basic price include ceramic tile entry, masonry fireplace situated in the living room.

DEERFIELD Town Home kitchens include General Electric eye level automatic electric ranges and continuous cleaning ovens, disposals, dishwashers, range hoods, stained hardwood cabinets and built-in pantries.

Other Broadmoor Deerfield Town Homes range in size from 1,106 to 1,619 square feet, offering two or three bedrooms and two or 2½ baths.

The community of Deerfield is a 212-acre, $46.7-million development scheduled for completion in 1977.

To reach the development from the Santa Ana Freeway, take the Culver Drive off-ramp and turn southwest on Culver. Turn left into Deerfield. The models are located at the corner of Deerfield and Fawn Glen West. From the San Diego Freeway, turn north on Culver, then right on Deerfield.

Model homes are open from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m.

School teachers energy saving

An elementary school in Reston, Va., built into a hillside so its interior is shielded from outdoor temperature extremes, is said to be a considerable energy saver.

The architects maintain that simple body heat, heat from lights and from solar collectors assisted by a mechanical system will heat the school for considerably less than the average 49 cents a square foot it costs for electric heat in other Fairfax County schools.

Wages hit $10

While the number of employed construction workers continues to drop, their wages continue to rise. According to the National Association of Home Builders, the average wage in the construction industry is approaching $10 an hour, up more than 9 per cent from 1974.

What's Your Problem?

Selling your present home doesn't mean instant profit

By DON CAMPBELL

It's a matter of record that many of the country's biggest fortunes can be traced back to real estate — the buying and selling of it. And, even today as the country tries to scramble out of a bone-jarring recession, the number of home owners who have sold their property in the past couple of years and lost money on the transaction are still vastly outnumbered by those who have done so and — hard times notwithstanding — made money in the process.

But, it's no get-rich-quick proposition, and there's certainly no guarantee that you can't lose money trading homes.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

I purchased a 50-year-old, two-story, wood frame home in a desirable location. I have been in this house two years and have done a lot of minor fix-up repairs inside and out. My land assessment has gone up $2,000 during this time also. What is the approximate percentage that my home has appreciated?

I have an 8 per cent, 25-year mortgage at this time. I have no capital to speak of other than what I would get from the sale of my house. Do you feel that it would be possible for me to sell my house and purchase a newer home while still maintaining the same approximate monthly mortgage payments? — Mr. G.T. St. (Easton, Pa.)

ANSWER: I hate to be a wet blanket and nip your dreams of parlaying this house into a fortune, but at the moment, I doubt very much if you would come out much, if any, money ahead on such a transaction.

Of course, admittedly, I'm working a little bit in the dark here because I don't know how much you paid for the house two years ago, nor do I have any way of knowing how real estate values in your area have performed during this period. And this latter point, of course, is the critical factor — in one section of town, home prices may have gone up 10 per cent a year during the past two years. Ten blocks away they may have held steady.

Let's say that, hypothetically, you paid $40,000 for this home two years ago and that it has enjoyed an 8-per-cent-a-year appreciation in value (which is roughly the national average). This appreciation, of course, takes into account the $2,000 increase in your land assessment. At this rate the $40,000 house that you bought two years ago should be worth, compounded, about $46,656 today — a $6,656 "profit."

Well and good, but let's say that you now sell it for $46,656. Your brokerage commission alone will knock it down about $3,265, so your profit has shrunk to $3,391. And when you buy another house that is comparable to this, the buying expenses — such as points — are going to bring you down almost to point zero.

Unfortunately, too, if you go house-hunting now, you're going to be hard-pressed to get 8 per cent mortgage money, which means — in order to keep the new payments in line with your present payments — that you're going to have to settle for less house.

Don't be discouraged. Your house is (probably) doing nicely, so don't rush things. Give it another couple of years and then run another appraisal.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

I saw your article about the lady in her 70s who bought a house for $12,000 and is selling it for $30,000. Good luck to her!

My question is: I am handicapped from a stroke in 1970. I paid $21,000 for a house in 1960 and am trying to sell it for $38,000. Where would that put me in the way of taxes and all? — Mr. J.B. (Long Beach)

ANSWER: It's a little hard to tell without knowing more than you're telling me. While the letter about the 70-year-old lady interested you, you say nothing to suggest that you, too, qualify for the once-in-a-lifetime tax break on capital gains, so I'll just have to assume that the standard capital gains situation fits you.

Your tax, of course, is based on the "adjusted sales price" of your home. This is the selling price less any major additions to the property that you have made over the years as well as any fix-up expenses incurred in the 90 days before the actual sale. From this adjusted sales price you deduct the original cost of the house and arrive at the profit which is taxable as a capital gain.

If you replace the house you've sold within the next year, and if the new home costs as much as or more than the adjusted sales price of your old home, then there is no tax liability. (If you build a replacement home instead of buying an existing one, this is extended to 18 months).

Otherwise, the capital gains tax on your home is figured this way: half of the profit is tax-free and the other half is taxed at your normal tax rate (as ordinary income, that is.)

I know that this isn't quite as precise an answer as you wanted, but honestly, you didn't tell me enough.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

A friend of mine and I have decided to pool our savings (that's about $20,000 in all) and go into partnership in a venture to buy up undeveloped land as a long-term investment.

We would appreciate any guidance you can give us. — Mr. P.K. (Buffalo, N.Y.)

ANSWER: It's an excellent idea, but it is, understandably, a tricky field and you are going to have to do your homework well. The days are pretty well gone when you could just go out blindly near any urban area and buy up and at $100 an acre with the reasonable expectation that it was going to appreciate in value.

There's a new and excellent reference book out on the subject by M. Watkins, who has written extensively on real estate matters. I recommend it to you: "Buying Land: How to Profit from the Last Great Land Boom" ($9.95, Quadrangle/The New York Times Book Co.)

Campbell welcomes your letters and comments, but can answer only representative questions of general interest. Write him in care of the I.P.T., Box 230, Long Beach, 90844.

Huntington Landmark rebate ends today

This is the final weekend that visitors may take advantage of the $750-$1,000 rebate program at Huntington Landmark, reports sales manager Bill Markas. The program expires at midnight tonight.

Markas said the special allowance program has resulted in more than 40 purchases at the beach-close development.

This special program allows buyers in the second phase where 48 units remain to do a number of things with their credits. Options for the credit allowance could include: an upgrading of carpet selections; adding of wall coverings; adding appliances; adding draperies or similar customizing new home touches.

You may also apply the allowance toward the buyers closing cost requirement. Complete information is available at the sales and information center.

EXTERIOR maintenance, landscaping and care of the landscaped greenbelts and recreational facilities is provided by a professional firm retained by the home-owner's association. The completely-walled community also boasts a 24-hour security guarded entrance.

The all-adult nature of the community is preserved by the requirement that all residents be at least 40 years of age, except that one spouse of a married couple may be under 40 if the other is over 40.

One hundred eighty units comprise this second building phase, representing a value of approximately $6 million. Prices within the community range from $30,990 to $38,990. Conventional financing is offered. Second phase sales are continuing at a rapid pace and already units in excess of $4 million have been sold.

The sales manager reports that today's active adults continue to be attracted to the beach-close homes.

"ONE OF THE reasons for the popularity enjoyed by this active adult group is our recreational center," Markas added.

A variety of recreational amenities are available in and around the complex he continued, whether the individual prefers group or private activities.

Facilities for group social activities are provided in a large clubhouse that features dining and card rooms, a billiard room, art studio, photo lab, pottery and wood shops.

Other recreational amenities include a swimming pool, hot water whirlpool bath, gymnasium, putting green, two tennis courts, and a paddle tennis court.

Each Huntington Landmark unit is allocated an enclosed garage with built-in storage, as well as an additional parking space. The sales prices include wall to wall carpeting in the living room, master bedroom, secondary bedrooms and hallway, and efficient forced air heating.

MODELS are located at 8641 Atlanta Ave., midway between Beach Boulevard and Magnolia Street. The sales center is open daily from 10 a.m. and information may be obtained by calling (714) 536-8847.

Huntington Landmark is a project of Signal Landmark Properties, Inc., one of the Signal Companies.

San Clemente unites

Seventy-five per cent of the active home builders in San Clemente have joined forces to promote the community and to inform potential home buyers of the broad range of styles and prices now available, according to L. C. (Bob) Albertson, director of marketing for Broadmoor Homes, and president of the San Clemente Advancement Council (SCAC), the builders' group.

"To further these goals, we have established a cooperative advertising and public relations campaign," said Albertson.

Ten builders, offering single-family detached homes and condominiums priced from $39,900 to $89,000, are currently participating in the four-month-old program.

TO MAKE it easier for home shoppers to visit the new residential neighborhoods in San Clemente, S.C.A.C. has initiated an on-going San Clemente Home Tour.

Utilize dining room area

By EMILY MALINO

As we get away from the single-purpose dining room, we are also abandoning the traditional dining-table-and-chair combination.

A dining room should have many uses, particularly since its designated use often falls far short of its actual use. Many folks prefer the ease of dining in the kitchen or, at best, only using the dining room for one or two meals a day.

It makes sense, then, to try to make the most of this gorgeous square footage by using it also as a study or a library or a hobby or garden room.

IT MAKES the same sense to devise new and flexible table and chair arrangements. The conventional way, a table and a set of matching chairs, is fine for a small space where there may only be room for a graceful round table and four comfortable chairs.

But in a larger room, other systems can be devised to make the furniture serve a multitude of purposes and still look like a proper dining room. One of my favorites is to modularize the dining table itself.

There is a long history to modular dining tables. For at least two or three centuries, the English have been making banquet tables that break down into two end side boards and a center drop-leaf table is the daily dining table and the two end sections are used as separate consoles; or the two end sections are used together to form a round or square table for daily use, while the drop-leaf, with its leaves down, is used as a sideboard.

THE ENGLISH, being very clever furniture-makers, have devised many versions of these banquet tables over the centuries and the only thing wrong with them is their price and their size — they are geared for large, baronial homes and are unsuitable for today's modern and compact dining room.

PLAYING MUSICAL CHAIRS in designing a multi-purpose dining room table will give you a room that can be used for a multitude of purposes.

But that doesn't mean you can't take off on this idea and work out your own modular system. I've seen many of these and they work very well in small spaces.

There is the direct spin-off of the proper banquet table, one rectangular or square table in the center of the room with two narrow end pieces being used as consoles until they are needed to enlarge the table, and there are many versions of this as well.

In a room I designed I used an even simpler system; I found two, very plain and practical 42-inch square Parsons tables with white plastic laminated tops and legs lacquered to match.

INCIDENTALLY, these tables are not named for a religious cleric, but rather for the Parsons School of Design in New York, where this particular style first became popular.

In this long awkward room I placed one of the tables squarely in front of the beautiful old window at the narrow end of the room and flanked it with two small armless classic chrome-and-wicker dining chairs on each side, a lovely space for breakfast where sunshine and plants help create the feeling of an outdoor veranda.

The other table is turned so that it is at right angles to the first, and then informally flanked with bamboo Calcutta arm chairs, a pleasant arrangement for cards, backgammon or an informal evening snack. A portable floor lamp provides additional light for reading or writing at this handy table.

When company is coming it is easy to put the two squares together, forming a spacious rectangle in the center of the room to seat eight.

THE NATURAL wicker seats of the modern chrome chairs combine happily with the natural bamboo color of the reproduction arm chairs.

With two of the arm chairs at the head and foot of the long table and one at the center, dividing the modern armless chairs on each side, the chairs create a good balance of size and shape that transforms these modest squares into a true banquet table fit for a king.

Burglarproof on vacation

Taking a trip with your family for the summer vacation?

Before you go, be sure and burglarproof your home, warns the Independent Insurance Agents Association of Orange County.

According to the association, adherence to some common sense precautions by homeowners can curtail the possibility of losses through burglary.

Household protection do's and don't's include:

- Cancel all home deliveries — newspaper, mail, etc. — by telephone or in person. DON'T cancel by leaving notes behind.

• Leave a key behind with a neighbor who can make changes in drapes or lighting to fool prospective burglars and pick up throwaway newspapers, flyers, etc. DON'T leave a "hidden" key behind.

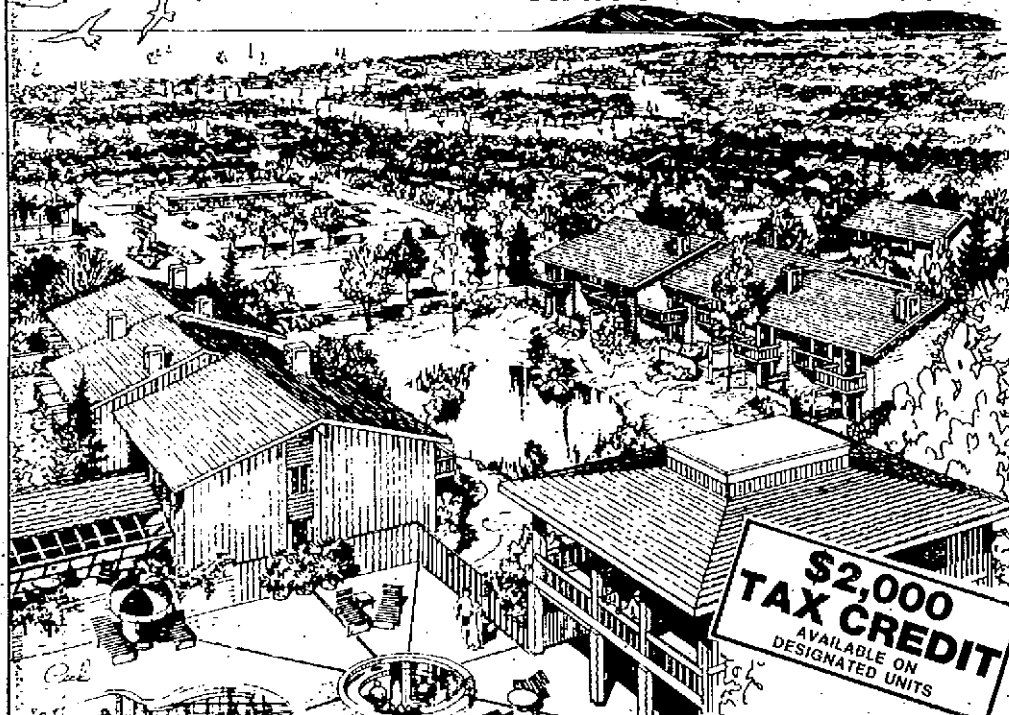

• Participate in Operation Identification by marking appliances and other property with your social security number. (Many independent insurance agents have electric engraving pencils for such use.)

• Arrange for care of your property grounds. Check to see if your locks are working properly, and secure all windows and doors. Remove valuables (cash, securities, furs) from your home.

• Notify your local police department how long you will be gone. DON'T place your trip plans in newspaper society columns — burglars can read, too! Wait until you return.

MOTOR LOG TO APPLE VALLEY

Fiat 131 is sports sedan.

Story and Photos
By BILL EMERY
Associate Auto Editor

Designed from the ground up for the American market, Fiat's new 131 series is Italy's number one automobile maker's answer to the modern motorist's needs. An exceptional blend of timeless styling, safety and performance, the 131 model is available as a two-door, four-door sedan and a station wagon.

To visit a high desert resort community designed from the bare land in 1946, we borrowed a sporty two-door-131 Fiat coupe from C. Bob Autrey Motors at 1860 Long Beach Blvd. in Long Beach and hit the trail for the Apple Valley Inn 6 miles east of Victorville.

The 131 models come with more standard equipment than any Fiat ever offered before. This includes a tilt steering wheel, electric tachometer, tinted glass, electric rear window defogger, all vinyl reclining front bucket seats, mag style wheels, even an illuminated front ashtray with a built in cigar lighter and much more.

For the first time ever offered as standard equipment, the station wagon and the four-door sedan feature a five-speed gearbox. Four speed is standard on the two door and five speed is optional. An automatic is available on all three Fiat 131 models. The five-speed gearbox, which was equipped on the motor log car, is actually an over-drive gear which permits the rugged and efficient dual overhead cam 1800cc four cylinder engine to be positively miserly with fuel economy.

This is not a slow car. The dual overhead cam engine is the same that powers the 124 Spider and sports coupe, however, the 131 series, compact on the outside, has as much room on the inside as many U.S. intermediate sized vehicles.

Fiat's 131 series offers rack and pinion steering which makes power steering equipment unnecessary. The list of other features included as standard equipment makes it understandable why Fiat outsells all other makes of cars in Europe.

Power assisted front disc brakes with drums in the rear are coupled with a unique rear brake pressure proportioning valve to minimize rear brake lockup. The emergency brake is easily adjustable from the inside of the car. Adding to the efficiency of good braking and handling are 160 SR 13 belted radial tires, which are also standard equipment.

The 131 sedan is a comfortable driving car on a trip and very responsive both in city driving and over winding mountain roads. It has an amazing capacity for luggage and accommodates six-foot-plus passengers with ease, we discovered.

Adding up all of the no-cost extras on the Fiat 131, its base delivery price of just over $4,000 is quite a value in today's new car market. And, with the price spiral still definitely unchecked, it is easy to see why Fiat is one of the very few imported as well as domestic cars ahead of sales over last year.

The quality and the value make Fiat's new 131 model one of the best buys of the year. For styling, safety and economy, this car definitely meets and beats the requirements of the American market.

Long Beach oil wildcatter, Newton T. Bass, Chairman of the Board of Reserve Oil and Gas Company, started developing Apple Valley in 1946 when the high desert valley was still like the barren "happy valley" frequented by early American Indian tribes.

Legend has it that even hostile tribes camped there in peace together. The Inn, built in Western motif, is in harmony with the past, offering the tranquility of the country together with the conveniences of the jet age.

As a fast growing community, the area now boasts of two shopping centers, a hospital, several schools, a new airport facility, a championship 18-hole golf course and country club, an ultra-modern thoroughbred horse breeding farm and other controlled commercial, residential and professional properties.

The Inn has long been the hub of activities in the valley and a favorite vacation spot for visitors from all over the country.

The food is outstanding and the detached cottages, which surround the Inn all have private patios, color TV, large picture windows with a sweeping view of the valley and fireplace for the winter months.

Glen Moor and his guitar entertain nightly in the Western bar while a lively combo plays dancing and listening music in the Blossom room just off the picturesque dining room.

A favorite gathering place during the summer days is the large swimming pool next to the patio dining area. It's also a casual setting for sunbathers on the lawn and ping pong enthusiasts.

Other outside activities are tennis, horseback riding, shuffle board, an 18-hole putting green, hiking and trout fishing. At the far end of the valley, dune buggies and trail bikes challenge the rugged hillside while golfers drive home to the 18th hole passing the beautiful homesite of the late Lloyd Mangrum, one of the leading pros in his time.

Outdoor steak fries are among the most popular of the Inn's planned activities. By haywagon or hiking, guests travel to a plateau behind the Inn overlooking the valley and backed by a steep rocky hillside. Steaks are cooked on huge barbecues and guests are served up liquid refreshments while a guitar-strumming cowboy entertains.

After dinner, the guests gather around a roaring campfire to join in an old fashioned songfest.

Across the road from the Inn is the Roy Rogers and Dale Evans museum which is a collection of mementos in the lives of Roy and Dale Evans. It is an interesting hour or so casual tour as well as an in depth window into the lives and careers of the two Western entertainers.

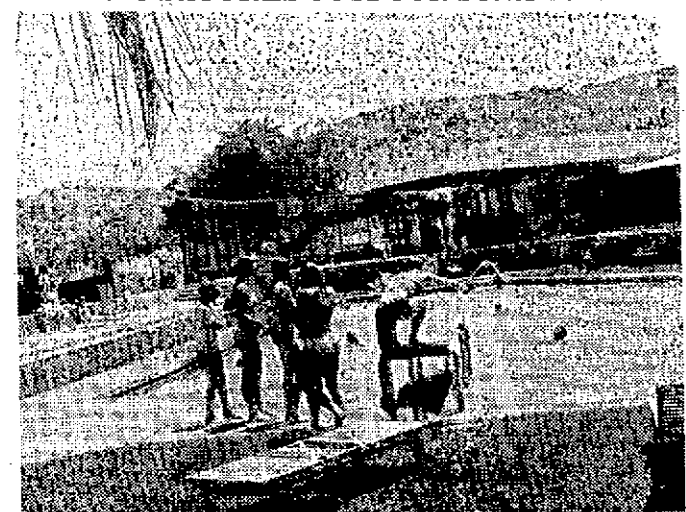

Driving home thru the back approach to Crestline and Lake Arrowhead, we visited Lake Silverwood, the new recreational lake created by the statewide Feather River Water Project. Facilities include boat launching ramps, swimming beaches, camp and trailer sites and a beautiful new scenic drive up the mountains. The Fiat 131 sedan climbed and tracked like a native.

Martin brash as ever

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

"If I wanted to hire a fiery manager, one who could create a little action, I would have hired Billy Martin. But then I would have had to fire him a year later." — Donald M. Grant, Chairman of the Board, New York Mets.

"With my track record, I figured it wouldn't be long before some team came looking for me." — Billy Martin, New York Yankee manager.

Billy Martin is back — as brash, buoyant and bittersweet as ever.

He was in exile for only 10 days after his unceremonious canning as manager of the Texas Rangers.

Ten days. Then the New York Yankees came calling, asking...no, make that begging...Billy Martin to come back to the city where it began for him as a player.

So Brash Billy is wearing pinstripes again — nobody knows for how long. Maybe until the end of the season. Maybe until his contract runs out at the end of the 1976 campaign. Maybe shorter. Maybe longer.

With the Yanks, Billy Martin will be doing one thing differently. Or, more factually, he won't be doing.

There is a stipulation in his contract, instigated by general manager Gabe Paul, a hard-nosed bargainer himself, which forbids Martin's meddling in front office affairs, a predilection which caused Martin's uncoupling from such major league outposts as Minnesota, Detroit and Texas.

Martin, a compulsive baseball busybody, has agreed to abide by these harsh, restrictive terms and he even smiles about it...as if a large burden has been removed from his back.

"All I've been asked to

Angels win

Story on S-4

do is run the club and, believe me, that's all I'm going to do."

Billy Martin can make things sound so simple. So depressing, too.

His dismissal from the helm of the Rangers occurred with dramatic suddenness and nearly left Martin a broken man and manager.

"I was fed up with baseball. I'd had it up to here," he said, pointing to his neck. "I said to myself this is it. Screw it. I was very dejected."

"I put in a lot of time and labor with the Rangers. It was a lot of work...so much teaching and changing. We turned them from thinking like losers into thinking like winners. Then it was over. It all happened so fast."

"That was the worst I've ever felt in my life."

Martin was not to be consoled by the words of Ranger owner Brad Corbett who fired off a barrage of complimentary remarks about his erstwhile skipper, accusing him basically of being a big shot without portfolio.

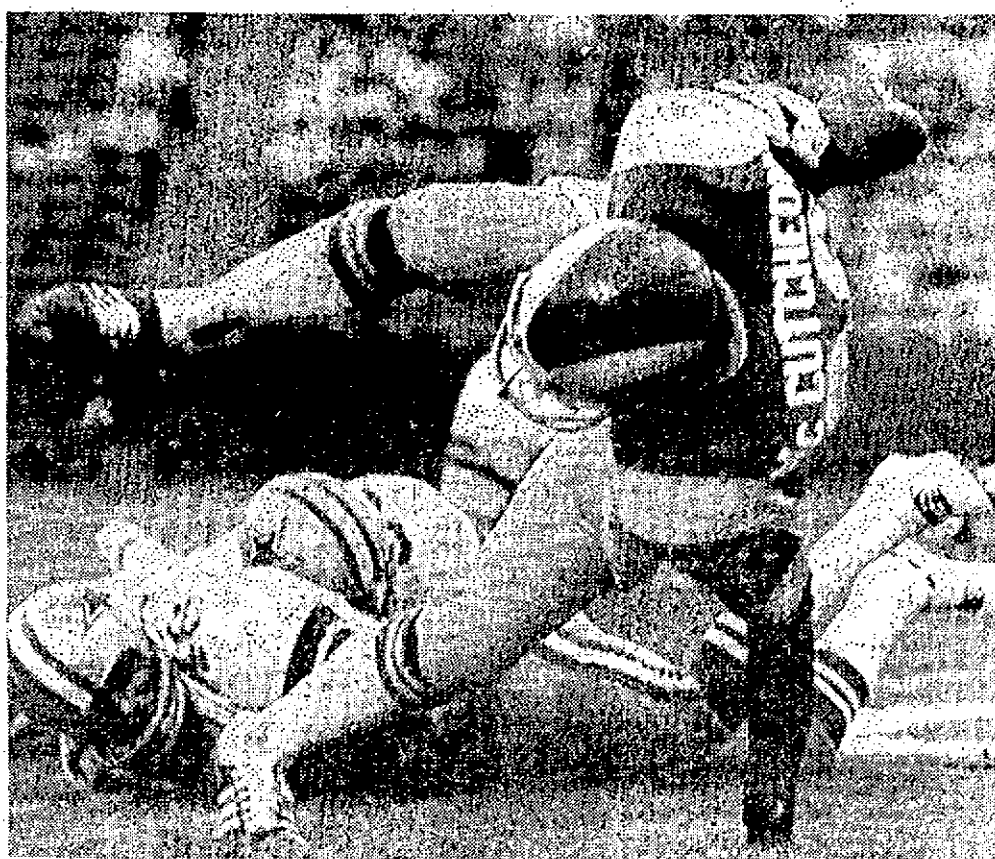

"I couldn't believe all those things Brad was saying about me," Martin tells you with a look of bewilderment. "I still consider him to be my friend. We always got along well."

"It's just that Bob Short hired me and promised me all those things. Maybe that made it difficult for Brad."

Martin is delighted, as well he should be, to be back with the Yankees, the team with which he began his playing career.

"I never thought it would happen...I don't know why," he said. "I just never seemed like the opportunity was there for me to manage the Yankees. But I can't kid myself...I'm delighted to be here. I think it's natural for anybody to want to manage the team he broke in with. It's like coming home."

Home for Billy Martin, however, is where the next challenge occurs.

Balancing act

quarter action of game Saturday night at Coliseum.

No witness to the Rams' 35-7 shellacking of the Dallas Cowboys was more impressed than Tom Dempsey, who was both a participant and a spectator.

"In my career," said the club's new placekicker in awe, "I've never played for a team that kicked many extra points."

He kicked five at the Coliseum Saturday night.

"That may be the most ever," said Dempsey, whose pro travels have touched New Orleans and Philadelphia.

What the 62,843 other fans saw James Harris and associates do to the Cowboys shouldn't happen to the Indians. It wasn't

Lopes steals record

Hooton 3-hits
New York, 2-0

NEW YORK (Special) — It took Davey Lopes just one batter to pick up Jerry Koosman's flaw.

When it was all said and done Saturday, Lopes had a major league record of 32 consecutive stolen bases without being caught and the Dodgers, compliments of Burt Hooton's three-hit pitching, had a 2-0 victory over the Mets.

Lopes, the National League's base-stealing leader this year with 51, drew a leadoff walk in the first inning. One out later he swiped second, equalling the mark of 31 in a row set by Max Carey of the 1922 Pittsburgh Pirates.

"I had forgotten what Koosman's flaw was because we hadn't played the Mets in so long," Lopes said. "It took me about one batter to pick it up again."

"No, I won't say what it is — but I know what he does different when he's going to throw to the plate and going to throw to first. I never guess."

Lopes wound up stranded at third in the first inning, but he doubled in the sixth and scored the game's first run on a ground-single to left by Lee Lacy. In the eighth, Lopes singled, was bunted to second by Lacy, stole third with a headfirst slide and romped home on a wild pitch by Koosman.

"I knew about the record because a Dodger official told me about it before the game," Lopes acknowledged. "It's a major league record and I'm pleased with it. It's a record that not many people know about. They had to go to the record book to look it up. I'm the only guy who's done it, so I have to be happy with it."

"But somebody will break my record some day, too."

For Hooton, it was his 43rd career victory and his ninth shutout. He has beaten the Mets a dozen times, shutting them out four times.

"I think I've pitched more against the Mets than any other team," he said. "I won't say this was a typical great performance for me," he added with a smile, "because I don't have too many typical great performances."

"I threw mostly fastballs because the first part of the game I had trouble getting my changeup and curve over. I had a good hopping fastball and I kept it in the strike zone. In the middle inning, my curve came back."

It was the third successive victory for Hooton, now 9-9. He allowed a only the score or the fact that Dallas is no paper opponent but the poise and precision with which it was accomplished on the first game out of the training camp.

"We realized it was the first game," said Harris, who took the Rams on an 81-yard scoring drive, the first time he touched the football in earnest, "but the offensive line was doing an outstanding job."

Harris completed 7-of-10 passes for 84 yards.

REMARKABLY, the Rams committed no infractions until the final quarter — "a tribute to our coaching staff," said guard Joe Seibelli. "We are well coached, you know."

The Rams' domination continued through every level of substitution — Harris' backup Ron Jaworski, was 6-for-8 for 115 yards — but coach Chuck Knox cautioned that "we still have long way to go. Dallas has a fine football team and by the time we get ready to play them in the league opener Sept. 21 they're going to be much improved over what they were tonight."

Dempsey added, "That's why we don't want to say a helluva lot. But I've been impressed with the talent and depth and hustle since I've been in camp."

The evening also brought satisfaction to running back Cullen Bryant and wide receiver Ron Jessie, each of whom scored a touchdown after a couple of weeks of controversy regarding their employment with the Rams.

"My mind is clear now," said Bryant. "It's a great feeling."

Harris was around just long enough to indicate that 1974 wasn't a fluke when he picked up for slumping John Hadl, took the Rams to the National Conference final and capped that by starring in the Pro Bowl.

SURROUNDED by his offensive platoon of steady professionals, the man they call Shack drove the Rams 81 yards in 13 plays to a 7-0 lead the first time they had hooked up since the unhappy day in Minnesota last December.

A controversial illegal procedure penalty turned that game around, but this time the Rams' offense was as perfect as General Patton against the Panthers.

The first nine plays were runs — four by Lawrence McCutcheon for 34 yards, four by Jim Bertelsen for 18, plus a sneak by Harris for a first down.

Then he changed up at the Cowboys' 33-yard line, faked a handoff to Bertelsen, straightened up and hit 8-5 tight end Bob Klein, who had 8-1 middle linebacker Lee Roy Jordan overmatched at the 16.

McCutcheon and Bertelsen carried once more each, then Harris found that the Cowboys had forgotten about Klein already, leaving him alone at the five for an easy toss and three big strides into the end zone.

Knox had replaced four of Harris' crew with running backs Rob Scribner and Tony Baker and tackles Tim Stokes and rookie Doug France by the second quarter, but Harris directed an 80-yard spurt to a 14-0 lead.

This time it wasn't as methodical, but Harris was able to clutch out big plays when he needed them — a 17-yard pass to Scribner, his own explosive scramble around left end for 30 yards and two more third-down passes to Klein, the last one for the final yard as he pivoted away from the Dallas rush.

Knox had planned to use Harris only one half but brought him and the other regulars back for an encore after Willie McGee returned the second-half kickoff 68 yards to the Dallas 27.

Shack passed nine yards to Harold Jackson, and three running plays later John Cappelletti followed Tom Mack's block over left tackle for a two-yard touchdown.

Moments later the Rams had a chance to blow the Cowboys' spurs off when quarterback Roger Staubach's understudy, Clint Longley, had his first pass picked off by

Nicklaus leads by four after 'minor miracle'

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Jack Nicklaus contrived a minor miracle of a par on the 16th hole, swept past faltering Bruce Crampton and Hale Irwin and, with a strong, three-under-par 67, vaulted into a four-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the 57th PGA National Championship.

Nicklaus, gunning for his 16th major championship, cradled his blond head between his forearms, then saluted the massive gallery with a wave of his putter after his one-putt heroics on the famed "Monster" hole.

At 625 yards, it is the longest of all the long, leg-wearying acres that make up the famed, 7,180-yard Firestone Country Club course.

He made a five, a par, after hitting his tee shot unplayable, throwing his third into deep rough behind an elm tree then, boldly, flirting with trees and a small pond, flying his fourth to the green. Then he made a 35-foot, downhill par putt that left him in firm command going into Sunday's final round of this last of the year's four major tests of golfing greatness.

"I just knew I was going to make that putt," Jack stated.

It may have been the key hole of the golf tournament. As late as his fourth shot he was looking at a probable bogey — at best — and possibly much worse. He walked away with his imposing lead intact.

Nicklaus, who started play on the warm, sunny day four strokes back of Crampton, finished with a 54-hole total of 205, five under Firestone's demanding par and just one shot away from the all-time record for this tournament.

CRAMPTON, the 39-year-old Australian veteran who established the 36-hole lead with his record 63, stumbled to a 75 but remained the only other man under par with a 209 total, four back of Jack and one under.

He and Irwin, a two-time winner this season who is gunning for a spot in the front rank of the game's greats, opened the gate for Nicklaus' move with their scrambling disasters early in the day.

Crampton's fall came by degrees. He bogeyed the 5th, 6th, 7th, 9th and 10th holes, a slow, gradual, agonizing decline that let Nicklaus make up eight shots in 10 holes.

Irwins blew his chances with the speed of summer lightning. He took a horrendous, triple-bogey seven on the sixth hole, dropping from three-under-par to even.

His poor drive put him behind a tree. He tried to cut his second shot, with his driver, around the tree. But he hit it unplayable. After his penalty drop, he pitched his fourth short of the green. The shocked young man, the 1974 U.S. Open champion, reached the green in five and two-putted for the seven that all but killed his once hopeful chances.

He finished with a 73 and 210.

Tom Weiskopf scrambled his way to a round of par 70 that included three birdies and as many bogeys. He was at 211 for the tournament, one over and six back of Nicklaus, the man he beat in a playoff for the Canadian Open title.

"I'm not out of the tournament," said Long Tom, "but it would take an awful good round to beat him now."

He was tied with Ed Dayna Benson wins national junior title. Story on S-5.

Dougherty, a rookie tourist who has been playing the game only six years. Dougherty had a 72-211.

No one else appeared to be within striking distance on the Golden Bear, the game's most famed and feared competitor and the man who seems to reach his peak, time after time, year after year, in the game's major championships.

Defending champion

Lee Trevino hacked his way through the deep, clinging rough to a 78 and a 223 total, 13 over.

"Man," the tired, disgusted Trevino proclaimed, "I cut enough hay out there to feed all the cows in Texas."

Arnold Palmer, who at 45 still lacks just this one major title in his two-decade career, shot a 73 and was out of it at 218.

British Open champion Tom Watson, with a 71 and 212, was seven strokes behind.

Johnny Miller failed to make the cut for the last two rounds.

Nicklaus made his first move just as Crampton began to back up and completed it about the time Irwin was making his killing seven.

Crampton bogeyed the fifth from a bunker, then missed the green on the

Bosox win on homers

OAKLAND (UPI)—The Boston Red Sox got back-to-back homers in the third inning from Denny Doyle and Cecil Cooper and then coasted to a 7-2 victory over the Oakland A's Saturday on the pitching of Bill Lee and Dick Drago.

Carlton Fisk also homered for Boston, a two-run shot in the fifth. But the big blows came in the third off loser Sonny Siebert. In that inning Rick Burdick led off with Rick Burleson led off with a single and scored on Bernie Carbo's double. Doyle then hit his fourth homer of the year, and two pitches later Cooper connected for his ninth.

Boston's first run came in the second inning when Fred Lynn singled, stole second and scored on Fisk's base hit. Fisk's homer in the fifth followed a Cooper single.

Lee had a three-hit shot out through the first six innings, but then in the Oakland seventh, Joe Rudi singled and Sal Bando hit his ninth home run of the year. Lee, now 15-6, has won six straight starts and is 11-2 since May 16.

Reitz and Davis key Cardinals

HOUSTON (AP) — Joe Niekro, making only his second start of the season, stopped Pittsburgh on five hits and scored the game's first run on Cesar Cedeño's third-inning single as the Houston Astros downed the slumping Pirates, 5-0, Saturday night.

It was the fourth consecutive setback and 10th in 14 games for the Pirates and sliced their lead in the National League's East Division to two games over Philadelphia, their smallest margin since June 28.

Niekro (4-4) protected the 1-0 lead until the eighth when the Astros jumped on relief ace Dave Giusti for four runs. Niekro started the uprising with a walk, Greg Gross tripled and then scored himself on another single by Cedeno.

After Cedeno stole second, Cliff Johnson walked his ninth home run and the first off Giusti in 68 2/3 innings this season.

Islamic faith 'central point of my life'

Jabbar: Peaceful return from exile

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar was sitting around the Forum Club chatting with a few of his favorite people—the press. These are moments he cherishes like visits to his dentist.

"It's a necessary part of my job," he says.

Does that mean he doesn't enjoy it?

"Not particularly."

Having established rapport, then, the writers soon arrived at an understanding of the newest Laker's long-strained relations with the media. It all started at UCLA, which has an unfortunate reputation of turning out superstar centers with social problems.

"There was a decision made to keep my contact with the press to a minimum," Jabbar says. "Coach (John) Wooden and (athletic director) J.D. Morgan made the decision, and I agreed to it. It was a mistake. I could have handled it. Instead, it gave me an air of inaccessibility."

Of course, it didn't help when those writers bold enough to approach him failed to capture his deep and profound views correctly.

"I had several bad experiences with the press," Kareem says. "Once I had a discussion with a very a problem. Exiled to Milwaukee, he found hardly any press to trust.

"You know, being up there in Wisconsin . . . I mean, it's not a spot where everybody stops by in the wintertime."

As a result, Jabbar frequently was portrayed as moody, temperamental and worse in articles "written by people that didn't know me at all."

Nor did it improve relations when he announced that he was changing his name to conform to his Islamic faith. Only now does it become clear that, unlike Muhammad Ali before him and Bill Walton after, he wasn't rejecting his country.

"I'm in a position now that very few people are in in this country," he says. "I'm a young man. I've had a chance to better my position, especially considering my background. You know, my grandfather was an immigrant. I've got there because of America."

"On the negative side, Afro-Americans have faced murder, discrimination—and I've become successful in spite of that."

"I think the way this country's set up conforms with a lot of Islamic ideology—freedom for all people, equal opportunities, et cetera. I'm all for that. As long as this country gives all of its citizens a fair deal, I don't have any complaints. Unfortunately, a lot of people have to buy a fair deal, and those who can't get the short end of the stick."

important writer, but when he wrote his piece on me it contained nothing of what we had talked about. I was bewildered, so I became very cautious. I tried to stick to monosyllabic answers, thinking they couldn't misinterpret if I answered yes or no to specific questions. I was very paranoid, because I don't like being misinterpreted."

So Jabbar, then known as Lew Alcindor, simply spent his Westwood years looking tall, dark and solemn while leading the Bruins to three consecutive NCAA titles before being drafted by the Milwaukee Bucks of the NBA.

By the time he arrived in Milwaukee, the young Lew Alcindor had started to mature.

"As time has gone along I realize it's one of the frailties of people-to-people communication. You're always missing something, and you just have to go back over it to set 'em straight. It's part of the game."

But when he was ready to trust the press, there was

IF JABBAR, NOW 28, seems to have mellowed since he last resided in Los Angeles, his religion and his environment certainly are factors. Raised in New York, he is happier in a big city. He isn't afraid of reporters anymore, nor they of him.

"I think they're more comfortable with me now," he says, "and now I'm more accessible."

He was married in 1971, fathered a daughter but is separated from his wife. He has bought a home in Bel Air and plans to furnish it with his collection of Oriental rugs and move in his stored belongings before resuming his habitual off-season world travels. He is restless and he travels alone—"always."

All he needs is his faith. He plans to re-enroll at UCLA for additional studies in Arabic, because "all the source material is written in Arabic."

"It's the central point of my life. For someone who practices Islam, it's their lifestyle. It's not just something they intellectually believe in."

"I kind of sought it out by myself. I was raised a Catholic and became very dissatisfied. I put that down completely and started investigating other things. I think the most important thing was reading the autobiography of Malcolm X."

HIS NAME TRANSLATES to "noble servant of the irresistible."

"I didn't select it. The man who instructed me told me to use that name. They analyze what you're all about."

Jabbar's parents will continue to live in New York but the ties remain strong.

"My mother believes in dashboard idolatry," Kareem says with a wry smile. "My father's a non-practicing Catholic."

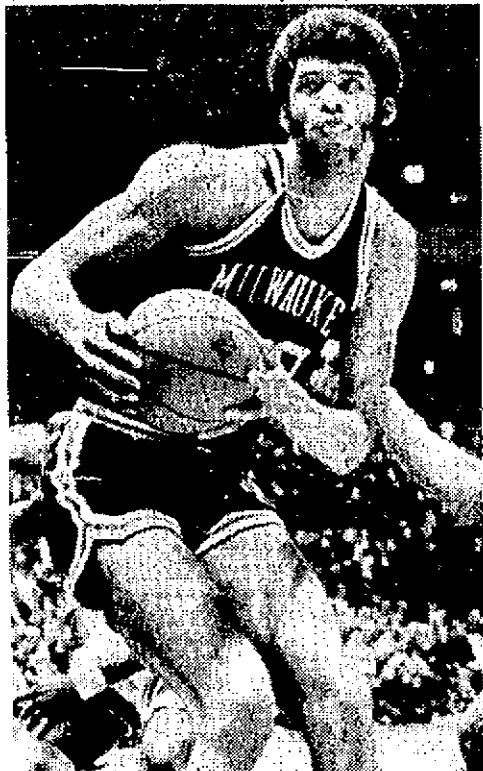

"My father's reaction (to his Islamic faith) has been more positive than my mother's. He sees what it's done for me. They call me Kareem now. That took a long time."

It would seem that the media, too, will come to regard Jabbar in a new light—same guy, new image.

Kareem has a hearty laugh.

"That'll be better than trying to live with the old one."

KAREEM ON ALI, WALTON...ETC.

On Bill Walton: "First of all, you've got to pin him down to exactly what he means—and that changes. He confuses me. I don't know what he's talking about."

On Muhammad Ali: "Cassius X is not a Muslim, and until he becomes a Muslim I could not address him by any Islamic name. That whole thing he's involved in was started when this man who called himself Elijah Muhammad met some man in Detroit who said he was the Creator and that Elijah was a prophet. They've taken some Islamic trappings, a lot of trappings from black nationalism and a whole lot of stuff that's just been made up—but it's not Islam and they're not Muslims."

On Milwaukee: "I just didn't have any real future there. If I were to continue to play basketball there I would have had to establish myself in business and think about being there a lot. That didn't sit well with me. It had nothing to do with the officials there or the fans. They're great fans."

On being a Laker: "I know I'm going to help. I've always felt a big amount of responsibility on myself, and that hasn't changed. But the help I bring might not be everything that is needed."

On his size: "I'm 7-1½ and weigh 240 pounds. I was last measured at training camp in '73. Other teams have tried to say that I've grown—knucklehead guys like Bob Cousy."

Garagiola: 'Yogi No. 1 in my book'

EDITOR'S NOTE: Yogi Berra, one of baseball's legendary figures, was fired last week as manager of the New York Mets. The man who knows him best is another former catcher, Joe Garagiola, now an NBC-TV sports broadcaster. They grew up together in an Italian neighborhood in St. Louis. In the following article, Garagiola reminisces, tells how he feels about what happened to his old friend and looks to the future.

BY JOE GARAGIOLA
For The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — I've been asked the same question the last couple of days. How do I feel about Yogi Berra getting fired?

I don't mind telling anybody that I'm disappointed. Very disappointed. I feel like anybody would feel if their best friend lost his job. I'm hurt and depressed for my friend. I think he deserved better. I think he deserved a lot better.

But this really isn't a sad time for Yogi. He takes this kind of thing better than the rest of us. He'll land on his feet. He always does. Yogi's a good man.

It is characteristic of the man that when he was fired you didn't hear any badmouthing or potshotting. Like always, he showed a lot of class. Other guys might be shooting off their mouths, criticizing management.

But where was Yogi on Thursday? He was at Shea Stadium saying goodbye to his players, talking to Donald Grant (the man who fired him) and posing for pictures with Roy McMillan (the new manager) and Joe McDonald (general manager).

I SAW IN THE PAPER that Yogi said he was praying for the Mets to win the pennant. He wasn't praying in any religious sense. He was just talking from his heart, telling everybody that he sincerely wanted the Mets to win. He doesn't have a vindictive bone in his body.

I'm very proud to be his friend.

I've been his friend for as long as I can remember. In fact, I can't ever remember not knowing him.

I lived at 5446 Elizabeth Ave. in St. Louis and Yogi lived at 5447. Just across the street. Our fathers worked in the same brickyard. His older brother and my brother worked in the same restaurant. He has three kids. I have three kids. He had a boy; I had a boy. He had a boy; I had a boy. He had a boy; I had a boy. He had a boy; I had a girl.

Yogi wasn't a real leader when we were kids. He was the strong, silent type. When we decided to go to the movies on Sundays, he'd come along. He didn't usually make suggestions. But when he did say something, everybody stopped and listened. He wasn't loud or flamboyant. I was the loud and flamboyant one.

YOGI LED BY DOING and by being himself. There was no fancy stuff in Yogi then, and there's none now. Yogi is Yogi. If you liked him, you liked him forever. He wasn't going to change tomorrow.

He's a beautiful, direct man. If I wanted to make a blueprint for a manager, I'd use Yogi Berra for his temperament. If I wanted to make a blueprint for a man, I'd use Yogi Berra for his sincerity, integrity and loyalty. He's exactly what you see.

But what makes me mad is when people make Yogi out to be something he isn't. He's not a witty guy and I hate it when people make him out to be a fool, backing it up with phony stories. I can tell a factual Yogi story from a fictitious one without any trouble.

They tell a story that he wouldn't sleep on a Murphy bed because he didn't want to sleep in the wall. Now I tend to doubt he ever said that.

If you listen, Yogi stories may be funny because he may say things incorrectly. But they always make sense. He may go a different road to get there but damn if his route isn't really the fastest one. Everything he says is succinct and plain people talk. It may require a double-take but his statements always make sense.

Like I read in the paper that Roy McMillan said the Mets won't be out of the pennant race until they're mathematically eliminated. A cliché, right?

Yogi had a different answer. "We're not out of it 'til we're out of it," he said. Now doesn't that make more sense? Isn't that straight to the point?

Or what about Yankee Stadium? Guys tried to play the outfield there late in the season and would come up with 14 hundred excuses why they had so much trouble. Yogi's explanation made the most sense.

"It gets late there early," he said.

Then there was time I asked him what he knew about managing.

"I OBSERVED A LOT by watching," he said.

He did. His record proves that. He won two pennants in 4½ years. How many managers have done that?

Casey Stengel says if Berra wasn't so smart how come those great pitchers like Allie Reynolds, Vic Raschi, Eddie Lopat and Whitey Ford always listened to him and did what he wanted?

Yogi knows baseball. There's no doubt about that.

That's why I knew he would make a good manager. He's got a lot of baseball smarts. He still would be managing if a manager didn't have to be part public relations man and part psychologist.

The Cleon Jones thing really got to Yogi. He must have taken an awful lot to take that "me or him" stand. I honestly saw Yogi mad only three times. Each time as a kid.

He's a sensitive guy, particularly because he doesn't want to look bad in front of his kids. He thinks, "What will my kids think about this story of me, or this caricature of me?"

But he doesn't get mad. His attitude is, "It's okay with me, as long as it doesn't hurt anybody." For him to say that about Jones means someone had taken advantage once too often.

But above all Yogi is a patient man. If he said in 1973 that the Mets weren't out of it, he believed it. Because he acted accordingly, so did the team.

The best managers are the ones who are patient. There are 162 games in a season. Yogi understood that. To me, the best managers in recent times, Freddie Hutchinson, Walter Alston, Gil Hodges and Yogi Berra, all had that quality.

Yogi has that and a lot more. When we were kids playing ball in St. Louis, Yogi would always be chosen No. 1.

In my book, that's where he is right now.

Quotable quotes

"The relief pitching is getting ridiculous. Some guy making $60,000 a year comes in and gets two guys out and then another guy comes in—he's probably making $70,000—and another guy out. And most likely it's the No. 8 or No. 9 hitter."

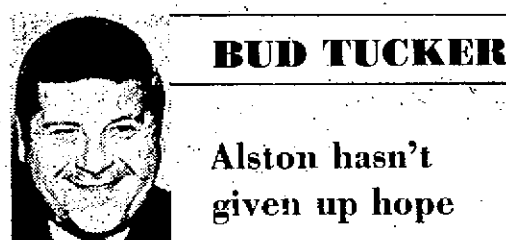

Pete Rose, Cincinnati third baseman.

"Why certainly I'd like to have a fellow who hits a home run every time at-bat, who strikes out every opposing hitter he's pitching to and who is always thinking about two innings ahead. The only trouble is to get him to put down his beer, come down out of the stands and do those things."

Danny Murtaugh, Pittsburgh manager.

"Nobody goes there, it's too crowded."

Alston hasn't given up hope

Editor's note: Bud Tucker is on vacation. Today's guest column is written by Dodgers' manager Walter Alston.

I keep getting the same question asked daily—have the Dodgers given up?

We haven't given up and we won't give up.

Baseball is a funny game and strange things have happened. We finished seventh in 1958 and then came back with virtually the same team to win the championship.

There have been some great comebacks. I guess it all started with the Miracle Boston Braves in 1914. They came from last place in mid-season to win the title.

In 1956 we battled back in the stretch drive to top Milwaukee for the pennant.

The Philadelphia Phillies in 1964 led by 6½ with 12 to play and lost.

Even the Baltimore Orioles last year came from about eight back with one month to play and won.

I'm sure there have been many others, but right now I'm more concerned with our prolonged hitting slump. Once we start hitting again I feel we can make a move.

THE REDS PLAYED outstanding baseball in the stretch prior to the All-Star break. They won something like 41 of 50 and that's amazing.

Everything went right for us last year. We got the hits and the runs when we needed them and we got the breaks. Also, we had very few injuries.

Probably the three key injuries this year have been Bill Russell, Mike Marshall and the loss of Joe Ferguson for the season.

Russell was a big RBI man in the eighth spot and a healthy Marshall turns a lot of close games into victories. Ferguson has a great arm but was not hitting. Then we lose him for the season.

I have been pleased with the play of two youngsters—outfielder John Hale and pitcher Rick Rhoden. A third man, pitcher Stan Wall, who we recently called up, has done a good job in relief.

THE REPORTS FROM the farm system indicate outstanding prospects in infielders Jerry Royster and Ivan DeJesus, outfielders Orlando Alvarez and Bobby Detherage, pitchers Rick Nitz, Rex Hudson, Steve Shirley and Rick Sutcliffe.

We're definitely not looking for the end of this season. No one has planned vacations in October. We'll give it our best.

Horn proposals threaten to divide NCAA members

Associated Press

Against threats that the superpowers will walk out if too many cuts are made, the NCAA convenes this week a critical economic summit that will be asked to cut scholarships, coaching staffs and recruiting costs and thus save many colleges from athletic bankruptcy.

When it's over, the games students play will be changed. Football and basketball will suffer some; the minor sports which account for no ticket sales may be shoved rapidly toward the intramural level.

Recession and inflation, combined with the trend that made the upper echelon of college athletics a multi-million dollar business, have left more than 80 per cent of the NCAA's 700 members deep in athletic red ink and strapped with orders from above to do something about it.

College presidents who didn't mind a $200,000 athletic deficit during the boom years of the 1960s now must balance budgets because the recession of the 1970s has cut government aid and private donations, and inflation has dramatically increased costs.

The chancellor of one major private university, who asked not to be identified, said, "If major cuts aren't made, we will be forced to get out of the intercollegiate athletic business. We're losing $300,000 a year on athletics and that cannot continue. It's either bite the bullet now or quit soon."

"All of higher education is facing a serious financial crisis, and intercollegiate athletics must assume its share of the burden," said Wayne Duke, commissioner of the Big Ten. "We need a concerted, dignified effort to restore sanity to financial conditions surrounding intercollegiate athletics."

Among the 73 economic amendments to be placed before the convention are a series of 20 proposals approved by the NCAA Council, the organization's most powerful group. Most of them received approval in a straw vote of athletic directors.

They would reduce the number of football scholarships from 105 to 90, cut basketball scholarships from 18 to 16, limit any school to seven assistant football coaches and one assistant basketball coach and cut the maximum number of scholarships in sports other than football and basketball from just over 200 to 80.

Other proposals with broad support would eliminate the $15 monthly allowance which scholarship athletes now get, would limit any college to two off-campus meetings with a recruit and would allow recruits to visit only four colleges before signing a scholarship.

FOOTBALL TRAVEL squads would be limited to 48 players and basketball to 10. A school could only dress 60 players for a home football game and 13 for a basketball game. Schools would no longer supply their athletes with letter jackets and sweaters.

If approved, these measures would start football on a return to the one-platoon system in which athletes must play both offense and defense and continue a growing trend toward major cuts and, in some cases, elimination of minor sports which do not produce revenue.

The crisis point of the convention—and the trigger which could cause the major schools to seriously consider abandoning the NCAA—will come over three proposals that would force the superpowers to divide their television and bowl money with all schools.

The proposals are being made by Long Beach State President Stephen Horn and by the Pacific Coast Athletic Association. They would divide bowl and television money in such a way as to cost a school such as Oklahoma $450,000 or more of what it now gets for appearing on TV.

Penn State's athletic budget was in the black last year because the school's football team earned more than $1 million from its TV appearances and a bowl game. Without that money—most of which would be denied by the Long Beach proposals—Penn State's budget will be in the red this year.

These three proposals are the ones which have caused major conferences to study setting up their own athletic association, one that would separately negotiate with networks and bowl committees. If that happened, the NCAA would cease to exist on a major level.

Some schools and conferences were reported planning to try and stop the Long Beach proposals from even reaching the convention by claiming they were not properly drawn up.

"The membership's thinking has been sharply attuned to the financial emergency facing intercollegiate athletics," said Walter Byers, long-time executive director of the NCAA who proceeded to attack the Long Beach proposals.

"The one unfortunate development is that a few ill-conceived proposals, submitted at the 11th hour, are going to divert the discussions from cost-saving measures to a broad reexamination of the purposes of the NCAA," Byers said.

IT SEEMS FOOLHARDY to believe that the financial problems of one institution are going to be solved by reaching into the pocketbook of another institution, or that one conference can secure additional money by confiscating the funds of eight other conferences, but that is the issue presented by at least three proposals," he said.

The meetings open Monday when the NCAA Council begins three days of private meetings, some of which could result in probation for a number of schools for violating recruiting regulations.

Most major conferences will have private sessions on Wednesday, the key one being consideration by the Big Eight of another possible reprimand to Oklahoma for an alleged football recruiting violation.

The Sooners, picked No. 1 in last year's final Associated Press poll, are due to come off two years' probation this week. But the Big Eight has been considering a reprimand—possibly the withdrawal of some scholarships—because two Oklahoma players allegedly made a recruiting trip which violated NCAA rules.

The convention opens Thursday 9 a.m. and will go through Friday night if necessary.

"We may still be there Saturday night," one president said. "This is the most critical meeting in the NCAA's history. It determines the future course of college athletics, whether some of us will even continue to be in college athletics."

Young denies Palmer bid for 'grand slam'

SUNNINGDALE, England (UPI) — Donna Caponi Young completed an amazing comeback from a major chest injury Saturday when she won the Colgate European Women's Open Golf Championship.

Only two months earlier the blonde 30-year-old former double U.S. Open champion burst her rib cage, ripping the muscles while hitting a simple wedge shot.

But she came back to big-time golf five weeks ago and Saturday turned a superb final round of 70 for a 13-under-par four-round score of 283. She was two strokes better of Sandra Palmer of Fort Worth, Texas, with Japan's Chako Higuchi in third place on 289.

In taking the $11,000 top prize, Mrs. Young, of Los Angeles, who owed her victory to a brilliant eagle-2 at the 295-yard 11th hole, denied Miss Palmer a unique grand slam.

Miss Palmer, the winner of this year's U.S. Open and Dinah Shore Women's Circle Classic, was two strokes ahead after 54 holes but finished with a 74 on the final round to succumb to Mrs. Young. Miss Palmer collected another $7,000 to boost her season's earnings to more than $72,000 dollars at the top of the U.S. money winners list.

"I didn't think I'd ever get my game back after the injury," Mrs. Young said. "When it happened I thought why was it me to get hurt? But I worked my butt off practicing, hitting 500 balls a day and its all been worth it."

It was her title all the way after she stepped up to her ball in the middle of the 11th fairway. She had

45-foot chip on final hole saves Dayna

DEDHAM, Mass. (UPI) — Dayna Benson chipped in a 45-foot birdie on the final hole Saturday to go 1-up and win the 27th United States Junior Girls' Golf Championship.

In match play, Miss Benson, a 17-year-old Anaheim, Calif., high school senior who plays out of El Dorado in Long Beach, Calif., topped Kyle O'Brien, also 17, of Indianapolis, Ind.

Miss Benson, 2-up after six holes, hit a stretch of bad golf from the eighth through the eleventh holes, and went one down. But she rallied to win the 15th hole with a par and birdied the 18th for the victory.

On the par five 18th, Miss Benson hit her third shot over the green and into a clump of flowers. She was allowed a free lift from there and proceeded to knock a wedge into the cup for the winning birdie.

Miss O'Brien, the Indiana State Junior Champion, had a chance to tie with a 25-foot putt but missed.

"I'm glad I lost it on a birdie," said Miss O'Brien.

Miss Benson's medal score was 41-38-79. Miss O'Brien's was 40-39-79.

Sigel leads by 8 shots

LEWISTON, N.Y. (AP) — Jay Sigel posted a two-over-par 72 Saturday for a 54-hole total of 205 and an eight stroke lead in the 17th Porter Cup Amateur Golf Tournament.

The 31-year-old Berwyn, Pa., insurance man played one of the steadiest rounds of the day at Niagara Falls Country Club as gusting winds prevented any of the 69 competitors from breaking par 70 on the 6,544 yard course.

Jay Haas, the NCAA champion from Wake Forest, shot a 77 to fall eight strokes off the pace. University of Florida star Phil Hancock posted a one-over 71 for a 214 total and third place.

Four men are tied for fourth place at 215.

"Human inefficiently" the dour, grim-faced Crampton said. "I'm a human being, not a machine."

Nicklaus, playing in the same threesome with him, reached the par five second with two big shots and two putts for birdie. He birdied the next after his gorgeous approach left him only a three-foot putt.

Nicklaus, however, bogeyed the fifth from a "bunker—the third day in a row he's lost a stroke there—but holed a 10-footer for birdie on the seventh hole and hit his approach within inches on the 10th. That put him eight strokes up on Crampton in a space of 10 holes.

Jack also birdied the 13th from 12 to 15 feet, then salvaged his dramatic par on the 16th.

He bogeyed the 18th, threeputting, well after the national television cameras had ended their coverage for the day.

Pick Your Spot

The clubface determines where the ball goes, right? So you need to take pains to point it in the right direction.

Pick a spot in front of the ball and line up with it. Jack Nicklaus does this better than anyone. He chooses a spot approximately 10 feet ahead of the ball, then addresses it.

Some players mistakenly try to line up the face of their club while they're addressing the ball. The imaginary target line should be engraved on your mind before you ever address the ball. Then square the blade with the spot and take your stance according to where the blade is pointed.

Dutch Harrison says it's better to grip the club in the right hand at address, then set the blade behind the ball as you place your right foot. This keeps the right shoulder lower than the left at address. Then put the left hand on the club and place the left foot.

That's Dutch's idea, not mine. Sometimes I ain't sure which one is my left foot.

Picture the imaginary line to the target. Then pick a spot 10 feet down the line, square the blade to it and let'er fly.

The new Fiat 131. It's not a dream car. It's a reality car.

Part of the American dream has always been the American dream car. Bigger, more powerful, more expensive than it had to be. More a symbol of having arrived than a practical means of getting somewhere.

At Fiat, we never shared the idea of the American dream car. Being Italian, we didn't have to.

Instead, we've built our cars to deal with the world as it really is.

The new Fiat 131 is our latest and most advanced extension of this idea.

If you've gotten used to trading in your car every 2 or 3 years, the 131 should come as a pleasant surprise.

The engine was tested for over a million miles. The valves last twice as long as ordinary valves. The rings last far longer than ordinary rings.

The entire underbody of the 131 is sealed against the elements. The exhaust system is extraordinarily resistant to corrosion.

The wheels offer the most advanced protection against rust in the world today.

The 131 faces up to the inevitability of accidents. The passenger compartment is protected by steel rings at the floor, waist and roof. The gas tank is tucked away behind the back seat.

The 131 gives passengers in the front seat more legroom than the $9,000 Chrysler Imperial. Yet it's shorter than a Vega. It deals very nicely with parking and traffic.

Last, the 131 faces the spiraling costs of owning a car. It's designed to be economical not just on gas, but on maintenance and repair.

In times like these, isn't the reality car starting to sound more and more like a dream?

Long Beach's finest collegiate volleyball players leave today for a week of international competition in Mexico City. Guests of the University of Mexico, the men and women will test their skills against five of that country's top collegiate teams in matches at Olympic Stadium. The group returns next Sunday.

WOMEN IN SPORTS

"We'll work out Monday morning and have our first match that evening," says Lee Apel, coach of the women's team. "We have a very strong girls' team. I'm expecting to win all five matches."

Apel, who is a Millikan High teacher and assistant men's volleyball coach at Long Beach State, has been working with the squad for about three weeks. Most of the young women come from Long Beach City College and Long Beach State University teams.

They are Lisa Ramsey, Chris Hammer, Teri Olson, Cathy Cotton, Lori Doerr, Patti Linza, from LBCC; Lisa Richards, Debbie Koeppe, Linda Wills, Michele Lafluer, LBSU; Cathy White and Charlene Boehnert, Miss White, a Millikan graduate, now plays for Brigham Young University. Miss Boehnert, a UCLA grad, was captain of the Bruin team and has been in international competition as a member of a U.S. national team.

THE WOMEN'S Basketball Fellowship moves into its final three weeks of competition Monday at Mae Boyer Park in Lakewood. The top six teams, LBSU, LBCC, UCLA, Cerritos I and II and Harbor II will play in an elimination tournament continuing Aug. 18 and 25.

UCLA meets LBCC at 6 p.m. Cerritos I plays Cerritos II at 7:15 and Harbor II faces LBSU at 8:30.

More than 100 young women have been involved in the league, organizer Nancy Kelly reports.

Barons and Jets romp

The Lakewood Barons and the Lakewood Jets easily won their opening games Saturday night in the International Softball Congress state tournament at Joe Rodgers Field.

Erupting for 10 runs in the first two innings, the Barons romped to a 10-1 win over the Long Beach Post Office while the Jets put together two four-run innings to rout The Spoon, 8-0.

The Barons and Jets don't play again until next weekend.

In other games, Mission Viejo stopped Lucas Builders, 3-0, and the Long Beach Nitehawks beat Canoga Park by the same score. But since the Nitehawks have been awarded an ISC national berth, Canoga Park goes into the winner's bracket.

Games tonight

league has been participation," says Nancy. "We wanted to give everyone a chance to play."

ROBIN KAHN, LBSU senior, has been traveling with the Wightman Cup team as an alternate doubles at the nationals in Michigan.

Both young women, as well as Gigi Antonacci and Teri Standley, who also played in the nationals, will be back on Gloria Hendricks' tennis team at Long Beach State next season.

Gloria also has other top players lined up. They are Penny Johnson, No. 1 doubles player at LBCC last year, will enroll at LBSU. Andrea Lower is transferring from UC Santa Barbara and Carol Bigham, who was a ranked junior, will be coming from Scripps College.

MEMBERS of the U.S. national women's sculling team, who have been training in Ratzburg, Germany, leave Tuesday for Nottingham, Eng., where they will continue to prepare for the world championships to be held later this month.

The team raced in the German nationals the day after arriving in Munich. The quad entry of Jan Palchikoff, Lisa Hanson, Marion Grieg, Diane Brackland and Irene Moreno (coxswain) took first place.

Joan Lind, who came in sixth in the singles, reports that competition is strong since everyone is aiming for the Olympics.

3 swim marks fall

Three young swimmers established records in their specialties Saturday during competition in the Junior Olympic age-group swim meet at Belmont Plaza Olympic Pool.

Karl Cook of the Mt. San Antonio Swim Club sliced 12 seconds off the time she clocked in the preliminaries to set the record for the 400-meter freestyle Saturday in the 11-12-year-old event at 4:43.89.

In the boys 400, Chris Platner of the Riverside Aquatic Association set his second record in as many days with a time of 4:37.

The Aztecs, last year's NASL champions, need a Chicago loss at Washington Sunday for a berth in the playoffs. They finished with a 12-10 regular season record.

John Taylor recorded his fourth shutout.

Donohue sets closed-course record

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Mark Donohue won a gamble against rain and wind Saturday and bettered the world's closed-course speed record with a blistering lap at 221.120 miles per hour in a machine that will never race again.

Donohue used a Can-Am style Porsche 917-30 equipped with a 1,100-horsepower, 12-cylinder, five-liter engine in the attempt that broke A.J. Foyt's old mark of 217.854 m.p.h.

Donohue announced that the $200,000 Porsche would now be turned out as strictly a show car, and any future attempt he might make for the record would be in a different car.

Asked if the poor weather had held back speeds on the record try, Donohue said, "I'm absolutely certain of it. We felt the car was easily capable of 225 m.p.h. That's the speed we were shooting for and we might have been able to get it if we could have waited longer."

"But we were committed to doing it at a certain time of day, so we went ahead."

Donohue said the car hit speeds near 240 m.p.h.

going down the backstretch of the 2.66-mile Alabama International Motor Speedway tri-oval.

In practice, the wind drag as such high speeds sucked the lettering off the sides of the car.

"I might have gone faster, too, but I got chicken," Donohue said. "When you

Earlier in the day John Ray, an Alabama truck driver, claimed a world record for big trucks when he clocked a speed of 92.085 mph in his 25,000-pound truck-trailer rig.

Before his record attempt Ray had predicted a speed in excess of 100 mph. Afterward he said he was more than satisfied with 92.

POLICE BEAT

Burglars set fire to home

While a 92-year-old woman was celebrating her birthday, burglars set her house on fire to cover up a $190 robbery, Long Beach police said Saturday.

Officers said Edythe Elizabeth Reavis, was reading birthday cards on the front porch of her home, at 6721 Delta Ave., when she smelled smoke from the house.

She went into the house, where she lives alone, found mattresses in two bedrooms on fire, then was helped out of the house by a neighbor who saw smoke pouring from the front door.

The woman told police later that about $190 in currency was missing from a storage box in a bedroom closet. She also said she did not see or hear anybody in the home and that she is hard of hearing.

The woman estimated total damage to the home at more than $1,000.

Firemen said a rear door had been forced open.

Police said the bedrooms were ransacked, and a nightstand which had been in the woman's bedroom was found in the living room, which was heavily damaged by the fire.

Radios stolen from plane

A thief who may have used a key removed $12,200 worth of radio equipment from auto dealer Cal Worthington's private Beechcraft plane, Long Beach police said Friday.

Worthington discovered the loss as he was taking off for his ranch in Orland, he told officers, and phoned an employee at his Worthington gas station on Bellflower Boulevard who notified police.

Worthington said there were no marks on the plane indicating forced entry and that the missing equipment included two Narco Mark 16 radios valued at $3,200 a Collins PN101 valued at $7,000 and two other units valued at $1,000 each.

The plane, a 1964 Beech Baron, is kept at 2749 E. Wardlow Road.

wards totaling $36,000 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial. Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the caselist below, one of varying summaries of 10 Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press-Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount, depending on the seriousness of the offense.

Rewards in all cases, whether or not previously published, will remain in effect until such cases are closed or until notification in these pages that the reward has been withdrawn.

To ensure eligibility for rewards, informants must channel all information directly through Secret Witness—that is, to notify Secret Witness first—either by calling the special Secret Witness number or by writing in care of the Special Secret Witness post office box.

Today's summaries follow:

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 30-year-old Bernadine Lewis of Anaheim, last seen at 4 p.m. Jan. 30,

TELEVISION LOG OF THE INDEPENDENT-PRESS-TELEGRAM AND THE EVENING NEWS

Looks like big year for former fatty Marcia Wallace

TV-Radio Editor

Guess who's going to be getting married on "The Bob Newhart Show."

No, it won't be Bob Hartley's sister, Ellen (Pat Finley), to Howard Borden (Bill Daily), though the CBS comedy series appeared headed in that direction for awhile.

Instead, it'll be Bob's receptionist, Carol Kester, who is played by funny girl Marcia Wallace.

She's going to marry a newcomer to the show, a travel agent played by Will McKenzie.

The episode in which the wedding takes place has already been filmed for airing in the new fall season, starting in September.

Marcia, who's a single girl herself, told me a bit about the romance during an interview the other day in her dressing room at CBS Studio Center in Studio City.

"It was rather nice — I got to do my first love scene," she said. "It was only a pretend wedding, but I was nervous as heck. I wonder how I'd be at the real thing!"

She meets the travel agent — "he's charming" — and marries him in the same episode, Marcia pointed out.

"It's one of your faster romances," she commented.

How did she meet the guy?

"Oh, on a blind date arranged by Emily (Suzanne Pleshette). She's a compulsive fixer-upper."

MARCIA SAID her TV husband will probably turn up from time to time on the series as a recurring character.

And though McKenzie is new to the Newhart show, he's not so new to Miss Wallace.

"He's just out from New York, but I've known him for 10 years," said the tall redhead. "Why, he used to date both my roommates."

Did he marry either of them?

"No, he married someone else."

Miss Wallace said she auditioned for him once when he was directing a production of "Brigadoon." She added: "I went in and sang for him, and he said, 'Real good.' But I didn't get the job."

The comic actress was asked if perchance a real wedding is in her plans for the near future.

"I'm not sure I'm up to it," came the reply. "That was only a pretend marriage and I was almost comatose."

Then, after a pause: "If I could just learn to date comfortably first — marriage can't be harder than dating! Why, I've actually stuck celery up my nose trying to maintain eye contact on a date."

Marcia said she finally — this year — bought a small house in the Hollywood hills that she had been renting for some time. "It's perfect for one person," she commented.

YOU PROBABLY would never suspect, from seeing the slender Miss Wallace on the Newhart show, that she used to be a fatty.

Ten years ago, when the now 32-year-old native of Creston, Iowa, was pounding the pavement for jobs in New York City after earning a B.A. degree in drama and English from Parsons College, she weighed 230 pounds.

"I got my first job as the chubbette in a production of 'Music Man' and went on from there to chubbette roles in other shows," said Marcia.

"I used to eat seven meals a day," she told me. "When I was 9, people would come to our door, see me and ask, 'Where's your husband?' Not only was I fat, but I had an old look, too."

When she was 14, she said, she had a

MARCIA WALLACE ... gets mate on Newhart show job at a Dairy Queen shop, but she got fired for eating too much — "I cleaned 'em out, I gained 40 pounds."

Added the former fatty: "I discovered humor out of my being fat. It was a case of 'I'll call myself fat before someone else does. I'll make people laugh at me because I'm afraid they'll laugh at me anyway.'"

IT WASN'T UNTIL she was 26 that Marcia decided she didn't have to be — and didn't want to be — fat. The thought came to her as "a veritable lightbulb over my head." Said she: "I was in Puerto Rico and it was hot and humid and I was so miserable. That's when the lightbulb appeared."

She said she lost 50 pounds right away, in the first few months, and another 50 pounds over the next few years.

"When I started going on a diet, well-meaning friends said: 'You won't be funny any more.' But that wasn't true at all. I doubt if I'd have a career today if I hadn't dieted. I feel much freer — and I know I'll never be fat again."

Miss Wallace has been portraying the receptionist on the Newhart show since its beginning in September of 1972. Before that, her TV experience had consisted primarily of "about 50 commercials" and "about 75" appearances as a guest on the Merv Griffin talk show.

She had been discovered by a Griffin staff member while performing with the improvisational comedy group The Fourth Wall, off-Broadway. And she proved to be such an interesting talk-show guest that Merv kept inviting her back again and again.

"I got the Newhart series role because of Merv's show," she told me. "William S. Paley (CBS board chairman) saw me and suggested me to Grant Tinker (Mary Tyler Moore Enterprises chief)."

Is she satisfied with her role as she begins her fourth season?

"Hey, look, it's great to have a job!" she exclaimed. "I'm having a ball, and my role is getting bigger. I'm happy, mainly because the part grows, I'm working before an audience and I'm working for MTM."

Does she see a series of her own in the future?

"Well, I don't sit around planning it," she replied. "But, on the other hand, I suppose it's not out of the realm of possibility."

Added the comedienne: "I will say that I think I always will work as an actor — and I didn't always believe that."

"I love comedy, when you get right down to it, because of the laughter. It makes people feel good. It's sharing good feelings — and God knows we need it."

"When you end up doing what you love to do, and get paid for it — what a treat! Life is getting better all the time."

Replacements on hand for Trapper, Col. Blake

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press

"M-A-S-H," beginning its fourth year of combating war wounds and pomposity, will turn up on television next fall with a new roster of officers.

Gone is the affable commanding officer, Col. Henry Blake, tragically lost in a flight over the Japan Sea on his return to civilian life. Also missing, but apparently not deceased, is Capt. John McIntyre, M.D., affectionately known as Trapper John.

Replacements have arrived. Col. Sherman Potter (Harry Morgan) has assumed command of the Korean medical base, and B. J. Hunnicutt, M.D. (Mike Farrell), has been assigned to duties as surgeon.

A-S-H" from its inception as a TV series, Gene Reynolds and Larry Gelbart. McLean Stevenson, the "late" Col. Blake, announced he was leaving "M-A-S-H" after the third season. He signed a long-term contract with NBC and was expected to head his own variety series next season. However, the show hasn't materialized.

Wayne Rogers, alias Trapper John, said he wasn't returning to "M-A-S-H" and claimed he had no contract. Twentieth Century-Fox felt otherwise and filed suit for $2.9 million damages if Rogers did not return. He sued producer Reynolds and five John Does for $3 million damages, claiming defamation of character.

While the lawyers shuffle their papers, "M-A-S-H" goes on.

Reynolds and Gelbart came to lunch — appropriately at a Japanese restaurant — on the first day of rehearsals for the new season. They seemed battle-weary but hopeful, despite the loss of two-thirds of the series' stars.

"There's a good spirit; everyone is excited about the challenge of the new season," said Reynolds.

"We've had a chance to look at each other; now we can invent a whole new bunch of clichés," Gelbart cracked.

"Of course, the loss of McLean and Wayne was a disappointment," said

'Roots of Mafia' series filmed

ROME (AP) — "The Roots of the Mafia" has just finished filming in the scrubby hills and bleak villages of Sicily. The five, one-hour television dramas telling how it all began are aimed at an American public fascinated by the Mafia.

The ambitious, multinational enterprise employed such actors as Joseph Cotton, Lee J. Cobb, Katharine Ross, Edward Albert, Tony Musante, Trevor Howard, Tom Skerritt, James Mason and Mel Ferrer.

The project began in 1972, when Italian documentary maker Enzo Muzzi proposed to Italy's RAI Television a series of films on the origins of the Mafia.

Sir Lew Grade, the free-wheeling director of England's ITC network, joined forces, convincing the Italians to treat the subject dramatically, rather than in a documentary form.

ABC Television then got in on the project and David Rintels, who wrote "Clarence Darrow" for Henry Fonda, provided English-language versions of the scripts created by Italian experts in Mafia lore.

Producer-director Enzo Muzzi says that, although the scenes are dramatized, the characters and events are documented in the state archives at Palermo, Sicily.

As a documentarian he believes the truth is more interesting than the hyped-up Mafiosa movies of recent times.

THE TV SERIES spans from 1556 to 1910 and does not include the invasion of America.

Insight concerning the project was offered by Tom Skerritt, who has played second leads in features like "M-A-S-H" and "Fuzz" and guest-starring roles in television.

He had just returned from Sicily, where he had the leading role in an 1800 segment of "The Roots of the Mafia."

"I play a kind of Sicilian Billy Budd," said Skerritt, a Scottish Irish American "whose droopy mustache gives him a Latin look."

"Had he lived, he may have done away with the Mafia. He conceptualizes the belief that a good, sound judicial system will do right by the people who submit to it. It was pure idealism, and hence could not succeed."

"The don, who is played by Trevor Howard, says quite frankly, 'I respect him, and for the reason that I respect him, I know he will make the wrong decision.' He does, and so he is destroyed."

SKERRITT said he met members of the Mafia during the location filming in Sicily and found them to be pleasant and indeed pleased by their treatment in the entertainment world.

"The Mafia, of course, is interested in everything that goes on in Sicily," said the actor, "and there were clear indications that a couple of their men had been placed in our crew. The same was true of New York filming of 'The Godfather.' I'm sure there were payoffs on the film."

Skerritt said he came away from Sicily with a

Ted Knight cast in 'Ghost Busters'

Ted Knight, Lenny Weinrib, Linda Scruggs, Dodo Denney and Len Lesser have been signed by producer-director Norman Abbott for guest roles on "Ghost Busters," new Saturday-morning series to have its premiere this fall on the CBS Television Network. Knight, who is a leading regular on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show."

The BIBLE Says

QUESTION: After reading Eph. 2:8-9, how can you say that "works" are necessary to salvation?

There are at least four different kinds of works mentioned in the New Testament. We are not saved by three of them. Paul says the works of the law will not save, Rom. 3:27-28. Then, those works about which man could boast, as recorded in Eph. 2:8-9 will not save; and of course the works of the flesh that are mentioned in Gal. 5:19 will not save.

Even though the above are specifically stated works that will not save, Peter said in Acts 10:34-35 that if a man feareth God and worketh righteousness — he can be saved. So, there are works that are righteous works. Well, what are they? In Psalms 119:172 David states that "all God's commandments are righteousness." Thus every command that has been given today in the New Testament times regarding one becoming a Christian and living the Christian life is a work of righteousness that must be done if we are to be saved. Have you done all God's works that you might be saved? If you are not a Christian, you must believe (a work), repent (a work) and be baptized (a work) that you might be saved (cf. Acts 2:37-38). Whose works are those — man's works? No! They are the commands of God and therefore works of righteousness.

Mafia

different attitude toward the Mafia.

"Sicily had been invaded again and again since, Greek and Roman times," he observed, "and the people were always being victimized by foreign oppressors and corrupt governments."

"Four or five hundred years ago, the Mafia seemed like the best thing the people could do at the time. And the same thing continued. Sicily didn't emerge from the Middle Ages until the end of the last century."

"THE ROOTS of the Mafia" is expected to reach American television next year. The series may well run smack into NBC's celebration of the Mafia, recently announced.

The network has made a reported $15-million deal with Paramount by which Francis Ford Coppola will re-edit the two "Godfather" features, as well as hours of sequences cut from them for timing reasons. In nine or 10 hours, Coppola will retell in chronological order the saga of the Corleone family from Sicily to Las Vegas.

'M-A-S-H' replacements on hand

Reynolds. "But we have to go from being emotional about it to being professional about it. We've had to fill the void and act."

"The basic arena is still there, and it creates a marvelous theatrical experience. In 'M-A-S-H' you have a number of men and women placed in a foreign land where they can't leave, saving lives while everyone else is trying to destroy them."

"The introduction of new cast members gives a chance to re-examine the relationships and create new ones. New people can be an advantage to a show."

Both producers — Gelbart is also story consultant and Reynolds directs many of the shows — still seemed puzzled by the walkouts of Stevenson and Rogers.

"We've never had any secrets on 'M-A-S-H,'" said Gelbart, a veteran TV comedy writer.

"We always sat around with the actors and encouraged them to speak up — and they did. That has been true at all levels of production. Ours is an idealistic show, in working habits as well as content. A show that depicts man's inhumanity to man should be run with a concern for people."

THE "M-A-S-H" makers face other hazards besides the loss of cast.

CBS has moved the series to Friday night at 8:30.

"We've been on Sunday, Saturday and Tuesday in the first three seasons; each year we have to build our audience all over again," Gelbart lamented.

The 8:30 slot means "M-A-S-H" lands in the Family Hour, the network-enforced edict for early-evening entertainment "appropriate for viewing by a general family audience."

"So far we've felt only a teeny bit of pressure," said Gelbart.

"But we expect to be subject to censorship in the twin areas of sex and religion, where much of 'M-A-S-H's' comedy comes from. To be told what we can and cannot say is humiliating and potentially dangerous."

LIFE/STYLE—L/S-1

Heroism prevails in print

By BRAD ALTMAN
Staff Writer

Superman, Conan the Barbarian and Spider-Man are helping Wonderworld Books stay in business.

"At this bookstore, comic book super heroes are taken seriously," says co-owner Richard Kyle. "Fifty per cent of our sales are in comics-related merchandise."

Kyle and his business partner, Fred Patten, attempt to stock every comic book published in the United States at their tiny store at 220 E. Broadway. Squeezed between a fast printing business and a cafeteria, the shop has bookshelves overflowing with 425 titles.

The other half of the inventory is in some 1,500 science-fiction paperbacks and a line of hero stories such as Doc Savage, The Avenger and The Shadow. Miscellany includes general interest magazines, specialized "fandom" newsletters for science fiction and comics buffs and European comic books, superior in artwork and writing to the American, claims Kyle, 36, a former detective and fiction writer.

"We've been open a year and a half. Our theme is 'wonder world.' We sell merchandise oriented to romance in the older sense of the word, heroines and heroes. Science fiction and comics revolve around fantasy, attempting to extrapolate current problems and solve them. Most stores turn their backs on these kinds of publications."

HIS PARTNER, Patten, 33, is a research librarian at Hughes Aircraft in Culver City and works at the shop on weekends while Kyle and two employees, Paul Brandi and Alan Brenner, keep it open the rest of the time.

The pair met in 1971 when Kyle was publishing a magazine entitled "Wonderworld" for persons interested in comic books as an art form. Patten submitted an article on foreign comic books and Kyle bought it.

As a service to readers, they imported hard-to-obtain foreign comics. The mail order business caught on and they decided it didn't take much more money to open a retail store. Now the walk-in trade has overtaken the mail order sales.

Kyle says few of their customers believe the old stereotype that comic books are a lower cultural form only for children or for adults too stupid or lazy to read regular books.

"Most of our customers are college age or older," says Kyle. "We have doctors, psychologists, even a tattoo artist, who buy the comics regularly."

"Technically, in the quality of artwork and writing, comic books are better than they've ever been." He believes comics are in "middle-age." After a decline in the early 70s, they are ready to take off into something really superior."

Kyle cites the European comic books as an

COMIC BOOKS — once considered reading fodder for low mentalities — are coming of age and their readers today regard them not only as entertainment, but as highly collectible art forms. Particularly prized are comics published in Europe where illustrators are called designers and painstaking pride is reflected in their drawings and nuances of color used.

example of comic book potential in the United States.

"In Europe, comic books are put in hardbound covers and are meant to be a permanent part of your library. The comics illustrators are called designers and they collect royalties, which give them an incentive to do good work."

"Generally, American illustrators get paid for each page they draw. Illustrators are technically freelance even though they may work for one company their entire career. They're paid on page rates, not a weekly salary."

As a result, Kyle asserts, American illustrators produce quantity, not quality. He also lambasts the quality of the color reproduction in American comics.

"The illustrator can only indicate what color he wants, sort of like a paint by number approach. The engraver puts the color on. This conversion process prevents any subtlety in color."

"IN EUROPE, the quality of the artwork is superior — similar to the Little Annie Fanny comic in Playboy. You can see the brush strokes."

Most of the European comic books in stock sell for $3.25 a piece, while the American comic book now costs 25 cents each.

Although collectors are frequent visitors to Wonderworld Books, Kyle and Patten do not sell the rare issues they covet.

"Years ago comic book collectors were genuine

Life after 70 has meaning for these women

By DIANNE SMITH
Staff Writer

She has an aura of quiet elegance and Eastern breeding. Soft-spoken and reserved, she volunteers no more information than asked for — a novice to the world of promotion.

She is Felicia Warburg Roosevelt, wife of Franklin D. Jr. And, what she tried to do in her just-published book, "Doers and Dowagers" (Doubleday, $8.95), is present glimpses into the lives, loves and times of 20 of America's great women.

"When you read the book, you'll understand what I tried to do," she kept saying during a late afternoon interview atop Occidental Towers in downtown Los Angeles.

"I realized there was a remarkable generation of women over 70 the likes of which probably will not be seen again. They all had strong father images and are generally a breed of strong and determined women. Many are also very religious."

"I BELIEVE THEY can serve as role models for many women seeking answers to their identity. I started with a list of 30, some declined. I think I got access to many of them because I'm not a professional writer."

Mrs. Roosevelt was in Los Angeles as part of a promotion tour that took her to San Francisco for three days and to the Southland for a week, combined with a visit to her sister in Beverly Hills. "I still have Dallas to do. Neiman Marcus wants to do some promotion because Mrs. (Herbert) Marcus is included in the book."

Before going to Texas, however, she's flying home to New York via Aspen, Colo., to retrieve her two daughters and return to California for a vacation drive up the coast to the Monterey Peninsula. "My sister and I spent summers in Atherton, so I'm familiar with Northern California," she said.

"Home" is now divided between a farm in Dutchess County and an apartment in New York City. The only "remnant of the children at home is a cat." Her daughters, by her first marriage to Robert Sarnoff, chairman of the board of RCA, are away. The 16-year-old attends boarding school and the 19-year-old is in college. Her husband's four children are grown.

The farm also includes horses — "I ride and my husband likes to fox hunt" — and the usual menagerie.

Her only writing experience before the book was magazine articles. "But, I love meeting people and these were fascinating women." Her shortest interview was 1½ hours. The longest, with Mrs. Rose Kennedy, was 24 hours.

"She graciously invited me to spend a day with her in Palm Beach. She rejected three sets of questions I submitted in advance, so I sort of played it by ear. I started talking about her relationships with her grandchildren because that's never been written and then worked back from there."

MRS. ROOSEVELT said she had the name for the book and the list of women she wanted to interview, then contacted Doubleday. "They asked me how long I thought it would take to complete. I said about a year and a half. I brought the completed manuscript in 1 year and 5 months later."

"I turned in one draft and it was accepted except for the chapter on Mrs. Kennedy, which I had to rewrite (it's the longest chapter in the 228-page book). I had rewritten it myself three times before submitting the book."

She spent six months in libraries researching the women she would interview. "I sat for hours reading yellowed pages of the New York Times."

All of the women in her book are living, except Marjorie Merriweather Post, who died shortly before she completed the interviews. Her mother-in-law, Eleanor Roosevelt, would surely have qualified for inclusion if she were still alive.

The book is divided into four parts — The Dowagers, The Matriarchs, The Achievers and The Living Legends.

The Dowagers, whom she defines as "a woman who has inherited money from her husband," are Marjorie Merriweather Post, Mrs. Lytle Huntington Hull, Mrs. William Woodward, Mrs. Harper Sibley, Mrs. William Roth and Mrs. Nion Tucker (whose father founded the San Francisco Chronicle).

She calls them "monarchs of yesteryear" and "feminine thoroughbreds," brought up as part of America's aristocracy of the 1900s. She also uses the connotation of dowager which says "a woman of certain social standing who has achieved because of age, position and status among peers."

The Matriarchs include Mrs. William Buckley (mother of the U.S. Senator and the columnist), Mrs. Marcus, Mrs. Kennedy (whose daily routine is very structured and punctual), Mrs. Malcolm Peabody (widow of the former Episcopal bishop of Central New York State and mother of the former governor

FORMER Beatle Paul McCartney — new hit album made number 1 on charts in four countries.

Q: I think Howard K. Smith is one of the most believable commentators on television. What is his academic background? How did he pay his dues? Is he married and does he have children? — Mrs. B.P., Skokie, Ill.

A: In 1942 Howard married Benedicte Traberg, a former Danish newswoman, in Switzerland. They have two adult offspring.

Born May 12, 1914, in Ferriday, La., the cream of the commentators graduated from Tulane in 1936. A Rhodes Scholar, he more than paid his dues.

In 1960 he moderated the first TV debates between presidential candidates Jack Kennedy and Dick Nixon. In '66 he did several newsworthy specials in Vietnam. In '71 he was the first member of the TV fraternity to do a face-to-face interview with Nixon, and in '72 he accompanied the President on his mission to Moscow.

Q: What's the name of the catchy theme song played on "Sanford and Son." Can it be had on a record? — Pete Fitzpatrick, Peoria, Ill.

A: Yes. The song is called "Sanford and Son Theme (Street Beater Theme)," by Quincy Jones. And it's available on an RCA album entitled "Sanford and Son," the series producer Saul Turteltaub informs us.

Q: Settle a bet. I claim Barbara Stanwyck once co-starred with Elvis Presley in a movie. I can't remember its name but I can't forget her face next to his. Can you help me out? — Mildred Raleigh, Long Beach.

A: Yes. It was the 1964 Paramount picture, "Roustabout." In the film, Barbara plays a smalltime carnival owner who hires Elvis as a roustabout. The actress still looked glamorous even though she wore bluejeans in the movie. Famed film couturier Edith Head custom-tailored the jeans, first bleaching and aging the material.

Q: Any fresh good humor on the economic front? — L.M.Y., Memphis.

A: Yes. Bob Orben claims the man on the hot dog wagon predicted good times ahead. His source? A group of Chase Manhattan board directors to whom he served lunch.

Q: How's my favorite ex-Beatle, Paul McCartney, doing these days? — Ms. Terri McN., Richmond, Va.

A: He's reaching beyond the moon with his "Venus and Mars" album, which winged into orbit in four countries, hitting the No. 1 spot in England, France, Japan and the U.S.

Q: Having been so friendly with Richard Nixon, was Johnny Cash disillusioned by Watergate? — A.P.Q., Chicago.

'Taxi Driver' stars encounter New York streets

It is only 8 p.m. Not even the shank of the evening. But a small crowd is already gathering on East 69th Street. Passersby stop passing by. Everyone pauses for a gander at the spectacle about to unfold, the crowd gradually swelling into the hundreds.

Now there are only three things that can divert Manhattanites from their suicidal pace: (1) an epileptic fit on the sidewalk, (2) a demonstration of chanting, stomping Hare Krishnas, or (3) the making of a movie. Since epilepsy and Eastern religions are hardly this writer's domain, you know it had to be a movie.

An attractive Vogue-ette in a wrap-around denim skirt parks her poodle near a fire hydrant and asks a production assistant what the movie is.

"Taxi Driver."

"With Robert DeNiro?" (She must read Variety.)

"Yeah."

"Too much!" she squeals with delight, gluing herself in her tracks while her poodle gives up and falls asleep on the curb. The men in the crowd are not to be shortchanged either. They stick around to bask in the glow of the radiant Cybill Shepherd. DeNiro and Cybill are the two best reasons New Yorkers have had to hang around a movie set since Robert Redford and Faye Dunaway shot "Three Days of the Condor" here last winter.

LIKE A SUNRISE, the scene gradually comes to life. Equipment vans open and all sorts of cameras, platforms, backdrop screens, sound paraphernalia and assorted technical artifacts come pouring out to be properly assembled on the set. But the bulk of attention is centered on a Yellow Cab parked in front of one of the townhouses. Sitting in the driver's seat is Robert DeNiro.

But wait. It's not DeNiro at all. It's his double, a young New York actor named Jon Cutler who does look like DeNiro with just a soupcon of Al Pacino (who looks like Dustin Hoffman with just a pinch of Richard Dreyfuss.) Cutler has the thankless job of disappointing autograph seekers with his true identity. Some of the fans, out of embarrassed politeness, ask for his autograph anyway. It's the sort of thing that can give an actor an acute case of identity crisis.

Meanwhile, Cybill's stand-in, Jane Fuller, has been standing on the curb near the cab with no problems at all. Mistaken identity was not her concern. She really doesn't look much like Cybill (how many girls do?). It hardly mattered anyway, since their only real function was to assume the positions on the set which the stars would later take over, in order to determine the best camera and lighting angles in advance. All very boring.

SUDDENLY, SHAZAM! The set is charged with energy as Napoleon-sized director Martin Scorsese, 32, surges through the crowd. He has the unquestionable air of a commander who is quietly but firmly in charge of his commando unit. No fits of fury, no impatiently barked orders — just calm, collected and self-assured instructions for his cast and crew to follow. Scorsese insists he doesn't know what he's doing to friends, actors and other directors who visit his sets, but this meek-looking, low-key bolt of lightning from Little Italy is the professional antithesis of Otto Preminger.

He pops raisins, vitamin pills and Maalox to keep his stomach from doing somersaults because he's still more surprised than anyone else to find himself in the top ranks of American directors.

He first gained critical attention with "Mean Streets" in 1973, and last year made the promise come true with "Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore." Actors adore him. Ellen Burstyn says it was her confidence in Scorsese that won her Oscar as Alice.

Every director who films in New York complains about the problems. Surprisingly, Scorsese doesn't have any gripes about filming in his own home town. "There hasn't been any trouble with unions or crowds and we've shot in some difficult locations — the Bellmore Cafeteria where the all-night cabbies hang out, an Eighth Avenue porno house, Columbus Circle, the Garment Center at high noon and a political rally in Brooklyn Heights. New York is the greatest movie set in the world."

THE ONLY INCIDENTS have been more humorous than troublesome. The company got caught in a real traffic jam in the Garment Center and the four-letter words of the real taxi drivers sitting in the 95-degree heat with their meters running would make this an x-rated film. "Also," says Scorsese with a grin, "one day when it was pouring rain we were filming DeNiro in the cab near Columbus Circle. Some businessman in a hurry spotted the cab, came rushing over and hopped right in. DeNiro was so startled all he could do was point to his "off duty" sign. The guy bounced right back out, cursing a blue streak all the way down the sidewalk. He never even saw the cameras."

ROBERT DENIRO, who won an Oscar for role in "Godfather — Part II", is terrified of interviews and tape recorders.

The worst obstacles for Scorsese and his troupe were the thunderstorms that ravaged New York during the entire month of July. Nobody can hold that against New York — rain can fall anywhere.

Actually, as things turned out later in the evening, Scorsese had spoken too soon about the city posing no threats. At 3 a.m., while gathering some front-view footage of DeNiro driving Cybill in the taxi, the camera carriage attached to the hood of the cab was jarred loose and sent crashing to the pavement due to an unplanned encounter with one of New York's infamous potholes. The moral is, I guess, if you have anything nice to say about New York, knock on wood first.

SCORSESE'S SETS are like an open house. On "Taxi Driver" his biggest booster has been his mother. Mrs. Scorsese has been bringing homemade hot Italian doughnuts every day for the cast and crew, and her efforts were duly appreciated until one day when during a take she mistakenly thought nothing was happening, so off she bustled into camera range toting a platter of hot pastries. "Cut!" yelled Scorsese. "Ma, please, I'm directing a movie!"

Between anecdotes, Scorsese finds time for serious talk about "Taxi Driver." To him, it's "many things — but mainly about loneliness, depression and violence in the isolated world of a big city. The character DeNiro plays is someone emotionally arrested at the age of 13: It's about a guy who desperately needs to be recognized for something but he has nothing he can do to gain himself the recognition. He has something to say, but he's not sure what, so finally, out of frustration, he turns to violence as a means of expressing himself. It's kind of an exorcism for me. That's why I have to make this movie. It'll be more like 'Mean Streets' than 'Alice'."

The actors Scorsese is working with are a strange blend indeed. DeNiro, fresh from his Oscar triumph in "Godfather-Part II," is considered by many as the best young actor in movies today. Cybill, others will tell you, gets by on her looks. (I'd like to go on record as one critic who does not believe this is so.) It would seem Scorsese has a great challenge either way, but his own formula for directing actors is simple and proven.

"I find I have to get to know them as human beings first, and I really have to like them to be able to coax the best possible performances out of them.

"This time, I really do like the people I'm directing — DeNiro, Cybill, Harvey Keitel and Peter Boyle. Everyone is working for very little money so we could get this film made. We all believe in the film. And when my actors like me, there's a certain kind of mutual trust that develops. I let them try a lot of things. I let them experiment. But in the back of my mind, I know there are certain things I definitely do not want and other things I do want. By letting them experiment, I usually get what I want sooner or later. DeNiro has great gut instincts. I trust his choices. And Cybill is just great."

Scorsese says he only saw her in "The Last Picture Show" and "Heartbreak Kid" and thought she was great in those, so he doesn't know anything about her bad reviews in her last two films, "Daisy Miller" and "At Long Last Love," both directed by her lover, Peter Bogdanovich.

DURING TAKES, DeNiro is the very portrait of intensity and concentration. When the camera isn't turning, he turns into Greta Garbo, shunning all communication. He is literally terrified of interviews and dreads the sight of a tape recorder with the mortified manner of a murder victim staring down the barrel of a 12-gauge shotgun. He doesn't talk about his personal life, his work or much of anything else.

On the other hand, Cybill, the Southern Belle of the Seventies, is intimidated by nothing. Daisy fresh and radiantly lovely, she retires to her trailer between takes and talks up a storm about everything from cucumber face cream to Sue Mengers.

Especially optimistic are her feelings about working for other directors in this new phase of her career which Hollywood wags are calling "the dawning of her post-Bogdanovich era." She's not nervous. "I love it! I really love it! I have learned a lot working with Peter."

The instant is happened

"Arriverderci, Roma"

Outside, the fog was thick. Inside, the mood was warm and cozy. In the plush Belvedere lounge, men and women sipped their cognacs or danced to the sentimental music of an eight-piece orchestra. A murmur of quiet bidding rose from the cardroom. In the cabins, some passengers were already asleep, their last night out. On the decks, the late strollers were getting their last whiff of sea air. In the passageways, others picked their way around the luggage, packed, tagged and ready for customs. The orchestra signed off the evening with "Arriverderci, Roma." The Italian liner Andrea Doria, sailing southwest in a gentle sea, would be in New York in the morning.

A few miles away, the Swedish-American liner Stockholm steamed northeast on her first night out of New York en route to Copenhagen. A lovely wave danced off her sharp bow, which had been reinforced for ice in northern ports. Fog spoiled the view, but ship's officers assured passengers there would be pleasant nights ahead.

By 11 p.m., July 25, 1956, both ships were sailing in opposite directions through the busy lanes south of the Nantucket lightship, a stretch of sea off Massachusetts which sailors call "The Times Square of the North Atlantic."

And at 11:22 p.m., the mighty prow of the Stockholm hit the starboard side of the Andrea Doria aft of the flying bridge and, in a great roar of grinding, crunching metal, penetrated 30 feet. Then, there was a shudder of ship frames and a shower of sparks, and the two vessels jerked apart.

On the Andrea Doria, deck strollers were slammed against bulkheads and cardplayers were thrown to the floor and the tables were torn from their sockets and sleepers were jerked from their beds and bounced against the walls, and in the screaming confusion, passengers racing for the decks met passengers racing back to their cabins for their families and their lifejackets. The ship began to list badly, and water and oil sloshed through the corridors.

Death made incredible choices. Linda Morgan, aged 12, was lifted from her upper bunk and somehow ended up alive on the retreating bow of the Stockholm. Her younger stepsister, in the lower bunk of the same cabin, was killed. In the adjoining cabin, her mother lived; her stepfather died.

Before dawn, nearly all of the 1,650 survivors were safely aboard rescue vessels. Fifty-one others were lost, some under crashing steel, others in the dark sea.

And at 10:09 a.m., July 26, 1956, the Andrea Doria raises her stilled propellers to the sky and sinks in 225 feet of water.

Up above, Harry Trask of the Boston Traveler is having trouble maneuvering his Speed Graphic and his 200-pound, five-foot-four frame in the tiny Beechcraft Bonanza. The Andrea Doria lies over on her side. "Circle her as tight as you can," says the photographer. "Lean forward." He finds the room to play the camera behind the pilot's back. The ship lunges and Harry Trask shoots...

AT WIT'S END

Now, new destination

When you talk about it in years to come, you will refer to it as "The Last Family Vacation."

It will start out like a score of other family vacations...one kid will yell because he has to sit on the hard hump in the middle of the seat...Another will sulk for 30 miles because he can't hear the radio... And another will hang his feet out of the window

because his legs are cramped. (When did they grow so tall?)

There will still be the perennial recording of "When we gonna eat?" (muted because their mouths are full of food). And you'll ask, "Anyone for a hamburger? A salad? A piggy wiggly hot dog?" (Did it always cost $20 to buy them lunch?)

Boredom hangs like a thick fog over the entire back seat.

"HEY, KIDS," you say. "Look at the colors in that mountain."

"Gross."

"Would you believe that sunset? It's like a painting."

"Gross."

"Hey, group, Daddy and I are going to chip in and buy you all a new word when we stop."

"Gross."

(When did the excitement of a mountain give way to Mad magazine?)

At the beach, you begin to suspect things are changing when you and Daddy are the only two splashing around in the water. One child is in a phone booth making plans to split. Another has found a girl and is trying to palm himself off as an orphan. And the other is going through Daddy's trousers getting the car keys. (When did they stop talking to us?)

Going home, it is like old times. They are excited at the idea of going swimming with a friend, making it in time for a party, and bolting to their rooms to turn up the stereo until their ears shrivel.

AS YOU UNLOAD the car, there is a silence. Without saying a word, everyone seems to know what the silence means. It is a moratorium to the last family vacation.

It will never be the same again. The wet diapers in the plastic bags under your feet. The soggy cookies...strains of "This Old Man He Played One"... burying your feet in the sand...cries of "He's hitting"...the cold caves, the burnt hot dogs, the camper that leaked...the giggles at bedtime...the laundromats and the wonderful, warm feeling that a woman feels when she sees her family tucked in at night.

It is the end of an era...the beginning of a new one.

You might allow yourself the luxury of a tear. Or you might say to yourself half in anger, "God! Why did I spend every summer vacation yelling, 'Don't throw rocks in the water' and 'Don't sit on the seats!'"

SOCIALLY SPEAKING

Poor ants were idle 50 years

WAY BACK IN 1925, Long Beach Rotary Club held a first annual family picnic. Current President Jack Dalton discovered that the club had forgotten to have a second annual. So, after a slight gap of 50 years, Jack, his wife, Helen, and assorted Rotary families gathered at the Long Beach Pistol Range to correct the oversight. Organizing a picnic for more than 300 people is no picnic as organizers Jim Hillman and wife, Judy, and Bud Nance and wife, Loretta, will tell you. They had help from a committee of fellow Rotarians such as Tom Clemo and his wife, Ann. They brought along a lawn mower to ensure that the croquet green would be perfect. Niles and Mary Jane Haton thought up the wacky six-minute marathon which netted Mary and Margaret Davis two tickets to San Francisco for their efforts. Gary Flynn brought along his guitar and his wife, Jo, never dreaming that they would win the door prize of two tickets to Lake Tahoe. Other committee members were Ralph Hatch (Lois was ill and couldn't attend), Russ and Mary Glass, Foster and Marie Hooper and Elliott and Denise Severson.

SUMMER IS a popular time for weddings. Such as the one last week that united Chef Leonard Leonard and eight brides. Yes, eight. It all started some weeks ago when KFI radio wits Lohman and Barkley announced that Leonard, a show character (and I do mean character!), was lonely and needed a wife. Of course, the wife had to have extra special attributes. Joan Wilson of Long Beach decided that her Thursday Night Bridge Club members, collectively, would fill the bill. So she sent, according to the rules, a group picture and a recipe from the TBC's own cookbook which they published (mimeographed) some years ago. The recipe was an original one for boiled water. Leonard Leonard couldn't make up his mind from among the many entries so he chose the Bridge Club ladies as his bride and honorable (?) mention went to Elizabeth Blakeship of San Bernardino who actually (?) works in the Sugar Plum Bakery. Ceremony was held at the posh Blue Front Club in Los Angeles. Posh in this case stands for Purely Outrageous Saloon House. Proprietor Bill Bath provided champagne and wedding cake for the guests. Bridegroom Leonard Leonard (looking suspiciously like Al Lohman) was attired in a white chef's outfit. Pastor Starmer (who could be Roger Barkley's twin brother) wore the usual clergyman's attire. The brides were all in white. Joan Wilson zipped down to the local thrift shop and picked up a keen dress for $3. She accented it with a bouquet of radishes and scallions surrounding a six pound squash. Mary Moore of Bellflower chose a micro mini accented by white knee boots. Bonnie Fisher of Downey was in lace pajamas and every piece of jewelry she owns. Harriet Barney of Inglewood borrowed her grandmother's petticoat and added an apron for an effective touch. Ruth Hillman, also of Inglewood, wore her 1940 prom dress. Whittier member Marge Pintner was stunning in a mummus with a wedding cake decoration stuck, miraculously, on top of her head. Husbands viewing the bigamous proceedings were Glenn Wilson, Bill Peebles, Ray Gullstrand and Bill Pintner. MY HUSBAND, (and a lot of other husbands) would be delighted if every invitation stated "no neckties, please." So said invitations sent by a committee of businessmen for a cocktail cruise in honor of State Sen. George Deukmejian and his wife, Gloria. Some 400 well wishers boarded the Long Beach King to enjoy a harbor cruise, hors d'oeuvres and live music. Don Dyer and Mike Nott were coordinators of the just-for-fun (not funds) party. Committee helpers were Whitey Littlefield, Councilman Don Phillips, Chris Pook, Chuck Anderson, Dick Kussman, Bob Krueger, the senator's administrative aide, Steve Kinney and Shannon Heaton.

THE NEW ETIQUETTE

Good manners come in all colors

It was the type of question which could come only from a teen-ager who went to an all-white school and lived in a white ghetto. "Is the New Etiquette for blacks, too, or do they have their own etiquette?" When I discussed the question with Etta Moten Barnett, a black socialite who lives in Chicago, she chuckled. Mrs. Barnett said that blacks have traditionally observed the same etiquette as whites, and noted that many blacks were more serious about formal etiquette than whites. Mrs. Barnett recalled that as a child, she was constantly being admonished to mind her manners. "You didn't talk with your mouth full. You didn't get down from the table without permission. You washed your hands before meals. You said grace before meals. You were required to be home for meals, home before sundown." Mrs. Barnett said that neither her father nor her husband would have considered coming to the table without a coat on. There were more rules, Mrs. Barnett said. "You couldn't yell across the street at anybody. You crossed your feet at the ankles. Your grandmother, who might have cooked in somebody's kitchen, was stricter than anybody else."

forms of expression. "In the poor ghetto subculture, people carry on a whole conversation in which an actual word is never spoken. It's a sing-song," she said. She said that some people think because the ghetto black has a different form of expression, that he has different values. Ms. McEvilly said that the history of blacks in America has reflected an effort to not be different. "Blacks are people who just adapt like Hell. They have been doing everything to assimilate but change their color." She said that some young blacks have changed their attitude. They are saying, "We will not try to spend all of our time trying to prove that we are trying to adapt." If there is one difference in black and white attitudes, it's the black's traditional respect toward the old people in his family. When the adults in a black family gave an order, the kids jumped. Ms. McEvilly says you may see blacks strike out at symbols of authority in the schools, but it's a "whole different scene in the home." Ms. McEvilly laments the fact that when we meet people from different groups "we approach each other as if we were strangers from outer space." It's very unfortunate. We should never have to ask questions like "Is there black etiquette?" "How do I greet a chicanita?" or "Should I provide chopsticks for Chinese-Americans?" We should all get our act together and get to know each other.

(If you have questions about the new etiquette, or want to share your comments and ideas, write to Ms. Reardon, care of the Independent, Press-Telegram. Questions of general interest will be discussed in future columns.)

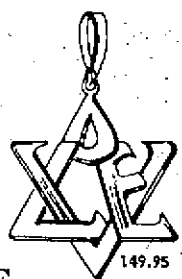

maureen reardon

THE SITUATION in the South was an anomaly, she said. In many white households, blacks had much of the responsibility of raising white children. And so in many cases it was a black who would be teaching whites etiquette. Mrs. Barnett likes to say, with amusement, that "American Negroes taught whites to be civilized." As in white society, there is a different attitude toward etiquette among blacks who are under 40. Mrs. Barnett sees a great trend toward informality among young people. She said that a typical greeting between young blacks is "What's happening?" and commented that there was a time when some blacks thought it loose to use the word "Hi." She says "What's happening?" is not a polite greeting. (I disagree, since friendly communication and not form is what's important.) "And all of this 'man' business..." she continued. "That's not a part of our culture. It's just slang." Marian McEvilly is a sociologist, a member of the Milwaukee school board, and another one of the blacks who told me there is no such thing as black etiquette. She said that people's attitudes toward etiquette aren't affected by race, but by education, occupation, income, and socio-economic status. "You and I could both be black and if I lived on Nob Hill and you didn't, you and I are not going to relate to each other."

Oui, oui! All the leg you'd care to see

By MARJI KUNZ
Knight News Service

PARIS.— The unabashed international leg-man is in for a major disappointment here this summer. The best-looking legs are those of the French men.

That avant-garde breed of young Frenchman who five years ago was haunting flea markets to buy used American jeans has now found a new fashion item for beating the heat — short-shorts. And they are often his own creation, being jeans chopped off just a blush below obscenity.

To some degree, the short-shorts man has the look of a cyclist in his high white socks and rubber soled shoes. But sometimes there's no bike in sight. Instead, he's sauntering along city streets with a young woman also clad in shorts. The big difference is that his show more leg than hers.

In case you wondered, the masculine French legs on view tend to be somewhat better looking than some of the feminine legs peeking out from under skirts. How the Frenchman's legs compare with the American male's legs depends upon the eye of the female beholder. Generally the Frenchman looks as if he's engaged more in indoor sports than in football, soccer or tennis which build noticeable muscle.

IF IT WERE ONLY some fuzzy legs coming out of hiding this summer, it wouldn't seem such a remarkable change in the Frenchman-on-the-street. That space-age equivalent of Charles Boyer has not only cast off his beret (except for a few elderly cab drivers) and tossed down his ascot but he's also unbuttoned his shirt to show his chest and is decorating it with chains and dog-tags.

It's unclear whether it's the influence of male centerfolds in the European editions of Cosmopolitan magazine or that French girls are spending more vacations in Italy and Spain and have regaled their men with stories of the Latin lovers abroad. In any case, more French men are showing more skin in good old buttoned-up Paris than ever before.

You must understand the Frenchman is not by nature a big unbuttoner. He's mostly a one-button or two-button man, unfastened at shirt neckline. Even more so than his American counterpart, traditionalists not only keep their shirts buttoned-up but there may also be an undershirt peeking above a slightly unfastened sport-shirt collar.

And this same guy who's still under wraps also may have knotted a silk scarf around his Adam's apple. If he's tattooed, scarred, bejeweled or hairy beneath, only his nearest and dearest would know. Until now, that is.

ON A WARM summer day, the daring young Frenchman now wears his denim vest with absolutely no shirt beneath, just a couple of skinny gold chains. Or his tan army fatigue shirt is undone to show shiny gold dog tags or crosses.

One young man seated at Aux Deux Magots (a very "in" cafe on Boulevard St. Germain and Rue De Rennes) was wearing his American Trucker's shirt (the kind with a company name on the back and his own on the front, still a fad here) open in front to expose a profusion of chains and lockets.

Don't get the idea any of these fellows are Americans or Italians in Paris on holiday. They speak French, carry French newspapers, smoke French cigarettes.

You might think that with all of this new exposure, the problem of sorting out the fellows from the girls would be considerably easier than in the old jeans-for-everybody days. Not so. Some of those decorated chests don't have a speck of hair on them. And the bared legs are also a problem because even in this enlightened age, not all French girls shave their legs.

Women are asking...

"I like casual clothes in denim, knit, corduroy — but when I take them out of my crowded closet, they often look like an unmade bed. Is there a solution?"

By REBA & BONNIE CHURCHILL

If your wardrobe closet resembles a disaster area — with clothes crowded, slung or piled, better take some tips from researchers. They say you can save money on apparel if you learn to take better care of it. It will look nicer, generally wear longer and help keep the budget solvent.

The key to this wardrobe Eutopia is "organization." Arrange those everyday clothes so they are on view and easily accessible. Store the "seldom wears" and off-season apparel in the back or (hopefully) in a different closet.

Garment bags and shoe shelves protect apparel, yet keep it within reach. Equally important is how you clean your clothes. According to researchers interviewed, "Year-round apparel of washable denim, corduroy and knits stays fresher and more wrinkle-free when a rinse cycle fabric softener is used in the machine or added to the rinse water when washing items by hand. Such aids are designed to add softness to denims, fluffiness to corduroy and reduce or eliminate static cling in synthetic knits.

"So, organize your wash, care and wardrobe timetable. You could look better in your clothes and speedily, too!"

'Taxi' meter running

but I'm learning a lot without him, too. I just wish there were more worthwhile parts for me to do. That's the problem. There are no roles for women."

If Scorsese's description of "Taxi Driver" sounds a bit theoretical, Cybill's version hammers the plot home in a nutshell. "I play an assistant to a Presidential candidate, played by Leonard Harris (a former film critic). And DeNiro, who plays a psychotic Vietnam vet, admires me from afar.

"Finally he gets up the nerve to walk into campaign headquarters and ask me to go out with him. I do. We have a few good times, but then I decide he's a bit crazy and I drop him. As a result of my rejecting him, he tries to assassinate the candidate I'm working for, but he fails. Meanwhile, he murders some very important criminals and gets a lot of heroic publicity and at the end of the film, I just happen to hail the very cab he's driving and he drives me home."

And that's the very scene they're attempting to film on East 69th Street. DeNiro and Cybill are in the cab, idling 50 yards from the front of a brownstone house. The crowd is a sea of deathly silence.

"Ready, Bobby!" yells Scorsese.

The cab approaches and pulls up to the curb. Cybill gets out, exchanges a few words and some embarrassed glances with DeNiro, then turns and ascends the steps. DeNiro follows her with his eyes until she is safely inside, smirks to himself, and pulls the cab out 20 feet just past the camera.

"Cut!"

The crowd, gently mocking the simplicity of the take, cheers wildly. The taxi driver, in typical Robert DeNiro fashion, grins sheepishly, but does not utter a word.

You had to be there.

Thomas Jefferson might have invented this rocker

But he didn't

The construction of this chair is so ingenious you could well expect to find the original in Monticello. As another of those amazing household creations from the inventive mind of Mr. Jefferson. Its perfectly balanced rocking motion is incredibly smooth. It utilizes no springs, no type of rocker mechanism. Never squeaks, never needs oil. Total relaxation is almost unavoidable. With its beautifully embroidered liberty bell and eagle, it will be a priceless piece of Americana in your own Monticello. In olive green, gold or red velvet, as well as blue.

Los Angeles-based California State Museum of Science and Industry has become the first "science" museum in the nation to be accredited officially by the American Association of Museums as a Science and Technology Center.

A dividend of this award, it is expected, will be that the museum will qualify for special grants from federally-operated agencies and national private foundations.

The museum has 20 halls of permanent exhibits on California industry, health, natural resources and contemporary science, plus 60 temporary

In the Science of Aviation Hall, the Apollo Soyuz Test Project has been recreated on three giant wall panels with the cooperation of Rockwell International. Until Sept. 4, you may see the "Sixth Annual Union Artist Exhibit," a gallery of labor's art works in celebration of the United States Bicentennial including paintings, sculpture and photography.

Sponsored by the Los Angeles County Federation of Labor, AFL-CIO, it calls attention of the community to the cultural activities of union members and their families.

THE SCYTHIAN gold exhibit, which opened Wednesday at Los Angeles County Museum of Art, 5005 Wilshire Blvd., bringing archaeological treasures from the Hermitage Museum in Leningrad and the Kiev State Museum, Russia, will run through Sept. 4. Hours are 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. seven days a week. However, the last admittance is at 9:30 p.m. — and that would be leaving very little time to appreciate this extraordinary, beautiful exhibit.

Member preview days drew 4,481 persons Monday and 5,372 Tuesday. Wednesday, opening day for the public, 3,198 attended. Waiting time is not overlong and the opportunity to see this magnificent collection of treasures dating from 3000 B.C. to 100 B.C. is rare.

The exhibition in the United States was made possible with the assistance of a grant of $200,000 from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

De Waart, Fiedler, pianists at Bowl

Three promising young pianists on today's concert stage — Emanuel Ax, Myung-Whun Chung and Ilana Vered — will make their Hollywood Bowl debuts with the Los Angeles Philharmonic in a four-night display of prize-winning keyboard talent Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Edo de Waart, permanent conductor of the Rotterdam Philharmonic and recently appointed principal guest conductor of the San Francisco Symphony, will be on the podium Tuesday and Thursday evenings.

His soloist Tuesday night will be Emanuel Ax, 25-year-old winner of the Rubinstein International Piano Competition in Tel Aviv and 1975 recipient of the Michaels Award of Young Concert Artists. The Dutch maestro will lead Ax and the Philharmonic in Liszt's A major concerto and will conduct Beethoven's "Coriolan" Overture and Mahler's "Symphony No. 1."

Thursday, de Waart will turn to French music with a program that lists Bizet's Suite, "L'Arlesienne," Berlioz's "Symphonie Fantastique" and Saint-Saens' "Piano Concerto No. 2." The featured soloist, Myung-Whun Chung, was first prize winner in both the 1970 New phonic event in-Hollywood Bowl history. Last season's gross for the Tchaikovsky spectacular was $131,346.

The $141,208 figure represents total attendance of 33,635 (16,073 on Friday, 17,562 on Saturday) for the two performances conducted by Michael Tilson Thomas and featuring the Philharmonic debut of pianist Tedd Joselson as soloist in the First Piano Concerto. Last year the attendance was 31,259.

Smoking impairs fetal breathing

SMOKING OF TWO cigarettes consecutively by a pregnant woman reduces the proportion of time that fetal breathing movements are present.

The finding is that of medical investigators at the Nuffield Institute for Medical Research, Oxford, England.

The significance is not yet known. But researchers point out that factors such as reduced oxygen or low blood sugar also reduce fetal breathing movements. And these physiological factors might be expected to have a detrimental effect on the fetus, researchers note.

The researchers also point out that in some countries doctors are beginning to use fetal breathing movements as an index of health.

In the British study, however, all 18 women in the study were subsequently delivered of normal, healthy babies.

Details are reported in the British Medical Journal.

A STUDY OF 92 children with chronic asthma who have taken cortisone-like drugs for several years has revealed cataracts in 10 of the young patients.

Suspicious eye changes have been observed in 21 others.

Cataracts are a clouding of the lens of the eye.

Researchers at the National Asthma Center in Denver, Colo., say special eye examinations should be performed on children on long-term cortisone-type therapy.

Prednisone was the drug taken by the children, although some of the patients took other varieties of this type of drug as well.

Details of the study appear in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

BLOOD-PRESSURE readings should always involve the left arm, says a British physician.

The reading in the right arm is often slightly higher than in the left, says Dr. Eric Frankel of London, England. But more important is the fact that the left arm is easier to "read" than the right, Dr. Frankel thinks this must be due to the difference in the origins of certain arteries.

His report is in the Journal Lancet.

NEW RESEARCH by New York City investigators suggests that a chemical deficiency in the body may be responsible for the mental illness of schizophrenia.

Drs. Rafael N. Levi and Samuel Waxman of Mount Sinai school of medicine, New York City, say the factor appears to be a deficiency in a substance known as methionine adenosyltransferase.

If this turns out to be the case, then replacement treatment would be effective.

Add a touch of lace

The history of lace is an intriguing blend of artistry, practicality, romance, mechanical inventiveness, and even includes insight into greed.

Notting, the basis of lace, was handmade by sailors, fishermen, farmers, and housewives for many utilitarian purposes. The art was not confined to working people, as it's recorded that in 1783 the Duchess of Portland, England, occupied herself making nets to protect cherry trees.

In the 17th and 18th centuries, lace became so elegant that it was heavy with gold and silver thread. This, in turn, led to a peculiar pastime called "parfilage." Women in the courts of England and France, unabashedly asked gentlemen for lace and epaulets, unraveled the precious threads and sold them to goldsmiths. Some didn't even ask! "Lace-snatching" reached such scandalous proportions that "indignant society brought it to an end," according to the book, "History of Needlework Tools."

EVENTUALLY, crude machinery was invented to make lace netting. It was the forerunner of today's hosiery and magnificent machine-made lace which is within the price range of everyone.

Lace is among the most versatile items you can use as trims. The various styles and widths may be used as frances dietrich

borders, bandings, edgings and insertion on lingerie, evening wear, bridal gowns, day dresses, articles for baby, children's clothes and in home decorating.

Types of lace include Alencon, which has a background of very fine mesh, featuring floral motifs outlined with corded thread. Cluny lace uses thread of heavier dimension, emulating hand-made lace.

Cluny is characterized by oval medallions, wheel or wheat motifs. Crochet lace, which you may know as "tatting," consists of a design formed by looping one continuous strand of thread to create a heavy hand-made look in narrower form than Cluny.

Val, or Valenciennes, lace is worked throughout with threads of the same very fine diameter. It has a mesh ground with diamond-shaped or round holes interspersed with floral or scroll designs. It is available in widths of one-half to one and a half inches; "baby" Val from one-quarter to one-half inch.

Val lace seam binding of 100 per cent nylon is five-eighths of an inch wide. It has one straight edge and one scalloped edge so that it will conform to straight or curved shapes. It is an elegant finish for hems, seams, facings or lingerie. Its stretch characteristic makes it ideal for use with knit fabric.

VENICE LACE is approximately the same weight as Cluny, but has a more open effect. It is actually embroidery on a silk or synthetic fabric base, which is dissolved after the stitching is finished, leaving only the embroidery. Heavier in character than the fine mesh laces, it is more flexible in usage. It is suitable for day dresses, sportswear, evening and bridal wear. Venice lace is sold in widths from one-half inch to three inches.

Select lace carefully so that both the trim and the garment can receive the same laundering procedure. Lace and fabric should also be compatible in weight and in fashion character. If the garment has curves which you intend to follow, use lace which is flexible enough to be eased.

Don't overlook the possibility of finding exquisite lace on clothing in resell-it shops. After ripping the lace off the fabric, refurbish it by washing in a mesh or cheesecloth bag in mild, lukewarm suds. Rinse three times in lukewarm water. Pat with a towel. Spread the lace flat on a terry towel to dry. To press, cover with press cloth and press gently with the iron at low temperature. Baste fragile lace to muslin and wash gently in the same way.

ira corn on bridge

Dear Mr. Corn: When an opponent leads out of turn, I invariably choose the wrong penalty and I end up loser instead of winner. Any suggestions?

Born Loser
Stevens Point, Wis.

Answer: You probably remember those times you chose wrong more so than your winning choices. Harry Goldwater, ACHL tournament director, has a good philosophy.

He maintains that one should always accept the lead. "If the leader doesn't know whose lead it is, what makes you think he knows what to lead?"

Dear Mr. Corn: I made a slip of the tongue pass and corrected it immediately to one spade. Was my one spade bid legal? Stuttering Sam, Indianapolis

Answer: Yes. The laws state that a player may substitute a legal bid for an inadvertent bid provided he does so without pause.

Dear Mr. Corn: My partner opened a game demand two spades and I bid three hearts with this hand:

♥ 10 8 7 4 3 2
♦ J 7 5
♣ Q 9

We reached slam, down one. Should I have made a negative response? Seven Bagger, Cerritos, Calif.

Answer: I would suggest a negative response of two no trump. Seven card suits are hard to pass up, but a positive response should promise about eight high card points.

Dear Mr. Corn: Partner opens two no trump. Do I raise to three or bid three diamonds with?

♠ J 7 4
♥ J 4
♦ K 9 8 6 2
♣ 7 4 3

Diamond Mine
Baltimore

Answer: Raise to three no trump. Slam is out so why not play a nine trick no trump game rather than a minor suit game for 11 tricks?

The workshop

This isn't such a bad old world after all, once you get used to being nervous about everything. Of course, if you want to avoid the need for tranquilizers, then move outdoors.

There's nothing like a pleasant conversation, a good book or an afternoon of day-dreaming set to the soft background of rustling leaves and singing birds. These sounds induce tranquility, nature's best remedy.

It helps to enjoy the outdoors if we have comfortable and durable furniture. The patio lounge, shown here with singer Molly Bee, will flatter any outdoor living room. The wheels make it easy to follow the sun wherever it might be. A table between the two seats supports a colorful umbrella to give you shade on a hot day. And it's also handy for serving cool drinks, lunches or for playing cards and checkers.

The entire lounge is made of standard stock wood available at all lumber yards. The pads are inexpensive and may be purchased from your neighborhood dealer. The full-size pattern has lots of easy-to-follow illustrations and directions to make the building easy. You simply trace the pattern on wood, then saw it out and assemble ... very inexpensive when you do-it-yourself.

To obtain the full-size Patio Lounge Pattern No. 255, send $1.75 (includes postage and handling) by cash, check or money order to: Steve Ellingson, Long Beach Independent Press-Telegram Pattern Dept., P. O. Box 2383, Van Nuys, Ca. 91409.

CONGRESSMAN MARK W. HANNAFORD

CHEF OF THE WEEK

At home in House, if not kitchen

He has climbed two successful career ladders — one as a teacher — one as a legislator. Today's chef of the week, Mark W. Hannaford, was elected to the United States House of Representatives from the 34th Congressional District on Nov. 5, 1974.

In that position, he represents Long Beach, Lakewood and Western Orange County.

His current assignments include Committees on Banking, Currency and Housing and Veterans Affairs, Subcommittees on which he serves are Domestic Monetary, Political and Historic Preservation and Coinage. Also, Education and Training, Hospitals, Cemeteries and Burial Benefits.

Hannaford served for several years as a member of Lakewood's Planning Commission. But other dreams were nudging him so he entered the political arena in 1966 and was elected to the Lakewood City Council. He was reelected in 1970 and served two terms as mayor. In 1968, then Mayor Hannaford was elected a delegate to the Democratic National Convention.

BORN IN WOODROW, Colo., Hannaford was raised in the midwest graduating from Anderson High School in Indiana. In 1943, he enlisted in the Air Force and served on a bomber crew in the 5th Air Force in the South Pacific until 1946.

Hannaford's Air Force service delayed his higher education, but in 1950 he earned his bachelor's degree in political science from Ball State University. He then took several graduate courses at Long Beach

flanary

State University and was awarded his master's degree in political science from Ball State in 1956. As recipient of the John Jay Fellowship in 1961, he devoted a year to advanced graduate work in economics and political science at Yale University.

Hannaford moved to Southern California in 1953 and became a teacher at Marshall Junior High School. When Lakewood High opened in 1957, he was named department chairman in social studies. In 1966, he became a professor of political science at Long Beach City College and served in that capacity until his election to Congress.

The teaching profession is not unusual in his family for he and his five brothers and sisters all are teachers.

HE AND HIS WIFE, Sara, have three sons. Mark and Kim are graduates of Stanford University while Robert is a student at Long Beach City College. As this is being written, Sara is in Washington, D.C., so we are unable to contact her. One of Hannaford's close buddies, however, says, "Mark and Sara grew up in the same Indiana town and were childhood sweethearts."

The friend describes our chef as a "great reader and an excellent bridge player. He gives Sara the credit for his bridge abilities." Continuing, "While Hannaford is more of a spectator than a participant in sports, their sons all are fine athletes. Their dad has always encouraged them and always gives them moral support."

As for his cooking, he says, "He's really not an overwhelming cook himself. They have strong ties in Baja, California, where they have a home. He prefers to sit under a shade tree and consume Mexican type food."

Today our chef is busy barbecuing halibut.

BARBECUED HALIBUT

You can barbecue thick, boneless pieces of any firm-fleshed, lean white fish using this method.

Cut a 4-pound halibut fillet or other firm, white fish, into pieces about 1-inch wide, 2-inches long and 1-inch thick.

Combine:

- 1/2 cup soy sauce
- 1 cup dry white wine
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 2 cloves garlic (minced or mashed)
- 1 teaspoon powdered ginger
- 1/2 cup salad oil

Pour over fish pieces and marinate 4 hours. Pour off marinade and save. Sprinkle fish pieces generously with about 2 tablespoons fresh rosemary and about 6 tablespoons fresh chopped parsley. Skewer carefully or slip inside a hinged wire broiler and place on the grill over low coals. Cook until fish flakes when tested with a fork, about 10 to 15 minutes, basting occasionally with marinade.

In the meantime, saute 1 pound sliced fresh mushrooms in 1/2 cup butter; add remaining marinade, heat through, and pour over broiled fish. Makes 8 servings.

DEAR ABBY

'Proving love' proves otherwise

DEAR ABBY: I am a guy 18, who has been brought up in a good home with fine parents who tried to teach me right from wrong. I always have had high moral standards, but when I was young, my friends would tell me it was a bunch of puritanical nonsense for a boy to keep his virginity. As I grew older, I realized that a man has no right to expect the woman he marries to be a virgin if he isn't one, himself.

I recently found a column of yours that my mother said she was saving for my younger sister. It was dated Aug. 2, 1964.

Today, with so many people confusing love with lust, I think a lot of young people would benefit if you would run that letter again. — GOT IT TOGETHER.

DEAR GOT IT: With pleasure. Here it is:

"DEAR ABBY: I am 17. I copied something out of your book, 'Dear Teen-Ager,' and typed it up to carry with me. It has helped me a lot. Two of my girl friends did the same thing.

"You would be doing many girls a big favor if you would print it in your column. So many girls are having trouble in this line. Thank you, Abby. — SEVENTEEN.

DEAR SEVENTEEN: Here it is:

'Girls need to "prove their love" through illicit sex relations like a mouse needs a hat rack. Why not "prove your love" by sticking your head in the oven and turning on the gas? Or playing leapfrog in traffic? It's about as safe.

'Clear the cobwebs out of your head. Any fellow who asks you to "prove your love" is trying to take you for the biggest, most gullible fool that ever walked. That "proving" bit is one of the oldest and rottenest lies ever invented!

'Does he love you? It doesn't sound like it. Someone who loves you wants whatever is best for you. But now figure it out. He wants you to:

- 'Commit an immoral act...
- 'Surrender your virtue...
- 'Throw away your self-respect...
- 'Risk the loss of your precious reputation...
- 'And risk getting into trouble...

'Does that sound as though he wants what's best for you? This is the laugh of the century. He wants what's best for him: He wants a thrill he can brag about at his expense...Love? Who's kidding whom?

'A guy who loves a girl would sooner cut off his right arm than hurt her. In my opinion, this self-serving so-and-so has proved that he doesn't love you.

The predictable aftermath of "proof" of this kind always finds Don Juan tiring of his sport. That's when he drops you, picks up his line and goes casting elsewhere for bigger and equally silly fish.

'If he loves you, let him prove HIS love — by marching you to the ALTAR!'"

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago, my husband got himself a hairpiece that improves his appearance 100 per cent. The problem is that he wears it only about two-thirds of the time.

I think it's ridiculous for a man to wear a hairpiece all week to work and then to leave it off on the weekend. That's what Horace does. He knows that I want him to wear it all the time, so just to punish me for something, he refuses to wear it to an important function.

When Horace takes a mind to go without his hairpiece, no amount of begging, crying or pleading can make him change his mind.

Abby, how can I get him to wear his hairpiece all the time? — BITTER HALF

DEAR BITTER: You can't. But if you stopped making such a fuss when he refuses to wear it, he'll probably wear it more.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 68700, Los Angeles, Ca. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

of Massachusetts, Endicott Peabody), Mrs. Bernard Gimbel and Mrs. Arthur H. Sulzberger of the New York Times publishing family.

THE ACHIEVERS are gospel singer Marian Anderson, tennis star Hazel Hotchkiss Wightman, Clare Boothe Luce ("She could only spare me an hour when we started and it was I who had to leave first about three hours later"), sculptor Louise Nevelson and Lila Acheson Wallace, co-founder with her husband DeWitt, co-editor and co-owner of the Reader's Digest.

The Living Legends are designer Diana Vreeland, artist Peggy Guggenheim and America's "perennial princess" Alice Roosevelt Longworth. Of them, the author writes, "idealism may be fine for some women, but for these it certainly isn't enough. I happen to like a certain human style, which, to me, is best exemplified by (these women — who were unconventional before it was stylish)..."

Mrs. Roosevelt took several of the photos in the book with an Instamatic. "I had a more elaborate camera, but I never learned how to use it. Some of their photos weren't very recent, so I took my own."

She said she had a penchant for poetry during her days at Bennington College in Vermont. "Part of our education was having to work, so I worked gratis at the Museum of Modern Art and for pay at NBC when it was just taking off. Nobody knew anything. That was 1946. Everyone did everything."

Married five years to Roosevelt, the second youngest of FDR's children, she never knew her famous father-in-law. She said her husband is still interested in Democratic politics. He served as a member of Congress with John Kennedy and as Undersecretary of Commerce during Kennedy's presidency. Now, he confines his time to raising purebred cattle and handling family affairs through various commissions managing the Campobello and Hyde Park estates.

She gardens. "I've discovered a green-thumb. I not only like to grow the flowers, I like to pick them and do arrangements."

Mrs. Roosevelt also serves on the board for Project Hope, the Burlington House Awards Committee and Bonwit Teller's Advisory Committee.

HAROLD A. JONES SR.
Tradition wise, but ready for change

—Caricatures by GLEB RUBANOV

By VINT MADER
Pinch-hitting for Tedd Thomey

AT THE SAME OLD STAND in business bigger and better than ever since its second trial by fire is Jones Cafeteria and Dining Room, still featuring the delicious and varied menu that has so long been a byword in Long Beach.

Burned out twice in recent years, Harold A. Jones Sr. and his determined family of restaurateurs rebuilt each time and, since the second disaster, have expanded the landmark 120 E. Fifth St. location where Harold opened 46 years ago.

The table-service dining room now extends eastward all the way to the corner of Locust Avenue from the cafeteria-service section that has been the Jones tradition since 1929.

Disasters and expansion have not dimmed the quality of Jones cooking that downtown shoppers have enjoyed for daytime luncheon and dinners through the decades, ranging from large family parties to the quiet occupant of a table-for-one.

The long-established institution, closed Saturdays, still offers in the dining room its traditional choice of menu items a la carte or as full-dinner service.

For example, as the former, the roast leg of spring lamb with sage dressing is $4.25 — and that large delicious serving will satisfy on its own all but the most ravenous appetite. For only 40 cents more the tasty lamb expands to a dinner with wide choices among appetizers, salads and desserts.

A relatively new item, suited to a diet and cholesterol-conscious society is vegetable protein meat substitute imaginatively cooked with mushrooms and savory rice. That meal is only $2.85 a la carte and $3.25 as dinner.

"It's a very popular dish. We keep selling out of it regularly," commented Harold Jones, wise in the ways of changing tastes as well as the honored traditions.

DELIGHTS FROM THE SEA are justly renowned specialties at the painstaking Carr Brothers Restaurant, where chef Gus Riker — trained in the grand European tradition — is known for blowing his stack at restaurant-supply salesmen who try to peddle him foods that would inhibit his loving care for every detail of preparation.

Gus, whose culinary dedication stems from long apprenticeship in his native Germany, gives short shrift to those hawkers of the convenience food that has compromised the kitchens of many reputable restaurants with prepared or partially prepared frozen recipes.

Gus is perhaps even more insistent than owner Paul Carr himself for the boss's own watchword that "everything in the place is made from scratch."

Their basic insistence on the full creation of every menu item is not limited to Carr Brothers' famous clam chowder and other recipes for both salt and freshwater seafoods. It is equally applied to the companion offerings of steaks and other viands from the land.

Their chowder, made only in the original New England form, is served by cup, bowl or tureen for a mere 70 cents, $1.15 or $1.50. It is so rich and tempting that many of the midday crowd come to the restaurant at 3490 Long Beach Blvd. to lunch on chowder alone.

The proud "seafood selections" menu at Carr Brothers, which is open seven days, offers fried oysters for only $4.95, golden fried shrimp at $5.25, a shrimp scampi (gently sauteed in garlic butter with parsley and mushrooms) for $5.95.

Sauteed frog legs, a casserole masterpiece that proves chef Riker's great training in the continental cuisines, is a delight awaiting the sprinkle of juice from fresh lemon wedges to complement the nuance of garlic butter. Similarly only $5.95 and, like all other Carr entrees, including choice of salad or soup du jour and potato or rice.

In landward creations, Swiss steak — glorying in good simmering as much as a great chowder — leads the selections for just $4.50.

Down the line, the Carr-Riker proud steaks include a New York strip sirloin at $7.95 and the piece de resistance, the big filet mignon, comes on at $8.50. Of course, there is that sturdy standby of the roasting oven, prime rib, for only $7.95, and calves liver and onions sauteed a la Riker dedication goes for $5.25.

Consumer voice heard on air fares

EDITOR'S NOTE: One of the two airlines discussed in this article has overcome the first obstacle to inaugurating its proposed service. The U.S. Justice Department ruled last week that the Civil Aeronautics Board may legally allow World Airways to begin cut-rate scheduled flights between U.S. cities on the east and west coast.

The other carrier, Laker Airways encountered a surprise setback from the British government, which announced it intends to cancel the license it previously approved for low-cost Skytrain DC10 service across the Atlantic. Freddie Laker, the London-based airline's chairman, said he will fight the ruling.

If you can fly Susan and Connie, why not Ed and Fred? After all, Ed and Fred want to move their airlines for you at a lower price than most of the other candidates.

The answer is that so far they haven't been liberated. Ed Daly and his World Airways want to fly passengers between New York and the Washington-Baltimore area on the East Coast and Los Angeles and the San Francisco Bay area on the West Coast for $89 plus tax one way.

Freddie Laker and Laker Airways want to carry travelers between New York and London for $135 one way. The Civil Aeronautics Board is the outfit that transcontinental service was made in 1967 and dismissed six and one-half years later as "stale."

For some strange reason, critics have begun to question a system that moves in such mysterious and sluggish ways. Should you as a consumer do so as well, and if you do where is it likely to get you?

WELL, GOOD NEWS: If you feel strongly on the subject of air fares in any respect, never was there a better time to say so. An overhaul of the whole system of government regulation is on the horizon, and one of the key issues is whether there should be price competition among carriers.

If there is, the forecast is for some bankruptcies, fewer flights to some cities, no flights to others and less in the way of on-ground and on-board services. There are dark hints as well of "unsafe" operations in terms of both equipment and financial responsibility.

Almost all of these claims are very much in dispute, but even if the foremost among them — ruinous competition on some routes, elimination of others, less service on most — came to be, would any passengers be seriously inconvenienced?

No doubt some would be, mainly those traveling because of emergencies. Some communities conceivably would be hurt as well, although service by new, perhaps smaller airlines or direct subsidization would certainly affect the degree.

At the same time, it's hard for the critics to see why all passengers should continue to pay for the present overcapacity that's actually needed by, and benefits, few.

Naturally there are other voices that say we have in this country one of the best airline systems in the world, and we'd be blithering idiots to dismantle it. And because other carriers would match the proposals of World and Laker, a vote for Ed and Fred is classed as a first move in the dismantling direction.

The other carriers would play the match game even though they have higher costs and would lose money on each customer carried. In the long run, they say, so would World and Laker. And at some point, the dominoes would have to fall.

CONSIDERING THE complexity of the issues involved, it would seem that the easiest choice for consumers would be to keep quiet and take what's dished out. But the fact is that the public is not really being asked to sit as Solomon. The specific need, in the World Airlines case in particular, is for the CAB judges to know whether you feel fares are too high and have priced you out of the market.

Although any member of the public has a right to be heard at CAB hearings, the average person would find the process too complicated, too costly and too time-consuming. But for World Airways supporters, there's a handy proxy available. Aviation Consumers Action Project, a Nader offshoot, is a group that has lawyers, will travel.

ACAP (Box 19029, Washington, D.C. 20036) has chosen to become what's known as a "formal party" in the World Airways proceedings and is soliciting public opinion in favor of World's application. The opposition (mainly the airlines that already fly cross-country) has not yet asked for similar support, but would no doubt be pleased to hear some cheers for the status quo.

For the price of a carbon copy and a stamp, you can also make your feelings known directly to the CAB (Consumer Advocate's Office, Washington, D.C. 20428), your congressman, the Department of Transportation (secretary's office, 400 7th St., S.W., Washington, D.C. 20590), and the Office of Consumer Affairs, HEW (330 Independence Ave., S.W., Washington, D.C. 20201).

If you find the present fare system confusing if not incomprehensible, the "charter" and "discount" arrangements so baffling you're fearful of stepping up to a ticket counter, by all means mention that, too.

There are not all that many occasions when you can speak up and be heard with maximum effect, so when you've got one like this where the timing is right, you'd better grab it.

gets to say "yes" or "no" — and so far it hasn't said either.

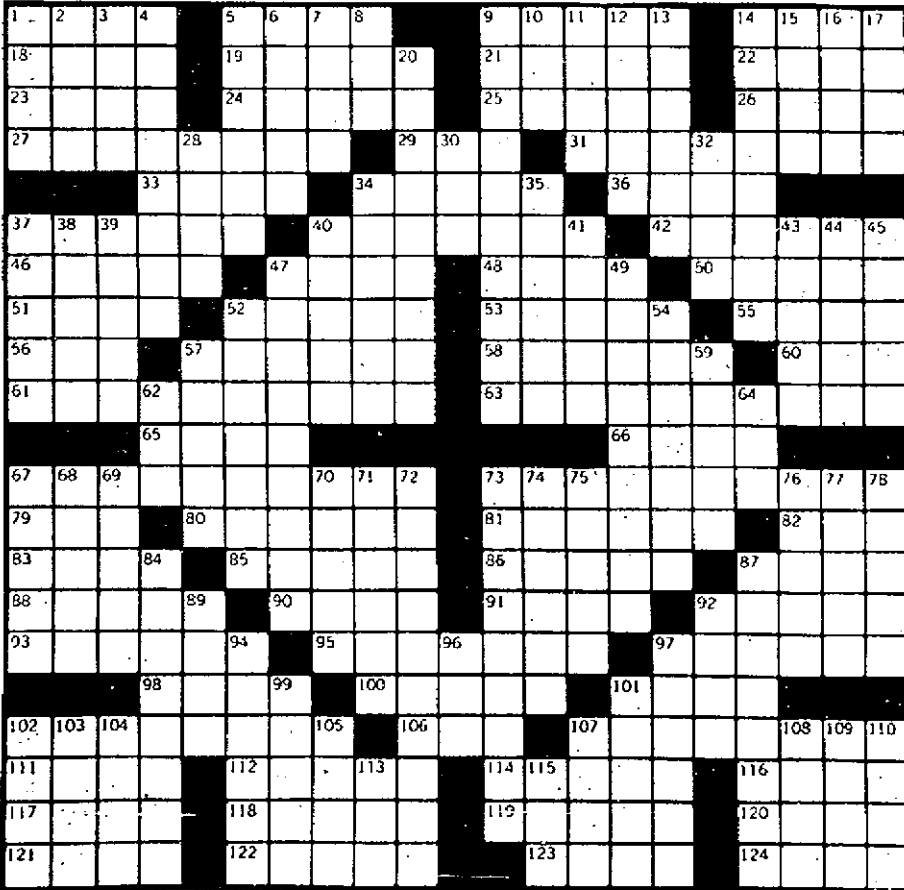

In Laker's case, the White House must make the final decision because an international route is involved. Waiting for it and the CAB to move, Laker has passed two and one-half years a lot more quietly than he had in mind.

Daly has been in line only since April — but that's with his second bid. His first proposal for

Following good weather in Spain

Madrid, Spain

"Botin's — where Hemingway set the last scene in 'The Sun Also Rises' — is celebrating its 250th year of serving roast suckling pig and lamb. Thus topping our bicentennial by 50 years." A friend sends me the anniversary menu.

Botin's is at the bottom of the ancient Plaza

"... when will we find good weather in Spain?"

You have to follow the weather. In summer it's hot as a Sheriff's pistol in Madrid. In winter as chill as a pawnbroker's eye.

The Atlantic coast is just right — 75 degrees daytime — in midsummer. But the south is unbearably hot. There are towns in La Mancha that move of-eight. The water is the color of washed blue jeans.

Square little framework mussel boats are fixed on the surface. And the gray stone villages are warmed by drying mahogany-colored sardine nets.

There's a fort on the hill and traces of the old medieval town.

Mayor. Buildings lean over a lantern-lit street and the night carries a whiff of wine and garlic.

When August grew too hot, I drove north to where the gray cordillera rises above the Bay of Biscay — the Mare Cantabricus on Roman maps. It's cool country. The ancient kingdom of Asturias that never fell to the Moors.

The road following the sea was known as "the French road." Along it for 600 years marched the European pilgrims, singing hymns and praying for the destruction of the infidel Moors.

The goal was the holy tomb of St. James at Compostela. It was discovered in year 811 by angelic directions. Pilgrims were entitled forever to wear the scallop shell insignia.

Best all round weather is October, north or south. It's grand in Madrid. The sun puts a mist of gold in the air.

In mid winter, it's freezing cold. The only warm place in Spain then is on the southern Costa del Sol around Malaga.

"I paint and my husband writes. We have money enough for two months abroad..."

You can still do well in Spain and Portugal IF you stay out of the major cities. For a sunny and cool summer, there's the town of Vigo, Spain.

It's just north of the Portuguese border. Not too big, not too small. The deep bay sparkles with instant silver pieces-

NOSEY GEORGE AT WILDLIFE SAFARI

Another sanctuary for wild animals

By JIM REDPATH

Wildlife Safari, one of the northernmost exotic animal parks on the Pacific Coast, is spread over 600 acres of rolling hills in western Oregon, a setting which closely resembles the African and Asian habitats of its denizens.

The park is near Winston, four miles off Interstate 5 and a few miles south of Roseburg.

Latest imports to the animal population are four rare white rhinos recently

George, comparable in human terms to 90 years of age, went on a dirty old man rampage last winter during the mating season. Now he simply stands beside the road, chewing his cud and poking his ugly nose against the windows of passing autos.

OTHER CHARACTERS include the ostriches, who also investigate the occupants of each car instead of sticking their heads in the sand. Maybe they're looking for long-lost cousins.

Newest innovation at the park is the tent camp, called Kumako Miti (gather together among the trees). For a nominal fee, the tourist can sleep here in a tent on a cot with sleeping bag and hear the jungle animals making their nocturnal noises.

It is eerie to wake before dawn to the roaring of lions. Of course, they are safely caged for the night, but you can't help wonder "what if?"

In the morning you are again awakened by park attendants with a pan of warm water and hot tea and toast. This is the traditional life on a genuine safari. No hot showers or fancy flush toilets.

As in most wild animal parks, you bring your own means of transportation. Safe rental vehicles are available if you happen to arrive in a convertible.

WE WERE fortunate in making our visit in a motor home. Although there were eight of us in the coach, we had plenty of room to move about to view the animals on either side. Also the additional elevation gave us an advantage in using cameras through the picture windows.

While Wildlife Safari is not within weekend driving distance, it makes an easy second-afternoon-out stopover from the Southland, breaking the monotony of freeway travel.

In the park, slow to a crawl or stop and let the other cars pass so you won't miss the parts that are of most interest to you.

When you visit, give our regards to George.

GAL-IVANTING

Town in search of a movie

An Italian once wrote a play about six characters in search of an author. I'd like to do one about a setting in search of a plot.

The story line could be a Western. The mellow patina of old paint on wood sidings, the overhanging roofs that shade wooden walks, even a backdrop of sunburned mountains butting against Financed by Rothschild, the town included a company store, an electric plant, a water system, and two residential areas — one on the bluff for officials and another in the central district for mine workers.

Once launched on such a grand scale, the company had to keep going even when the deceptive boleite owner. It was unloaded at Santa Rosalia by mistake.

Eiffel would never have designed a metal church for Baja's hot climate, but its neat, unadorned walls embellished with only stained glass windows delighted the mine's sophisticated French engineers. They screwed together its walls and presto — Santa Rosalia had a church!

Those who shrug off Santa Rosalia as a "factory town," however, are missing the drama. Along with its movie set main streets, its rollicking cantinas, a French restaurant and a very antique hotel, Santa Rosalia is endowed with a lost gold legend.

Around 1880, just before the French built the town, Santa Rosalia was a tiny fishing camp on a natural harbor conveniently located for fishing boats crossing from Guaymas. It was here that Nellie Cashman, a kind-hearted tavern keeper from Tombstone, Ariz., arrived with Mark A. Smith, who later became an Arizona senator, and a party of other prominent citizens.

They had all joined Nellie to stake out a claim on a placer gold site that she had learned about from an itinerant Mexican who had dumped a heap of nuggets on her bar.

After a harrowing journey via horseback and fishing boat to Santa Rosalia, they were told that the location of the placer gold was a secret known only to the local priest who used it to support his parish.

Private cars have been banned at the principal tourist sites in Kyoto, Japan, Pan American World Airways reports. Plans are also under way to extend the restriction to many of the nation's other historic and resort areas, including several of the more popular mountain vacation centers.

chopped off bluffs would fit the Wild West theme. But no 19th century town in the Far West ever boasted of a church designed by the world's most avant garde architect.

The drama takes place in Santa Rosalia, a remote mining town located midway down the Mexican Baja peninsula on the Gulf of California. From its very conception, an element of intrigue was evident.

In 1881, while U.S. President Garfield was rumored to be scheming to obtain Lower California as an asylum for warlike Apaches, Mexican officials were quietly interposing a buffer by suggesting to the French Rothschilds bankers that there was a promising spot in Baja in which to sink French capital.

THE SPOT was Santa Rosalia. The promise was a deposit of boleite, a new mineral discovered by a French scientist. The Mexican revelation immediately ignited a frenzy of investment activity from France.

Within months, a first class town sprang up — not built of rock, which was plentiful, but constructed of wood siding shipped by freighters to Santa Rosalia's new port.

deposit turned out to be a mere pocket. Fortunately for Rothschild, abundant high grade copper in the area made the project still profitable and La Compania del Boleo managed to maintain a payroll for 3,000 men for more than 50 years.

As great a surprise to the French as the boleite vein that disappeared was a church that one day miraculously appeared.

This, too, resulted from a miscalculation.

The church was an innovative prefabricated metal model designed for the 1889 World's Fair in Paris. Its architect was the great Eiffel who designed the tower which remained in Paris as a landmark.

After the fair closed, the church was dismantled and shipped aboard a freighter bound for a new

No high rise

Bali is one of the world's fastest-growing resort areas, but the government is determined to keep the Indonesian island unspoiled. One step has been to limit the height of all new hotels to less than that of surrounding palm trees, according to Pan American World Airways.

Halfway through your trip you'll be taken to Bali where you'll not only be introduced to the island's culture, but to its incredibly beautiful beaches.

You'll visit Singapore, Intramuros, and in Macao, you'll be able to gamble round the clock.

In Hong Kong, you'll be taken to the Tiger Balm Gardens with its great white pagoda, Victoria Peak, Kowloon, the walled village of Kam Tin, and you'll of course be given plenty of time throughout to shop for duty-free bargains and the East's luxurious silks, spices, ivory, and jade. # WALTER SCOTT'S Personality Parade

Want the facts? Want to learn the truth about prominent personalities? Want informed opinion? Write Walter Scott, Parade, 733 3rd Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Your full name will be used unless otherwise requested. Volume of mail received makes personal replies impossible.

Q. I understand that John Mitchell, Attorney General under Richard Nixon, is writing a book highlighting his sex life under the title, "Everything You Ever Wanted To Know About Municipal Bonds." Is this true?—G.L., Washington, D.C.

A. Mr. Mitchell has been talking to several publishers about writing an autobiography of sorts, but he reportedly is not willing to discuss his role in the Watergate scandal and therefore to date has had no acceptances. Although he has been disbarred in New York State, Mitchell is certainly qualified to write a book on municipal bonds. He was an expert on that subject.

Q. I have read in many publications that Gerald Ford is the most conservative President we have had in this country since Calvin Coolidge or Herbert Hoover. Is that correct?—Frank Birch, N. Miami, Fla.

A. On the basis of Mr. Ford's voting record as a Congressman and his record as President that would seem to be a reasonable judgment.

HILLARD ELKINS AND WIFE CLAIRE BLOOM

Q. Actor Anthony Quinn—is he divorcing his wife to marry actress Claire Bloom, with whom he starred in the flop play, "Red Devil Battery Sign"?—Lois Crankshaw, Boston.

A. Tennessee Williams' play, "Red Devil Battery Sign," was a failure. The romance, however, between its stars, Anthony Quinn and Claire Bloom, was not. She reportedly plans to divorce her husband producer Hillard Elkins, and Quinn has sent his wife, Yolanda, back to Rome. Mrs. Quinn flew into Boston when she heard rumors her husband was wandering.

HOWARD HUGHES

CLIFFORD IRVING

Q. Is it true that the so-called "autobiography" of Howard Hughes by Clifford Irving has been published throughout Spain? If so, is it listed as fiction or non-fiction?—Nathan Rosen, Hempstead, N.Y.

A. Clifford Irving's book has been published in Spain by Sedmay Publishing with the title, "Autobiographia de Howard Hughes." The prefix "auto," is "x-ed" out in red and the book is subtitled "a fiction-novel."

Q. Some questions please about Ronald Reagan, former Governor of California. Who writes his syndicated newspaper columns and radio programs? Does his daughter Patti plan to marry Bernie Leadon, the country-rock banjoist? Has Patti Reagan gone hippie, and are the Reagans going daffy because of that?—F.L., Sacramento, Cal.

A. The man responsible for Governor Reagan's syndicated columns and radio programs is Peter Hannaford, one of his public relations advisers. "It's my responsibility," says Hannaford, "to see that those chores are done." Whether Hannaford writes the material himself or assigns it to others he declines to say. Patti Reagan, 21, has been spotted in London's Inn on the Park with bearded Bernie Leadon, the banjoist in the country-rock group The Eagles, a musical outfit which many describe as "clearly anti-establishment." According to friends of the Reagans, Governor and Mrs. Reagan are not "overwhelmingly happy" about Patti's choice of associates. Patti hopes to become a singer.

Q. The sins of the CIA—is it not fitting and right that these should accrue to the various Presidents of the U.S. under whose authorization the CIA performed acts both legal and illegal?—G. K. K., Falls Church, Va.

A. It is fitting and right. The CIA did not and does not perform major operations without the approval of the President of the U.S.

Q. Is it a fact that Henry Wynberg, Elizabeth Taylor's sweetheart, is wanted in Los Angeles by the authorities? What do they want him for?—Beatrice Cohen, Ventura, Cal.

A. Some weeks ago a warrant was issued for Wynberg's arrest because he failed to appear for a hearing on debts he allegedly incurred. A Chicago company claims that Wynberg has defaulted on payments in connection with car orders.

Q. Aristotle Onassis—how old was he when he died—69 or 74, and why did he use different ages?—Alice Berger, Staten Island, N.Y.

A. Onassis was 69 when he died. He used various ages to avoid military service, either in Greece or Argentina. That at least is the explanation he once gave to his first sweetheart, Ingeborg Dedichen.

Q. Who said that if you laid all the world's economies end to end they still wouldn't reach a conclusion?—Matty Richardson, Asbury Park, N.J.

A. The quotation is from George Bernard Shaw.

OLGA DETERDING

Q. Who is Olga Deterding? Is she really the richest girl in the world?—Mrs. Anne Hudson, Philadelphia.

A. Olga Deterding, 46, is the daughter of the late Sir Henri Deterding, one of the founders of Royal Dutch Shell. On his death he left daughter Olga $60 million. Miss Deterding, over the years, has loved and traveled widely. Her home used to be in London, and she still owns one there, but she is a tax exile and spends more than six months each year away from England.

'Beacon Hill'—The American Version of 'Upstairs.'

by Lloyd Shearer

On Tuesday, Aug. 26th, two weeks before the 1975-76 television season gets underway, CBS-TV will begin its Beacon Hill series with a two-hour pilot.

Beacon Hill is the Americanized version of Upstairs, Downstairs, the highly successful British series which has been telecast several times in this country via the Public Broadcasting Service.

Depicting life in London between 1910 and 1914, Upstairs, Downstairs became the rage of British TV in 1971 and subsequently won several Emmys in Hollywood. Alistair Cooke provided the informative introductions and the entertaining epilogues.

To reflect the end of the Edwardian era in England, the Bellamy family of Upstairs, Downstairs lived in an elegant house in London's Belgravia; they personified the typical upper-class English family of the early 1900's. Their downstairs domestics typified the British servant class whose members shared in the family's soap-opera-type trials and prejudices and adventures.

In Beacon Hill, instead of the Bellamy family of Eaton Place, we have the Lassiter family of Boston and Newport.

Beacon Hill is set in the early 1920's, and one of its opening episodes deals with those last alcoholic hours just before Prohibition became operative. Naturally, the downstairs staff at the Lassiters gets "smashed."

Boston householder

The head-of-the-house in Beacon Hill is Benjamin Lassiter, a first-generation rich Bostonian of Irish descent who is interested in politics. His wife, Mary Lassiter, is a sensitive woman of some refinement and background whose husband tries to shelter her from the more serious problems of the day.

The Lassiters have four daughters and one son, Robert, who lost an arm fighting in World War I. Fawn Lassiter, one of the daughters described by her father as the family's "free soul," lives alone, has an Italian lover who gives her singing lessons, and is very much the spirited, untamed, rebellious child. In many ways she resembles the Bellamy daughter, Elizabeth, in Upstairs, Downstairs. Just as Robert Lassiter is not unlike Captain James in the British original.

Where Beacon Hill differs most from Upstairs, Downstairs is in the cast of characters who portray servants. The Lassiters, like the Bellamys, have an English butler, Hacker instead of Hudson; only Hacker has an Irish wife, Emmeline, who raises canaries and at various times has brought 11 of her relatives over from Ireland to work in the Lassiter household as maids or handymen.

Mrs. Bridges replaced

The Lassiters also have a black cook named William Piper whereas the Bellamys boasted of their kindly, competent Mrs. Bridges.

Beryl Vertue, the beautiful, blue-eyed blonde who produced Beacon Hill for the Robert Stigwood Co., which in turn leased it to CBS for $200,000 an episode (including the right to one rerun) explains: "There are marked differences between the British Bellamys and the American Lassiters. In creating our characters, Sidney Carroll, the writer, and I made sure that they were very, very American, not carbon copies of the British characters in Upstairs, Downstairs.

"We also set the Lassiters into one of the most exciting and colorful periods in American history—the post-World War I era, the jazz age, the gangster age, the Harding scandal. It gives the writers a lot of authentic background to work with.

"What is most important in any successful TV series," Mrs. Vertue goes on (she has been married to Clem Vertue of the HEP Travel Agency in London for 23 years) "is the universality of the theme. I originated All in the Family and Sanford and Son in England; and they both were adapted for the American market by Norman Lear, and they were successful, because people everywhere could identify with their themes."

Class shows

The fundamental theme in both Beacon Hill and Upstairs, Downstairs, according to Beryl Vertue, is the difference between the rich and the poor, class-consciousness. As portrayed in Upstairs, Downstairs, the wealthy in England were a different breed from their counterparts in America, at least during the Edwardian era. They were traditional, conservative, immoral, stupid, lazy, infantile, limited, unimaginative; frivolous, patriotic, honorable, and brave with a truly commendable sense of duty in time of danger or war.

In that same period the British servant class was secure, industrious, respectful, loyal, fearful, especially of Characters from the popular British TV series, "Upstairs, Downstairs"; center are the Bellamys, father and son, and around them their staff of domestics. The series is being adapted for American television, as were "All in the Family" and "Sanford and Son."

Beryl Vertue, "Beacon Hill's" British producer, says its basic theme is the difference between the rich and poor.

Downstairs'

authority, and almost hopeless in upward mobility.

"Americans are quite different," Beryl Vertue points out. "They are rugged individualists, and I am quite aware of that, which is why Beacon Hill is going to be a good deal different from Upstairs, Downstairs."

Vertue's career

"Except for one English actor, George Rose who plays the butler, Hacker, in Beacon Hill, I am using all New York theatrical players, wonderful actors and actresses who are unknown to TV audiences. We are shooting all our episodes in New York, and I have actually plundered the world of New York theater. I've also been complimented on bringing live theater back to New York."

Frequently mistaken for pop-singer Petula Clark, Beryl Vertue started out in show business as a London secretary for two TV comedy writers, Alan Simpson and Ray Galton. They encouraged her, and subsequently she became a writers' agent. "Then I went into agenting film production (she is the executive producer of the current film Tommy, starring Ann-Margret) but I was an impatient agent, so I joined the Robert Stigwood production company, started to dream up TV ideas, and became a director of the corporate board. Today I am 'chief of worldwide film' and TV production for the organization. Not too bad for a girl who was born in Mitcham, a small village in Surrey."

American TV-watchers found Upstairs, Downstairs exotic and interesting without for the most part identifying themselves with any of the characters.

High hopes

Whether they will generate the same TV interest in a large family of Irish Bostonians with their retinue of servants (there are more than 20 regular characters in the series) remains to be seen. Beryl Vertue is aware that after Watergate, Nixon, Howard Hughes, Bebe Rebozo, and Martha Mitchell, the Lassiters of Beacon Hill may very well turn out to be small potatoes indeed.

"I only hope," she says, "that the American public will have enough patience to stay with the show for a few weeks and get to know the Lassiter family. They are not based on the Kennedys of Boston, which is a rumor now making the rounds. They are completely fictional, but I think they are fascinating, and hopefully the audience will find them so."

Upstairs in "Beacon Hill": The Lassiters, a Boston Irish family, and downstairs, their retinue of servants. Set in the exciting post-World War I era, "Beacon Hill's" characters are "very American," not copies of those in the British series.

Blessed Event Coming

Yoko Ono, who reconciled with ex-Beatle leader John Lennon after almost two years of separation, is pregnant—by Lennon. Yoko is 42. She and Lennon expect the baby in October. They have vacated their apartment in Greenwich Village and are living in Mick Jagger's Long Island mansion.

Yoko has miscarried twice in her relationship with Lennon. She lost one baby two months before their marriage in 1969 and another following their marriage. She has an 11-year-old daughter, Kyoko, by a previous marriage to film director Anthony Cox.

EVONNE GOOLAGONG AND HUSBAND ROGER CAWLEY

Fend

When tennis star Evonne Goolagong, 24, married metal broker Roger Cawley, 25, in England some weeks ago, she did not notify her coach-manager-legal guardian, Victor Edwards. So at least claims Edwards.

"I felt shocked and very upset," Edwards explains. "It was a shock for me to hear of her wedding in England from a journalist. I've heard nothing from Evonne. The least she could have done was to phone my wife. Evonne has lived with us as a daughter since she was 13, but you don't hold animosity towards a daughter. If you love, you forgive."

"I'd arranged for her wedding next January," Edwards goes on, "to be held in St. Mary's Cathedral in Sydney. I'd hoped to give her away."

Edwards, of course, is responsible for coaching Evonne to stardom. He took Evonne, part aborigine and one of eight children of a sheep-shearer in Bareil-lan, 350 miles west of Sydney, into his home 10 years ago. He reared her, made her one of his family, coached her to tennis stardom. Last year she earned more than $100,000.

Evonne, of course, has her side of the story to tell. "It's my life," she declares. "I'm going to do with it what I want. Victor knew very well that Roger and I were getting married. I told him. It was his decision not to come. We received lots of congratulatory telegrams, but not one from him. The Edwardses are like mother and father to me. They will be invited with my mother to be present when we get our marriage blessed in a church in Australia. I am sure that so long as I am happy, Victor will be happy, too. And I am happy."

Evonne, who met her husband at a tennis tournament five years ago, had to postpone her honeymoon for Wimbledon where she was seeded No. 4 and lost in the finals to Billie Jean King.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Sometime next month the Presidential Clemency Board expects to complete its remaining batch of Vietnam amnesty cases, and close up shop.

"All in all, the President's program allowing for 'earned reentry' has been a mixed success," says Charles E. Goodell, the former New York Senator who heads the board. "Only 23,000 applied, but I personally feel we have gone some distance towards easing the discord in this country caused by the Vietnam war."

Goodell may be right, but the fact remains that of the 124,000 men covered by President Ford's program, more than 100,000 have yet to ask for clemency. And the question now being raised, in Congress and elsewhere, is what should be done about it.

Should these men be told, "Too bad, it's too late"? Should the program of conditional, earned reentry (which calls for, among other things, up to 24 months of alternate, civilian service to the country) be reopened? Or, is a blanket, unconditional amnesty the answer?

To one mother, at least, the answer is painfully clear. Says Mrs. Virginia Jones, whose son is one of several thousand fugitives who are still in Canada: "I just can't accept that my son has to go on living in exile. He's been away for five years, and God knows, he's paid his price for refusing the draft. He should be allowed to come home to America now, with no questions asked—just like the Vietnamese refugees we let in so freely. I say there should be an unconditional amnesty."

Won't compromise

To others, any thought of unconditional amnesty—or any further clemency, for that matter—is anathema. Argues Cooper Holt, executive director of the Washington office of the Veterans of Foreign Wars: "Those guys committed a crime, and hell, they ought to pay for it. Look, 56,000 American men lost their lives in Vietnam. If we let off the hook any more of that bunch who refused to serve, we'll be making an utter mockery of those who died, and everything they stood for."

It was in an effort to strike some balance between these two positions, that President Ford last September instituted his clemency program—designed, in his words, to "reject amnesty, and reject revenge."

The plan, administered by a specially appointed Presidential Clemency Board, as well as the Justice and Defense Departments, was aimed at providing clemency for draft evaders (13,000), and deserters still officially at large (10,000); most of these men were either living abroad, principally in Canada, or underground in the U.S.

Will We Ever Solve the Amnesty Problem?

by George Michaelson

The Tiller family, two of whose sons fled the Vietnam draft and still live in Canada, moved from Dante, Va., to Levittown, N.Y., to escape harassment. Another of their sons, not shown in photo, decided to remain in Virginia.

It also included 101,000 veterans who had already been released from the military with punitive or undesirable discharges for having gone AWOL, deserted, or missed a troop movement; these latter were "above ground" in the U.S., where their bad discharges made it difficult for them to get jobs. (Not included in the President's program were some 5000 men who had taken up citizenship in other countries, and many thousands of veterans whose bad discharges were due to such offenses as refusal to obey orders, disrespect, disloyalty, etc.)

Plan outline

Basically, the plan offered a chance for "earned reentry" into the American mainstream. In exchange for signing a loyalty oath, and performing—if asked—up to 24 months of alternate service (in a hospital, church, school, etc.), the applicant would receive a Presidential pardon and, for deserters, the bad discharge would be upgraded to the new category of "clemency discharge."

On paper, the program may have been an excellent one. But what now becomes clear is that, at best, it has been a "mixed success." True, for some of the young men who had been living abroad or underground in the U.S., it was a welcome chance to go home again. Also, 300 men in military or civilian jails were set free.

However, for many others the "conditional" amnesty program seemed like a punishment, and they wanted no part of it. Says John Colhoun, a draft evader who has lived in Toronto since 1970: "If the Vietnam war was a mistake and the U.S. had no business being there, why should we have been made to come back like criminals, say we were wrong, and wind up being sentenced to some menial job?"

Thus, when the deadline for clemency applications passed at the end of March, fewer than 20 per cent of those eligible had actually applied. As for those who did apply, of the 60 per cent who were asked to do alternate service, most have refused to take the jobs offered them. (The government has been reluctant to prosecute these men, who, in effect, have dropped out of the program.)

With this the scorecard, then, almost a year after President Ford's optimistic proposal for "binding the nation's wounds," the question arises: Where do we go from here? If, as seems likely, the only way of bringing the resisters back into the American mainstream is now an unconditional amnesty, should the government declare one?

A knotty question, to be sure. For as opponents of such an amnesty point out, we never have had a blanket amnesty after any of our wars. So why should there be one now? Because—answer amnesty advocates—apart from the Civil War, never has a war produced more division in the country, and more resisters; and only a complete, no-strings amnesty can bring about reconciliation.

Whatever the validity of these arguments, the likelihood is that they will be brought up in the months ahead. "The amnesty battle is by no means over," states one government official. "There is still some skirmishing to take place in Washington and elsewhere, before it is finally settled—one way or the other."

Congressional action

Indeed, there are several bills in Congress that attempt to resolve the amnesty issue. One of them, sponsored by Sen. Gaylord Nelson (D., Wis.) and entitled "Clemency Board Reorganization Act of 1975," seeks to reopen—with no cut-off date—the President's program; as such, it is a far cry from unconditional amnesty.

Two other bills, however, introduced by Sen. Philip Hart (D., Mich.) and Rep. Bella Abzug (D., N.Y.), do in fact provide blanket amnesty for all those covered in the President's program. The Abzug bill would also include many men that the program excluded.

What the outcome of all this will be nobody is willing to predict. But if and when the emotion-charged amnesty debate is renewed, the voices of the resisters, as well as those of the boys who served in Nam, will again need to be heard.

THE YOUNG MEN SPEAK

I. Mark Tiller — 26-year-old draft evader, living in Toronto since 1968:

I was opposed to the Vietnam war right from the beginning—in part because we had no business being there, and in part because I am basically a pacifist. But where I come from, a small town in rural Virginia, they weren't about to listen to my application for conscientious-objector status.

For me, it's probably been easier than for most. My brother John, also a draft resister, is up here and I've married a Canadian.

The real people who have suffered are my parents. Because of John and me they were subjected to a lot of harassment—obscene phone calls, letters, and even an attempt on my father's life. But my parents have stuck with us through it all. Every Christmas they come up and visit with my six brothers and sisters.

At this point, though, I'd like to go back to America. My real roots are there, and probably always will be. I can't see ever getting used to being an expatriate.

But the way I feel—and almost all the others up here feel the same way—if we had gone back under the clemency program, it would be admitting we were wrong. It would be saying we committed a crime, and we deserve to be punished. It would be going back on everything we believe jobs with those who didn't serve or deserted.

At this point, I feel the country ought to say to those guys: "You let us down, and now we're going to let you down." In fact, unless they are willing to serve in the military like the rest of us did, I'd tell them to forget it: they don't deserve to live in America.

III. Bernard Wilson—27-year-old Navy deserter, currently doing alternate service in a Virginia hospital:

Why did I decide to do alternate service? Because, since 1969 when I deserted, I had been living underground with a false name. I hadn't seen my parents or my friends for six years. The clemency program was a chance to be me again.

Still, I can't say I regret what I did. I was training to be a Navy medic back in '69, and all you saw in the training hospital were these guys back from Nam—missing arms and legs—

Plan outline

Basically, the plan offered a chance for "earned reentry" into the American mainstream. In exchange for signing a loyalty oath, and performing—if asked—up to 24 months of alternate service (in a hospital, church, school, etc.), the applicant would receive a Presidential pardon and, for deserters, the bad discharge would be upgraded to the new category of "clemency discharge."

On paper, the program may have been an excellent one. But what now becomes clear is that, at best, it has been a "mixed success." True, for some of the young men who had been living abroad or underground in the U.S., it was a welcome chance to go home again. Also, 300 men in military or civilian jails were set free.

However, for many others the "conditional" amnesty program seemed like a punishment, and they wanted no part of it. Says John Colhoun, a draft evader who has lived in Toronto since 1970: "If the Vietnam war was a mistake and the U.S. had no business being there, why should we have been made to come back like criminals, say we were wrong, and wind up being sentenced to some menial job?"

Thus, when the deadline for clemency applications passed at the end of March, fewer than 20 per cent of those eligible had actually applied. As for those who did apply, of the 60 per cent who were asked to do alternate service, most have refused to take the jobs offered them. (The government has been reluctant to prosecute these men, who, in effect, have dropped out of the program.)

With this the scorecard, then, almost a year after President Ford's optimistic proposal for "binding the nation's wounds," the question arises: Where do we go from here? If, as seems likely, the only way of bringing the resisters back into the American mainstream is now an unconditional amnesty, should the government declare one?

A knotty question, to be sure. For as opponents of such an amnesty point out, we never have had a blanket amnesty after any of our wars. So why should there be one now? Because—answer amnesty advocates—apart from the Civil War, never has a war produced more division in the country, and more resisters; and only a complete, no-strings amnesty can bring about reconciliation.

Whatever the validity of these arguments, the likelihood is that they will be brought up in the months ahead. "The amnesty battle is by no means over," states one government official. "There is still some skirmishing to take place in Washington and elsewhere, before it is finally settled—one way or the other."

Congressional action

Indeed, there are several bills in Congress that attempt to resolve the amnesty issue. One of them, sponsored by Sen. Gaylord Nelson (D., Wis.) and entitled "Clemency Board Reorganization Act of 1975," seeks to reopen—with no cut-off date—the President's program; as such, it is a far cry from unconditional amnesty.

Two other bills, however, introduced by Sen. Philip Hart (D., Mich.) and Rep. Bella Abzug (D., N.Y.), do in fact provide blanket amnesty for all those covered in the President's program. The Abzug bill would also include many men that the program excluded.

What the outcome of all this will be nobody is willing to predict. But if and when the emotion-charged amnesty debate is renewed, the voices of the resisters, as well as those of the boys who served in Nam, will again need to be heard.

THE YOUNG MEN SPEAK

I. Mark Tiller — 26-year-old draft evader, living in Toronto since 1968:

I was opposed to the Vietnam war right from the beginning—in part because we had no business being there, and in part because I am basically a pacifist. But where I come from, a small town in rural Virginia, they weren't about to listen to my application for conscientious-objector status.

For me, it's probably been easier than for most. My brother John, also a draft resister, is up here and I've married a Canadian.

The real people who have suffered are my parents. Because of John and me they were subjected to a lot of harassment—obscene phone calls, letters, and even an attempt on my father's life. But my parents have stuck with us through it all. Every Christmas they come up and visit with my six brothers and sisters.

At this point, though, I'd like to go back to America. My real roots are there, and probably always will be. I can't see ever getting used to being an expatriate.

But the way I feel—and almost all the others up here feel the same way—if we had gone back under the clemency program, it would be admitting we were wrong. It would be saying we committed a crime, and we deserve to be punished. It would be going back on everything we believe in and fought for, and I'm just not ready to do that.

II. Brad Fountain — 27-year-old former Marine corporal who served in Vietnam in 1968-69:

I was 19 when I was sent to Nam as an infantryman. At the time I couldn't have cured less about politics, but I figured every man has an obligation to serve his country.

As soon as I got off the ship, I was in combat. And that's the way it stayed almost the whole time I was there—10 1/2 months constantly under fire. Words can't describe what that's like. You see your buddies get blown apart, and maybe if you're one of the lucky ones, you survive it. Me, I got wounded twice, in the leg and the stomach. Finally they decided to send me home.

It was a rotten war, and I tell you frankly, I think it was probably a mistake for the U.S. to be there. But if you ask me what should be done about the guys who refused to serve, I say it would be a bigger mistake if they were let off scot-free.

While many of them were up in Canada or Sweden having a good time, we were going through hell in Nam. And what did we come home to? No victory parades, no nothing. All there has been for many of us is unemployment, and I just can't see why we should be asked now to compete for jobs with those who didn't serve or deserted.

At this point, I feel the country ought to say to those guys: "You let us down, and now we're going to let you down." In fact, unless they are willing to serve in the military like the rest of us did, I'd tell them to forget it: they don't deserve to live in America.

III. Bernard Wil-son—27-year-old Navy deserter, currently doing alternate service in a Virginia hospital:

Why did I decide to do alternate service? Because, since 1969 when I deserted, I had been living underground with a false name. I hadn't seen my parents or my friends for six years. The clemency program was a chance to be me again.

Still, I can't say I regret what I did. I was training to be a Navy medic back in '69, and all you saw in the training hospital were these guys back from Nam—missing arms and legs, burnt, some complete vegetables. Many hadn't understood why they were over there—and neither did I. I decided I wanted no part of the war. The only way out, I figured, was to desert.

It may sound strange, but I love this country and I didn't want to leave it, for fear, maybe, of losing it altogether. So I chose the name Steve Price, took out a Social Security card where I was in Ohio, and began working odd jobs. Even my wife, whom I met there, for the first year or so only knew me by my false name; though she did know I was a deserter.

Facing the family

As for my parents, I never did tell them where I was. My father works in the Pentagon, and I was afraid of telling him. And actually, that has been the hardest thing so far about coming back: facing my parents. My job as a hospital orderly hasn't exactly been a pleasure, but the real tough thing is facing my family. I know I hurt them awfully bad.

And really, they are the reason I've decided to stay on with the alternate service program. I could quit tomorrow and all I would lose is my "clemency discharge," which frankly isn't worth anything as far as finding a job is concerned. Yet, I feel I have some obligation to make my parents comfortable. As for myself, well, I did what I had to back in 1969. I can't say I feel overjoyed about the whole experience, but after all, what guy my age feels happy about what he did during the Vietnam war?

Grass Seed Is For The Birds! Zoysia Saves Time, Work, Money

SPECIAL HOT WEATHER OFFER! ORDER NOW AND GET UP TO 200 PLUGS FREE!

By Mike Sanfiv
Agronomist

Every year I see people pour more and more money into their lawns. They dig, fertilize and lime. They rake it all in. They scatter their seed and roll and water it.

Birds love it! Seeds which aren't washed away by rain give them a feast. But some seed grows, and soon it's time to weed, water and mow, mow... until summer comes to burn the lawn into hay, or crabgrass and diseases infest it.

That's what happens to ordinary grass, but not to Zoysia.

"MOWED IT 2 TIMES," WRITES WOMAN

For example, Mrs. M. R. Mitter writes me how her lawn "... is the envy of all who see it. When everybody's lawns around here are brown from drought ours just stays as green as ever. I've never watered it, only when I put the plugs in... Last summer we had it mowed (2) times. Another thing, we never have to pull any weeds—it's just wonderful!"

And from Iowa came word that the state's largest Men's Garden Club picked a Zoysia lawn as the "top lawn"—nearly perfect—in its area. Yet this lawn had been watered only once all summer up to August!

These represent but 2 of thousands of happy Zoysia owners. Their experiences show that you, too, can have a lawn that stays green and beautiful thru blistering heat, water bans—even drought!

Cuts Your Work, Saves You Money

Your deep-rooted, established Amazoy lawn saves you time and money in many ways. It never needs replacement... ends re-seeding forever. Fertilizing and watering (water costs money, too) are rarely if ever needed. It ends the need for crabgrass killers permanently. It cuts pushing a noisy mower in the blistering sun by 2/3.

CHOKES OUT CRABGRASS

Thick rich, luxurious Amazoy grows into a carpet of grass that chokes out crabgrass and weeds all summer long. It will NOT winter kill. Goes off its green color after killing frost, regains fresh new beauty every Spring—a true perennial!

For Slopes, Play Areas, Bare Spots

If slopes are a problem, just plug in Amazoy. When established, it will end erosion—also plug it into hard-to-cover spots, play-worn areas, etc.

YOUR OWN SUPPLY OF PLUG TRANSPLANTS

Your established turf provides you with Zoysia plugs for other areas as you may desire.

WEAR RESISTANT

Your Amazoy lawn takes such wear as cook-outs, lawn parties, lawn furniture, etc. Grows so thick you could play football on it and not get your feet muddy. Even if children play on it, they won't hurt it—or themselves.

NO SEED, NO SOD!

Do not mistake Amazoy pre-cut plugs for sod or seed of any type of grass. There's no seed that produces winter-hardy Meyer Zoysia. Sod of ordinary grass carries with it the same problems as seed—such as weed, diseases, frequent mowing, burning out, etc.

Order now for Bonus Plugs and immediate delivery for fullest growing season. Orders are shipped the same day taken from soil, shipping charge collect via most convenient means.

Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass was perfected by U.S. Government, released in co-operation with U.S. Golf Assoc. as a superior grass.

NO NEED TO RIP OUT PRESENT GRASS

Now's the time to order your Zoysia plugs—to get started on a lawn that will choke out crabgrass and weeds all summer long and year after year.

Plug it into an entire lawn or limited "problem areas." Plug it into poor soil, "builder's soil," clay or sandy soils—even salty, beach areas, and I guarantee it to grow!

PLUG AMAZOY INTO OLD LAWN, NEW GROUND OR NURSERY AREA

Just set Amazoy plugs into holes in ground like a cork in a bottle. Plant 1 foot apart, checkerboard style. Every 2 1/2 inch plug is No. 1 quality, averaging a full 2 oz. per plug!

When planted in existing lawn areas plugs will spread to drive out old, unwanted growth, including weeds. Easy planting instructions with order.

FREE PATENTED STEP ON PLUGGER, SENT FREE WITH LARGER ORDERS—600 PLUGS OR MORE.

A growth-producing 2-way plugger that saves bending, time, work. Cuts away competing growth at same time it digs holes for plugs. Invaluable for transplanting. Rugged yet so light a woman can use it.

MY FAVORITE jokes

by JOEY RUSSELL

EDITOR'S NOTE: Aside from his nightclub act, Joey Russell is Colonel Clown on his 18-year weekly kiddie show on local Connecticut TV. He is also a director of the Orange National Bank in Connecticut.

Russell has played top clubs and is a popular after-dinner speaker.

Here are some of his favorite jokes:

I have a neighbor who received a pair of water skis for Christmas. He's been going nutty for the past seven months looking for a lake with a slope.

A teacher asked the class to name some of the benefits of the automotive age. A boy spoke up: "Well, it stopped horse-stealing."

My son, who is in college, observes that colleges and insane asylums are both mental institutions in a way. But a person has to show some improvement to graduate from an asylum.

The cows were grazing alongside a highway. Suddenly they looked up and there, passing by, was a mammoth tank truck carrying milk, and emblazoned on its side was the sign: "Pasteurized, homogenized, standardized, Vitamin A, C, and D added." One cow turned to the other and said: "Makes you feel sort of inadequate, doesn't it?"

On a job application blank was the question, "Have you ever been arrested?" The applicant put down, "NO."

The next question was "WHY"—(meant for those who had been arrested). Not realizing this, the applicant put down, "Never been caught."

A one-armed man went into a barber-shop for a shave. The barber, in the course of his work, knicked and cut the customer six times. After the ordeal was all over, the barber looked at him and asked, "Haven't I shaved you before?" "No," said the 'shavee,' "I lost my arm in the war."

American tourists were being escorted through a British castle.

"This place," the guide said, "is 700 years old. Not a stone has been touched, nothing altered, nothing replaced."

"Well," remarked one woman, "they must have my landlord."

And my aunt watched the Godfather on TV. After 10 minutes she realized she was watching a movie. Up to then she thought it was the evening news.

A drunk at a busy intersection stared at the "Walk" sign, and indignantly yelled, "What's a matter, baby? Afraid to pitch to me?"

Two golfers talking: "Does your wife play golf?" "No, but she just can't give it up."

When the father saw his offspring's report card, he said, "Well, one good thing about this. With these horrible grades, I know for sure that you can't possibly be cheating."

AWKWARD ON POSITION

When President Nguyen Van Thieu ran the government of South Vietnam, a group of oil companies, among them Mobil, Skelly, Shell and others, paid millions of dollars in bonuses for the right to drill for offshore oil.

Mobil, for example, in joint partnership with a Japanese and a French company, sank a well 120 miles southeast of Saigon. Shell Oil in partnership with Cities Service, towed their oil rig to Singapore one week before Saigon fell.

What happens now? Does Mobil lose the $16 million it spent on offshore exploration or will the Communist government of Vietnam simply take everything over with or without payment?

FARMERS MARKET Sen. John Tower, the mighty Republican mite from Wichita Falls, Tex., wants to simplify the food marketing procedures in this country. He would like to eliminate the middleman food costs which at the moment amount to 60 cents in every dollar. Tower wants food sold directly from small farmers to consumers.

He has introduced the Farmers Market Act of 1975, which calls for an appropriation of $5 million to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, to foster new techniques for the direct marketing of agricultural commodities.

Tower, who used to teach at Midwestern University in Wichita Falls, knows all about the marketing costs which stand between the farmer's income and the consumer. He knows that 60 per cent of the dollar a housewife spends on food never reaches the farmer, and he suggests that the middleman's "take" be divided between consumer and farmer.

How does one do that? The traditional way is to have farmers transport their own produce to markets where customers buy food off the tailgates. There are such farmers markets and such roadside fruit and vegetable stands all through the South where high-quality produce is sold at 50 per cent less than the super-market prices.

Tower wants the Agriculture Department to develop and innovate techniques for the direct marketing of food.

The department's Economic Research Service recently prepared a breakdown on the distribution of marketing costs in 1974. Out of each consumer food dollar, 7 per cent went for transportation, 4 per cent for business taxes, 3 per cent for advertising, 3 per cent for depreciation, 3 per cent for rent, 46 per cent for labor costs, 12 per cent for packaging, 6 per cent for corporate profits before taxes, 4 per cent for interest and repairs, and 12 per cent for such costs as utilities, fuel, promotion, and insurance.

The food industry is the largest business in the country. Last year the nationwide grocery bill came to $133.3 billion, which explains why large corporations have entered the agricultural market, squeezing out the small farmer. During the 1960's, 7000 corporations entered agricultural production, resulting in the elimination each week of 2000 family farms.

Economic concentration in the food industry is now so top-heavy that four firms control 90 per cent of the breakfast cereals, 75 per cent of the bread and prepared flour, 56 per cent of all processed meats, 65 per cent of sugar, 80 per cent of canned goods, while one company controls 90 per cent of the soups.

What Do Many Doctors Use When They Suffer Pain And Itch Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues?

Exclusive formula gives prompt, temporary relief from such pain and itch in many cases. Helps shrink swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues due to inflammation.

News about a most effective medication comes from a recent survey of doctors. Asked what they, themselves, use to relieve such painful symptoms, many of the doctors reporting named one particular medication they either use themselves or in their office practice.

ROPER

GLENROY ADMITTED TO HONEYDEW THAT HE KILLED MY SISTER, STEVE. I SUPPOSE HE FELT SURE SHE WOULDN'T LIVE TO TESTIFY AGAINST HIM! THE RAT!

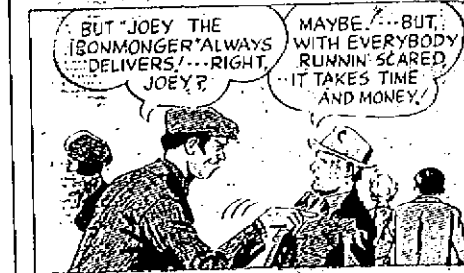

ON THE SUBJECT OF REUNIONS... NOT FAR AWAY ANOTHER ONE HAS TURNED INTO A DISMAL FAILURE. SO HE AND HIS WIFE AND THEIR PACK OF PRETTY PICKPOCKETS ARE HOLDING A REUNION AT THE POLICE STATION!

BIG DEAL! WE SHELLED OUT FOR LUNCH AND LIQUOR AND THE GUEST OF HONOR WALKS OUT. LIKE I SAID... I HEARD "SQUINT" WENT A LITTLE PSYCHO WHILE HE WAS IN STIR!

AT THAT MOMENT, ON A MID-CITY STREET CORNER. TIMES HAVE CHANGED, "SQUINT"... THE MARKET IS REAL TIGHT THESE DAYS.

BUT JOEY THE BORN MONGER ALWAYS DELIVERS... RIGHT, JOEY? MAYBE... BUT WITH EVERYBODY RUNNIN' SCARED IT TAKES TIME AND MONEY.

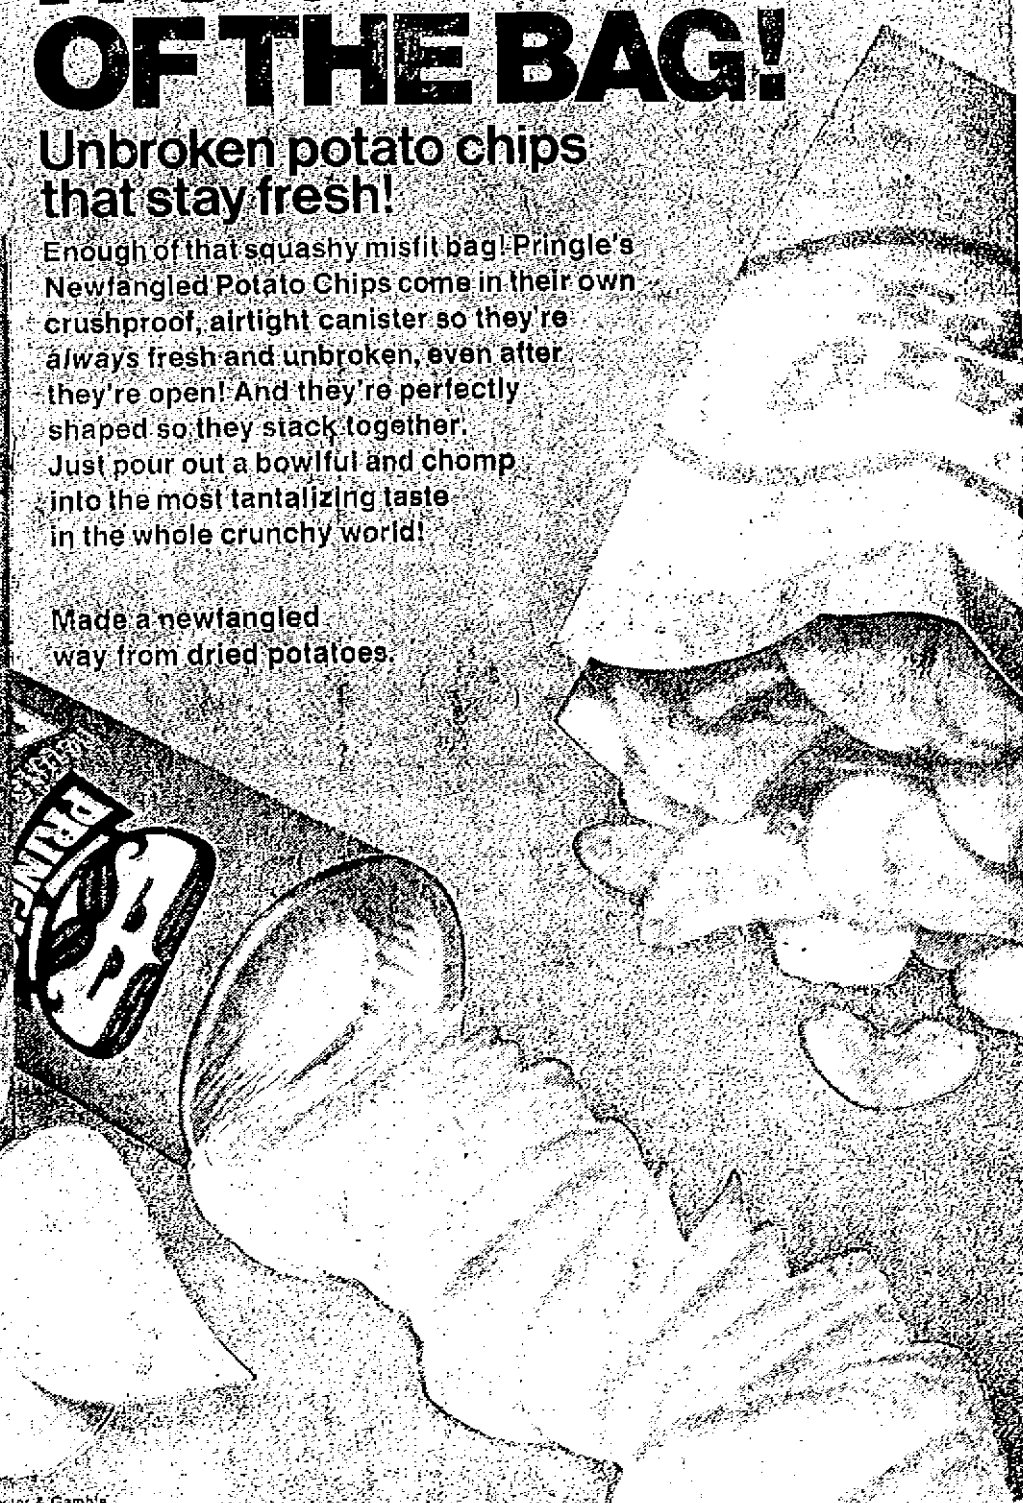

I'VE GOT BREAD ENOUGH, JOEY... BUT NOT MUCH TIME. I WANT CLEAN IRON... AND I WANT IT TOMORROW!

IT'S OUT OF THE BAG!

Unbroken potato chips that stay fresh!

Enough of that squashy misfit bag! Pringle's Newfangled Potato Chips come in their own crushproof, airtight canister so they're always fresh and unbroken, even after they're open! And they're perfectly shaped so they stack together. Just pour out a bowlful and chomp into the most tantalizing taste in the whole crunchy world!

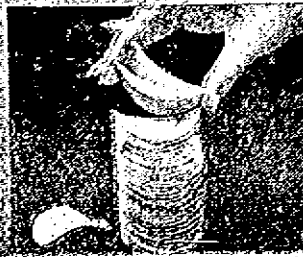

Made a newfangled way from dried potatoes.

Airtight pull-tab top and plastic lid assure lasting freshness.

Perfectly shaped, they're snugly stacked to reach you unbroken.
